FORM CWM #61 PAGE 1 OF 4

NATIONAL ORGANIZATION

SONS OF UNION VETERANS OF THE CIVIL WAR

CIVIL WAR MEMORIAL ASSESSMENT FORM

PLEASE:

- Type or print, using a ball-point pen, when filling out this form. Legibility is critical.
- Do not guess at the information. An answer of, "Unknown," is more helpful.
- Include a photograph of each viewable side and label it with name & direction of view.

	- Thank You.
Type of Memorial
Monument with Sculpture	Monument with Cannon
Monument without Sculpture	X Historical Marker Plaque
Affiliation
G.A.R. (Post Name & No	) M.O.L.L.U.S.
W.R.C. (Corps Name & No	)Other Allied Order
SUVCW (Camp Name & No	(Please describe below
DUVCW (Tent Name & No	)
X Other: Missouri Dept of Natural Resources, Division
Original Dedication Date 2005-2008	Please consult any/all newspaper archives for local paper's article that would have information on the f	irst dedication ceremony and/or other facts on the memorial.
Please submit a copy of your findings with full identificat	ion of the paper & date of publication. Thank you.
Location
The Memorial is currently located at:
Street/Road address or site location W93°5	2'03" N36°40'46 Courthouse Lawn, E 8th & Main
City/Village Cassville Township	County Barry
The found of the Managiral forces.	4b Y Foot Wood
The front of the Memorial faces: Nor	tn South _^ East West
Government Body, Agency, or Individual Own	er (of private cemetery that Memorial is located in)
Name DNR	Dept./Div. Division of State Parks
Street Address PO Box 176
City Jefferson City	State мо Zip Code _ 65102
Contact Person Jim Denny	Telephone( 573 ) 751-8566
If the Managial backback was used in large li	at farma an la action (a)
If the Memorial has been moved, please li	st former location(s)
Physical Details	X X
If known, name specific material (color of gran	nnon =Stone Concrete Metal Undetermine
ii known, name specific material (color of graf	iile, maible, ell.)

Material of the Sculpture = StoneConcrete Metal Undetermined If known, name specific material (color of granite, marble, etc.) If the Sculpture is of metal, is it solid cast or "hollow?"
Material of Plaque or Historical Marker / Tablet = plastics
Material of Cannon =BronzeIron - Consult known Ordnance Listing to confirm Markings on muzzle = Markings on Left Trunion Right Trunion Is inert ammunition a part of the Memorial? If so, describe Approximate Dimensions (indicate Monument or Base:       Height3 1/2 ft
For Memorials with multiple Sculptures, please record this information on a separate sheet of paper for each statue and attach to this form. Please describe the "pose" of each statue and any weapons/implements involved (in case your photos become separated from this form). Thank you!  Markings/Inscriptions (on stone-work / metal-work of monument, base, sculpture)  Maker or Fabricator mark / name? If so, give name & location found  N/A
The "Dedication Text" is formed: cut into material raised up from material face
Record the text (indicate any separation if on different sides) Please use additional sheet if necessary.  See attached text
Environmental Setting
(The general vicinity and immediate locale surrounding a memorial can play a major role in its overall condition.) Type of Location
Cemetery _ Park _ Plaza/Courtyard _ School _ State Capitol _ Other:

General Vicinity Rural (low population, open land) X Town Urban / Metropolitan	urban (residential, near city)	1
Immediate Locale (check as many as may apply)  Industrial _X Commercial  _X Street/Roadside within 20 feet Tree Covered (over the protected from the elements (canopy or enclosure, indoor protected from the public (fence or other barrier)  Any other significant environmental factor	ors)
Condition Information		_
Structural Condition (check as many as may apply)  The following section applies to Monuments with Sculpture, and Moincluding the base for Monuments with Cannon. Instability in the sby a number of factors. Indicators may be obvious or subtle. We base.	numents without Sculptur culpture and its base can be de /isually examine the sculpture a	re - tected and its
Sculpture	В	ase
If hollow, is the internal support unstable/exposed? (look for signs of exterior rust)  Any evidence of structural instability? (look for cracked joints, missing mortar or caulking or plant growth)  Any broken or missing parts? (look for elements (i.e., sword, musket, hands, arms, etc missing due to vandalism, fluctuating weather conditions, etc.)  Any cracks, splits, breaks or holes? (also look for signs of uneven stress & weakness in the material)		_ _ _
Surface Appearance (check as many as may apply)  Black crusting White crusting Etched, pitted, or otherwise corroded (on metal) Metallic staining (run-off from copper, iron, etc.) Organic growth (moss, algae, lichen or vines) Chalky or powdery stone Granular eroding of stone Spalling of stone (surface splitting off) Droppings (bird, animal, insect remains) Other (e.g., spray paint graffiti) - Please describe  Good Shape	Sculpture Ba
Does water collect in recessed areas of the Memorial?Y	∕es X No Unable to	tell

