"ONE COUNTRY, ONE LANGUAGE AND ONE FLAG."

(Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, as established by the National Encampment, Indianapolis, Indiana, September 23, 1920.)

THE AMERICAN CREED.

BY WILLIAM TYLER PAGE.

 BELIEVE in the United States of America as a Government of the people, by the people, for the people ; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed ; a democracy in a republic ; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states ; a perfect Union, one and inseparable ; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies.

A SOLDIER'S GRAVE.

MARIAN DOUGLAS.

Glad robins singing in the boughs,
Low murmur of the bees,
A hill-side burying ground closed round
With wilding apple-trees :
The snowy flowers drift softly down
Upon the quiet graves,
And in the south wind over one,
A small flag gently waves.

Those floating colors make for me
That grassy mound a shrine,
What though the one who sleeps beneath
Knew naught of me or mine ?
Yet that brave life, quenched long ago,
Seems of my own a part ;
For he who dies for freedom, lives
In every freeman's heart.

Harper's Bazar, May 28, 1892.

OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

"To New Hampshire men the whole nation is a sepulchre, for their blood has watered the soil of every state but their own, and their dust is mouldering by every great river and in every mountain pass from Maine to Georgia—from the Charles to the Rio Grande and the Red River of the North. They died before Warren at Bunker Hill, before Washington at Yorktown, under the eye of Jackson at New Orleans; they were thrown in their hammock-shroud from the bloody deck of Paul Jones, and Lawrence, and Decatur, and Farragut: they marched with Sherman, they charged with Sheridan, they conquered with Thomas, they fought it out on his own line with Grant. But no soldier of my native state ever fell on his own soil, or was buried in his dear native earth, unless the restless ocean cast his body on its narrow sea coast, or the love and care of parent, or brother, or child, restored to their sorrow and pride the corpse that had fallen a thousand miles from home."

*Hon. F. B. Sanborn, of Concord, Mass.,
in the Massachusetts Legislature, March 14, 1889.*

LINCOLN'S SPEECH AT GETTYSBURG.

NOVEMBER 19, 1863.

"Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Fishley, George—Rev. War.

"Capt. George Fishley, died

Dec. 26, 1850,

Aged 91 years."

Stone.

"Deaths. December 26 [1850]. Captain George Fishley, aged 90 years and 6 months. Funeral Sunday afternoon [Dec. 29] from St. John's church, immediately after the close of afternoon service [See below].

Capt. Fishley was engaged, during the Revolution, in the service of his country, both upon sea and land. He has long been well known amongst us as a firm patriot and an excellent citizen, and his death will be lamented. Thus one after another the veterans who participated in the struggle for our independence are passing away."

Portsmouth Journal, Dec. 28, 1850.

"Capt. George Fishley. We gave in our paper last week a short obituary of this venerable citizen, who died in this city on the 26th of December [1850], in his 91st year.

Mr. Fishley possessed to the last years of his life, most of his faculties to a remarkable degree. For many years he has on public occasions appeared conspicuously in the processions, in a cocked hat which almost vied in years with the wearer.

He was born on the 17th day of June, 1760. At the age of seventeen he entered the continental army under Gen. Poor and Col. Dearborn. In the course of the three years of his service he was at the battle of Monmouth [June 28, 1778], (in which action General Washington commanded the American and Sir Henry Clinton the British forces), at the execution of Major André [October 2, 1780], and in the various positions the army occupied at that time. As an instance of revolutionary service, he related that just seventy-three years ago last Tuesday [December 31, 1777], he marched with his companions in arms, several miles, in the vicinity of Valley Forge, without shoes or stockings.

After leaving the land service, he embarked in a privateer on the ocean—was captured, and held as a prisoner at Halifax.

His after life was spent mostly in trading—for many years he had command of a coaster between Portsmouth and Boston—and when by the just provision of a grateful country pensions were granted to the soldiers of the Revolution, he became a recipient of that bounty, and was enabled thereby to descend in comfort to the grave.

In political feelings he was strongly Whig—so much so that when President Polk visited Portsmouth a few years since, he said he declined at first shaking hands with him, because he had no political sympathies with him. In 1840, when the great gathering of the Whigs of New Hampshire was made at Concord, a company of about 300 citizens went from Portsmouth. As an emblem of Commerce, a miniature ship was rigged, and was drawn from our wharves to the political capital of the State. The commander of this vessel, which will be long remembered, was Capt. Fishley.

In 1843 he celebrated his birthday, the 17th of June, in the great meeting on Bunker Hill [held to celebrate the completion of the monument erected in commemoration of the battle fought there sixty-eight years before]. He was among those few Revolutionary soldiers who were companions on that occasion. Incorporated in his very existence was the spirit of '76—and on all fitting occasions it was prominently visible.

With him the last of our cocked hats [and the last veteran of the Revolution residing here, excepting Mark Green and John McClintock] has departed. He was an amiable man, a good citizen, and beloved by all who knew him.

He was buried from St. John's church on Tuesday last—the Portsmouth Greys doing the last military honors to the old patriot."

Portsmouth Journal, January 4, 1851.

George Fishley and Mark Green were the last surviving Revolutionary Soldiers residing in Portsmouth, and took part as such in many Fourth of July and other celebrations.

When President Polk visited Portsmouth July 4, 1847, Fishley and Green, wearing their Continental uniforms and cocked hats, were driven in a carriage in the procession.

It is told of Fishley that when Adams and Jefferson were buried in 1826, and a procession was contemplated in Portsmouth, of which the Revolutionary heroes were to form a part, the committee came to Fishley requesting him to appear. He asked who were to be there. All were named until — was mentioned. "What?" cried the old man, "He a patriot! Why he was a d— Hessian, and came over here to fight us for six pence a day. No s-i-r, I don't ride with such patriots as he!" And ride he did not on the solemn occasion.

