Wilson's Creek

Gibson's Mill

[Area Map]

The mill and house of John Gibson once stood in the valley in the front of you along Wilson Creek. On August 9, 1861, the day before the battle, the Gibson family and their neighbors found themselves surrounded by more than 12,000 Confederate soldiers whose camps extended two miles south along the creek.

The Gibsons made their living by grinding corn and oats into flour, and by carding wool. When the cannon began to roar on the morning of August 10, they took refuge in their cellar. Today the house and mill are gone, foundation ruins are visible.

The 1- mile loop trail beginning here heads to the sites of the mill and house. Down along the creek you may also see remnants of the millrace, a narrow earthen canal that carried water to turn the mill's water wheel.

Gibson's Mill

WILSONS CREEK

The mill and house of John Gibson were built in the spring of about 1850, just after the close of the American Civil War. The mill was built on the site of the old mill race and the mill race was built on the site of the old mill race. The mill was built on the site of the old mill race and the mill race was built on the site of the old mill race.