Surface Coating  Does there appear to be a coating? Yes _X No Unable to determine If known, identify type of coating.  Gilded Painted Varnished Waxed Unable to determine Is the coating in good condition? Yes No Unable to determine Basic Surface Condition Assessment (check one)
In your opinion, what is the general appearance or condition of the Memorial?  Well maintained Would benefit from treatment In urgent need of treatment Jnable to determine  Overall Description				Well maintained Would benefit from treatment In urgent need of treatment Jnable to determine Briefly describe the Memorial (affiliation / overall condition & any concern not already touched on) .
Supplemental Background Information
In addition to your on-site survey, any additional information you can provide on the described Memorial will be welcomed. Please label each account with its source (author, title, published date, pages). Topics include any reference to the points listed on this questionnaire, plus an previous conservation treatments - or efforts to raise money for treatment. Thank you.
Inspector Identification
Date of On-site Survey 10 Mar 2009
Your Name Walt Busch US Grant Camp #68
State MO Zip Code Telephone
Please send this completed form to:
Kevin P. Tucker, PDC, Chair

Thank you for your help, and attention to detail.

SONS OF UNION VETERANS OF THE CIVIL WAR National Civil War Memorials Committee

Secession Convention At Cassville A State Divided: The Civil War in Missouri Missouri Department of Natural Resources

[U.S. Shield]

[Picture: Gov. Hamilton Gamble] [Picture: Gen. John C. Freemont]

Between 1855 and 1885, there stood on this square, a two-story brick courthouse that was known as Missouri's "second Confederate capitol." It was here that members of the state legislature gathered between Oct. 29 and Nov. 7, 1861 to complete a legislative agenda that they had begun the preceding week in Neosho. In Neosho, the General Assembly pad passed an Ordinance dissolving Missouri's tie to the United States and another bill ratifying the provisional constitution of the Confederate States of America. At Cassville, the assembly set to work reorganizing the State Guard, selecting representatives to the Confederate Congress, and attending to other business.

In Union eyes, the members who assembled here, perhaps not enough to constitute a quorum, were part of a fugitive and illegal legislature. They had been driven from the capital at Jefferson City by Federal troops on June 15, 1861. Six weeks later a state convention met in the capital and declared the offices of the governor, lieutenant governor, Secretary of state, and all members of the General Assembly vacant. Hamilton Gamble was appointed to fill the office of provisional governor of Union-held Missouri.

[Insert: Picture front page of Journal of the Senate. Extra Session of the Rebel Legislature..."A Proclamation of C.F. Jackson" .... "the Federal authorities have for months past, in violation of the Constitution of the United States, wages a ruthless war upon the people of the State of Missouri, murdering our citizens, destroying our property, and ...desolating our land...War now exists between the State of Missouri and the Federal Government..." Claiborne Fox Jackson, Oct. 21, 1861]

The convention, without reference to any known constitutional precedent, then proceeded to establish a provisional government that would rule the state until elections could be held, which, as it turned out was not until November 1864.

Following their mid-June expulsion from the capital, the secessionist legislators who followed Gov. Claiborne Jackson to Neosho and Cassville were in a state of limbo. They were at war with the United States but not yet a part of the Confederacy. The approximately 10,000 state guard troops under Jackson and Maj. Gen. Sterling Price marched against the Yankees under the flag of the State of Missouri, not the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy.

