TITLE: The Battle of Springfield Marker 11

In the late afternoon Col. Jo Shelby determined to make one final effort to take Fort No. 4, the key to the Union line. Massing his troops near here, he ordered an all-out assault on the fort from the west. At sunset the Confederates struck. In desperate nearly point-blank combat, the Union defenders withstood the assault. Sporadic fighting continued until about 9 p.m. with little result for the Confederates. The Union forces maintained control of the fort and the town. Struggling through the cold night, both sides tended their wounded and made plans for the next day.
