Bronze tablet on U. S. Grant House, Michigan State Fairgrounds, Detroit. The house was originally located at 1369 East Fort Street, Detroit, where the plaque was dedicated Nov. 3, 1922, under the auspices of the Art Commission. Inscription:

Upon this house occupied by him as his home in the year 1849 the City of Detroit has placed this tablet commemorating Ulysses S. Grant, then Lieutenant, later General, United States Army and for two terms President of the U. S. of A. Savior of his country.

Bronze tablet on same building as above. Inscription:

This one-time residence of Ulysses Simpson Grant presented to the State of Michigan as a modest monument to a great man by the Michigan Mutual Liability Company 1930.

Equestrian statue of General Aloheus S. Williams at Central and Inselruhe avenues, Belle Isle, Detroit. The statue is the work of Henry Merwin Shrady. It depicts Williams sitting astride his horse studying a battle map during a storm. The bronze statue is mounted on a block of white granite. The statue was unveiled on October 15, 1921. Inscription:

Major General Alpheus Starkey Williams -- 1810-1878 -- Hero of two wars -- Judge -- Editor -- Postmaster -- Diplomat -- Member of Congress -- an untiring servant of the people -- an honor to the City of Detroit. The Michigan Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States and Citizens of Detroit have erected this tribute to the valor and abilities of Alpheus S. Williams, Lieut.-Colonel First Michigan Infantry Volunteers in the Nar with Mexico. Brig.-General and Brevet-Major-General United States Volunteers in the Civil War.

Historic Ulysses S. Grant home moving from fairgrounds to Eastern Market Detroit — A former home of Ulysses S. Grant, the leader of Civil War Union forces who became the 18th U.S. president, is moving to Eastern Market later this year with plans to revive it after years of sitting idle and neglected in the former Michigan State Fairgrounds.

The two-story white clapboard house was last used as a storage facility when the fairgrounds closed in 2008. As recently as April 2018, the windows of the home were boarded up, some walls had holes and several rooms and had piles of trash. In the second-floor bedroom, there was a dirty waterbed.

Later this year, tentatively in August, the Julia and Ulysses S. Grant home will be moved to the corner of Orleans and Wilkins street, thanks to efforts by the State of Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources, the state of Michigan History Center and the Eastern Market Corp., which is the nonprofit that manages the historic market.

An 1850 Detroit map shows the home's original location. Today, this part of Fort Street is gone.

The second story of the home, pictured here around 1860, did not fully extend to the back of the first floor.

This colorized postcard of the home, circa 1910, promoted the home as a tourist attraction.

The home was moved to the former Michigan State Fairgrounds in Detroit in 1936 where it became a museum.

The first and second stories prior to loading on to two tractor trailers in July 2020.