[Insert: Picture Jefferson Davis]

Jackson knew that his only hope of driving the Federals from Missouri soil and regaining the capital lay with joining the Confederacy. While members of the State Convention met in Jefferson City to unseat Jackson and launch the provisional government, Jackson, himself, was in Richmond conferring with Confederate president, Jefferson Davis. Prior to this meeting, Davis had been reluctant to aid Missouri until meeting with Jackson, he softened his position to the extent of promising money to pay the State Guard troops as soon as such funds could be appropriated by the Confederate Congress. Confederate troops from Arkansas and Louisiana also assisted the Missouri State Guard in gaining a significant victory a the Battle of Wilson's Creek on Aug. 10, 1861.

[Insert: Picture Barry County Courthouse, 1855-1885: Missouri's "second Confederate Capitol" State Historical Society of Missouri, Columbia]

This triumph was followed the next month, by another morale boosting State Guard victory at Lexington (Sept. 18-20, 1861). But Jackson still lacked any kind of formal offensive-defensive treaty of alliance with the Confederacy. And he was still hoping for a Confederate invasion into Missouri to wrest the state from Union domination. With this in mind, Jackson issued a call from Lexington for the General Assembly to meet in special session at Neosho on Oct. 21. A few days later, the Confederate Congress passed an act that authorized President Davis to cooperate with Jackson by offering the use of Confederate troops. At the same time it recognized the Jackson government as legally constituted with authority to ratify the Confederate Constitution. Once this ratification was accomplished, Missouri would be admitted into the Confederacy on an equal footing with the 11 other seceded states.

This General Assembly in exile convened at Neosho on Oct. 21, 1861, and after waiting a week to secure a quorum, decided on Oct. 28 to proceed with business, quorum or not. On that day, the assembly passed the secession ordinance and ratified the Confederate Constitution. The next day, the members adjourned to meet at Cassville in two days.

The shift to Cassville was necessitated by the advance of Union Gen. John C. Freemont [sic] and a large Federal army on Springfield. To distance himself from Fremont's superior force, Gen. Sterling Price decided to move his forces to Cassville. Cassville had been the county seat of Barry County since 1845 and was located on the road from Springfield, Mo. to Fayetteville, Ark. The road was commonly referred to as the "Wire Road" following the stringing of a telegraph line along the route in 1860. During the Civil War, the Wire Road became a vitally important transportation route for both sides. The bloody battles at Wilson's Creek and Pea Ridge were fought at points along the Wire Road, as were hundreds of smaller engagements.

In the six-year-old brick courthouse in Cassville, under the sheltering protection of Price's army, the "rebel legislature: again set to work. They passed an act reorganizing the State Guard and creating 10 military districts. Another act confirmed the eight brigadier generals that Jackson had previously appointed. A bill was passed appropriating $10 million for the defense of the state; Jackson was authorized to raise this sum through the issuance of defense bonds. One controversial action taken by the legislature provided for the selection of representatives to the Confederate Congress...

[Inserts; Pictures of Confederate Shield, Gov. Claiborne F. Jackson and Gen. Sterling Price]

...The Assembly named two senators and seven representatives to serve until an election could be held and sent this slate to Jackson for his approval. Jackson signed this bill, although as a legalist, he knew that neither he nor the assembly had the right to appoint representatives. Under the state constitution, representatives were chosen by popular election, and senators were selected by the state house of representatives without the consent of the governor. As it was, no elections could be held in Missouri due war time conditions, and most of the nine appointees served in the Confederate Congress during its entire existence.

On Nov. 3, 1861 Jackson signed the Ordinance of Secession and the bill ratifying the Confederate Constitution and forwarded both to Richmond. The assembly adjourned on Nov. 7, after resolving to meet in New Madrid on the first Monday in March, 1862. By that time, however, New Madrid was under siege by the Federals. No other session of the "Confederate general Assembly" was ever held.

On Nov. 28, 1861, the Confederate Congress passed the act admitting Missouri into the Confederacy as the 12th Confederate state. This act, as it turned out, came too late to have any real effect on Union control of Missouri.

