A second memorial in the Soldier's and Military section honors the veterans of the American Civil War. It contains another large boulder that was erected in 1940 by the Lincoln chapter of the Daughters of the Union, 1861-1865. An authentic cannon stood guard over the monument for many decades. The original cannon, made in 1861 by the Stedman Company of Aurora, Indiana, is thought to have guarded the southern Indiana border for the Union as part of a gun battery along the Ohio River. After the war, it was brought to Johnson County by members of the Grand Army of the Republic. In 2001, an agreement was reached between the City of Franklin and the Indiana State Museum to have the cannon refurbished and a full-scale replica built by South Bend Replica, Inc. The replica was placed in the Greenlawn memorial; the original is owned by the Indiana State Museum in Indianapolis.
