They met in the rain, the women in their hoop skirts and the men in the blue woolens of the Civil War's Union soldiers.

Together, they paraded through Mt. Hope Cemetery and up a hill until they met the others convened for Sunday's rededication of the Soldiers' Monument Lot, where the bodies of 36 Civil War veterans are buried around a tall monument.

About 100 stood in the sprinkling - and then drizzling - rain for a ceremony that included prayers, Civil War tunes, wreath placements and a gun salute.

"It's very important to remember this and recall what these great men gave us," said state Rep. Rick Jones, R-Grand Ledge. "History has been preserved."

The rededication honoring the men and women who kept the nation united through their Civil War sacrifices happened after more than a year's worth of labor and improvements.

The projects involved local businesses, community members, the city of Lansing, Civil War groups, veterans groups and the Lansing/Sunfield Curtenius Guard Camp No. 17 of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

Sunday ceremony

Sunday's ceremony showed off their efforts, which included the replacement and realignment of headstones, painting a flagpole, power washing the monument, some turf work and the discovery of a grave.

Potterville resident George Bibbings snapped a picture of the performing fife and drum unit.

"I'm all for the United States of America and the recognition of the past and the present," said Bibbings, whose employer, Lansing Board of Water & Light, helped revamp the Soldiers' Monument Lot.

The lot, where improvements will continue, has a total of 48 graves. Nine World War I veterans, two Spanish-American War veterans and one World War II veteran also are buried there.

Learning history

There are about 300 to 400 Civil War veterans buried throughout the cemetery, said Jesse Lasorda, an independent researcher and Lansing resident involved in the work.

"It was wonderful," Charlotte resident Marcia Weiss said of Sunday's ceremony. "We tend to forget what our military does for us."

Andre Blair, 14, of Delta Township has traveled across the nation as a Civil War re-enactor.

In the process, he has learned much about fife and drum units and the experience of black soldiers.

"I enjoy learning about history," said Andre, a member of the fife and drum unit that performed Sunday.

"It helps out in school, too, when we're learning about the Civil War."