[Insert: Picture: Confederate $3 bill issued shortly after Missouri's admission to the Confederacy]

Jackson's hopes for a Confederate invasion of Missouri faded at the Battle of Pea Ridge in northwestern Arkansas on March 7-8, 1862. This major Confederate defeat doomed the fledgling Confederate state government to existent in perpetual exile. Jackson would be dead of cancer before the year expired. His Lt. Governor, Thomas C. Reynolds, carried on the executive functions in various locations before finally establishing his capital-in-exile at Marshall, Texas, during the waning months of 1863.

Noted Civil War historian Shelby Foote, described the lot for some 40,000 Missourians who followed the Confederate banner across battlefields far from home in the long years following the defeat at Pea Ridge that had secured a ravaged and war-torn Missouri for the Union:

"...Guerrilla bands might rip and tear [Missouri],...raider columns of various strengths might cut swaths of destruction up and down [the state], but...[Missouri's] star in the Confederate flag, placed there like Kentucky's be a fleeing secessionist legislature, represented nothing more from now on than the exiles who bore arms beneath that banner."

SECESSION CONVENTION AT CASSVILLE

Between 1855 and 1884, there stood on this square, a two-story brick courthouse that was known as Missouri's "second Confederate capitol." It was here that many here of the transfer of the stood of the stood of the second Confederate Capitol."

Missouri's "second Confederate capitol." It was never that members of the state legislature gathered between Oct. 29 and Nov. 7, 1861 to complete a legislative agenda that they had begun the preceding week in Neosho. In Neosho, the General Assembly had passed an Ordinance dissolving Missouri's tie to the Unid States and another bill ratifying the provisional constitution of the Confederate States of America. At Cassville, the assembly set to work reorganizing the State Guard, selecting representatives to the Confederate Congress, and attending to other

In Union eyes, the members who assembled here, perhaps not enough to constitute a quorum, were part of a fugitive and illegal legislature. They had been driven from the capital at Jefferson City by Federal troops on June 15. 1861. Six weeks later a state convention met in the capital and declared the offices of the governor, lieutenant governor, Secretary of state, and all members of the General Assembly vacant. Hamilton Gamble was appointed to fill the office of provisional governor of Union-held Missouri.

The convention, without reference to any known constitutional precedent, then proceeded to establish a provisional THE REBEL LEGISLATURE government that would rule the state until elections could be held, which, as it "the Federal authorities have for months past, in the rederal authorities have for months past, in violation of the Constitution of the United States, waged a ruthless war upon the people of the State of Missouri, murdering our citizens, destroying our property, and, desolating our land. War now exists between the State of Missouri and the Federal turned out was not until November 1864.

Following their mid-June expulsion from the capital, the secessionist legislators who followed Gov. Claiborne Jackson to Neosho and Cassville were in a state of limbo. They were at war with the United States but not yet a part of the Confederacy. The approximately 10,000 state guard troops under Jackson and Maj. Gen. Sterling Price marched against the Yankees under the flag of the State of Missouri, not the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy.

Jefferson Davis

Jackson knew that his only hope of driving the Federals from Missouri soil and regaining the capital lay with joining the Confederacy. While members of the State Convention met in Jefferson City to unseat Jackson and launch the provisional government, Jackson, himself, was in Richmond conferring with Confederate president, Jefferson Davis. Prior to this meeting, Davis had been reluctant to aid Missouri until the state had formally seceded from the Union. After meeting with Jackson, he softened his position to the extent of promising money to pay the State Guard troops as soon as such funds could be appropriated by the Confederate Congress. Confederate troops from Arkansas and Louisiana also assisted the Missouri State Guard in gaining a significant victory at the Battle of Wilson's Creek on Aug. 10, 1861.

A STATE DIVIDED: THE CIVIL WAR IN MISSOURI

Barry County Courthouse, 1855-1884: Missouri's "second Confederate Capitol"

This triumph was followed the next month by another morale boosting State Guard victory at Lexington (Sept. 18-20, 1861). But Jackson still lacked any kind of formal offensive-defensive treaty of alliance with the Confederacy And he was still hoping for a Confederate invasion into Missouri to wrest the state from Union domination. With this in mind, Jackson issued a call from Lexington for the General Assembly to meet in special session at Neosho on Oct. 21. A few days later, the Confederate Congress passed an act that authorized President Davis to cooperate with Jackson by offering the use of Confederate troops. At the same time it recognized the Jackson government as legally constituted with authority to ratify the Confederate Constitution. Once this ratification was accomplished, Missouri would be admitted into the Confederacy on an equal footing with the 11 other seceded states.

This General Assembly in exile convened at Neosho on Oct. 21, 1861, and after waiting a week to secure a quorum, decided on Oct. 28 to proceed with business, quorum or not. On that day, the assembly passed the secession ordinance and ratified the Confederate Constitution. The next day, the members adjourned to meet at Cassville in two days.

The shift to Cassville was necessitated by the advance of Union Gen. John C. Freemont and a large Federal army on Springfield. To distance himself from Fremont's superior force, Gen. Sterling Price decided to move his forces to Cassville. Cassville had been the county seat of Barry County since 1845 and was located on the road from Springfield, Mo. to Fayetteville, Ark. The road was commonly referred to as the "Wire Road" following the stringing of a telegraph line along the route in 1860. During the Civil War, the Wire Road became a vitally important transportation route for both sides. The bloody battles at Wilson's Creek and Pea Ridge were fought at points along the Wire Road, as were hundreds of smaller engagements.

In the six-year-old brick courthouse in Cassville, under the sheltering protection of Price's army, the "rebel legislature" again set to work. They passed an act reorganizing the State Guard and creating to military districts. Another act confirmed the eight brigadier generals that Jackson had previously appointed. A bill was passed appropriating $10 million for the defense of the state; Jackson was authorized to raise this sum through the issuance of defense bonds. One controversial action taken by the legislature provided for the selection of representatives to the Confederate Congress. The Assembly named two senators and seven representatives to serve until an election could be held and sent this slate to Jackson

Gen. Sterling Price for his approval. Jackson signed this bill, although as a legalist, he knew that neither he nor the assembly had the right to appoint a legalist, he knew that neither he nor the assembly had the right to appoint representatives. Under the state constitution, representatives were chosen by popular election, and senators were selected by the state house of representatives without the consent of the governor. As it was, no elections could be held in Missouri due war time conditions, and most of the nine appointees served in the Confederate Congress during its entire existence

On Nov. 3, 1861 Jackson signed the Ordinance of Secession and the bill on Nov. 5, 1801 Jackson signed the Ordinance of Secession and the out-ratifying the Confederate Constitution and forwarded both to Richmond. The assembly adjourned on Nov. 7, after resolving to meet in New Madrid on the first Monday in March, 1862. By that time, however, New Madrid was under siege by the Federals. No other session of the "Confederate General Assembly" was ever held.

On Nov. 28, 1861, the Confederate Congress passed the act admitting Missouri into the Confederacy as the 12th Confederate state. This act, as it turned out, came too late to have any real effect on Union control of

Confederate $3 bill issued shortly after Missouri's admission to the Confederacy

Jackson's hopes for a Confederate invasion of Missouri faded at the Battle of Pea Ridge in northwestern Arkansas on March 7-8, 1862. This major Confederate defeat doomed the fledgling Confederate state government to existence in perpetual exile. Jackson would be dead of cancer before the year expired. His Lt. Governor, Thomas C. Reynolds, carried on the executive functions in various locations before finally establishing his capital-in-exile at Marshall, Texas. during the waning months of 1863.

Noted Civil War historian, Shelby Foote, described the lot for some 40,000 Missourians who followed the Confederate banner across battlefields far from home in the long years following the defeat at Pea Ridge that had . secured a ravaged and war-torn Missouri for the Union:

...Guerrilla bands might rip and tear [Missouri],...raider columns of various strengths might cut swaths of destruction up and down [the state], but ... [Missouri's] star in the Confederate flag, placed there like Kentucky's by a fleeing secessionist legislature, represented nothing more from now on than the exiles who bore arms beneath that banner.