William Gardner was Ensign of Capt. John Langdon's company of Cavalry, which volunteered for, and took part in General Sullivan's campaign in Rhode Island, in the summer of 1778.

"William Gardner was of Portsmouth, born in 1751, and bred a merchant, becoming a successful and wealthy one. He was one of the leading patriots of the town of Portsmouth, in word and deed. Being agent for clothing for the United States, he received a requisition for blankets, when there were none in Portsmouth market, and no money in his hands, and still worse, the government had little credit.

Learning that a merchant of Newburyport had a supply of them, Major Gardner repaired to that town to purchase, but was refused them on the credit of the government. He purchased them on private account, and gave his own note for them. The requisition was filled, the soldiers supplied, but when the note became due, Major Gardner had to pay it from his own funds, very much to his own inconvenience, if not injury. In after years he presented his claim to a bankrupt treasury in vain.

He was appointed 'U. S. Loan officer' by Washington, as some remuneration for his sacrifices. I am not aware that he held any other military office than the present one [see above],—which gave him the title of Major, as by the order of the Committee of Safety, empowering Capt. John Langdon to raise an independent company in Portsmouth, he was to rank as colonel, and of course, his lieutenant and ensign, as lieutenant colonel and major. Major Gardner continued as U. S. Loan Officer as long as the office was continued. He died April 29, 1833 [1834], in the 83d year of his age."

Adj. General's Report, N. H. Vol. 2, 1866.

"Died. In this town, on Tuesday last [April 29, 1834], William Gardner, Esq., aged 83 years;—he held the office of Commissioner of Loans for many years;—was one of the most venerable and respectable of our citizens;—one, distinguished for the integrity of his life, the honesty of his heart, and the purity of his motives;—one of the most warm and faithful patriots of his country;—one of the most generous friends to the cause of humanity; one, remarkable for courteousness of manners, true hospitality, disinterested, active and ardent benevolence, and his domestic virtues. Precious is his memory to his friends and fellow citizens.

His funeral, we understand, will be this afternoon, at three o'clock, from his late dwelling house."

After various services, on August 29, 1862, the day before the second battle of Bull Run, the Battery took part in a reconnaissance on the Warrenton road toward Groveton, Va. The command met the enemy and suffered severely. The Battery lost several men killed and wounded. "Captain Gerrish, with ten men, was captured by the enemy."

Captain Gerrish was held as a prisoner of war (at Richmond); but was soon exchanged and rejoined the Battery at Uperville, Va., in November, 1862.

"Born in Portsmouth, in January, 1826. He learned the printer's trade in this city and in Boston; afterwards engaging in business in New York. He entered the service at the outbreak of the Rebellion, enlisting for three months in the 7th New York Regiment [See below]. Later he joined the 2nd New Hampshire Regiment, with a commission as First Lieutenant and Quartermaster, June 20th, 1861. In the following October he was made Captain and Commissary of Subsistence on the staff of General Burnside, and all through the perilous and glorious career of the 9th army corps he was in charge of its means of sustenance. He was frequently called upon for service under fire as aide-de-camp, and had numerous narrow escapes.

In July, 1862, he was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel; in March, 1865, he was brevetted Colonel, and in April, 1865, Brigadier General, for meritorious service. With characteristic modesty, however, he preferred the lesser title of Colonel, for it was in that rank that he did actual service.

After the rebellion he served for two years on the staff of Gov. Fenton, of New York, and in that capacity was stationed at Washington in charge of the adjustment of the war accounts between that state and the general government. In all this long and responsible service his patriotism and his integrity won the recognition of his superiors, and no accusation of personal interest or profit was ever laid at his doors.

At the conclusion of this duty he went to Brooklyn, N. Y., to reside, and while there his attractive home and fine library were entirely destroyed by fire, causing him great financial loss, from which he never recovered.

In person Col. Goodrich had a commanding figure, and his thick mass of snow-white hair and beard made him a notably dignified figure. He was a fine conversationalist.

Died April 22, 1892, in Boston, aged 66 years 3 months."

Goodwin, Ichabod—War Governor, N. H.

"Ichabod Goodwin,
Died on the Fourth of July, 1882,
Aged Eighty-Seven Yrs.

He was Governor of New Hampshire from June 1859 to June 1861, including the first months of the War of the Rebellion."

Stone.

"The death of Ex-Governor Ichabod Goodwin occurred at his residence on Islington street, on the evening of July 4th [1882], at 8.45 o'clock, and was not wholly unexpected, as he had been confined to his bed and in a precarious condition for several weeks past.

Ex-Governor Goodwin was born in North Berwick, Me., October 1794, and was the eldest son of Samuel Goodwin. At the age of fourteen he entered the counting room of Samuel Lord, Esq., merchant, of this city, and in 1817 went to sea as supercargo of ship Elizabeth Wilson, in the employment of J. P. and Samuel Lord. Not many months after he sailed as master and supercargo of one of the ships of this firm and became interested with them in the vessels he commanded. In 1832 he engaged in an extensive mercantile business in connection with Samuel E. Coues, Esq., in this city, and never thereafter went to sea.

He represented this city in the New Hampshire Legislature in 1838, 43, 44, 50, 54, and 56, and was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1850 and 1876. He was first President of the Eastern Railroad Company in New Hampshire, and held the office for twenty years. In 1847 he was elected President of the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth Railroad Company, which office he held for a long term of years, until 1871, we think. He was also first President of the Portsmouth Steam Factory, in whose success he always manifested the liveliest interest. In 1857 the degree of master of arts was conferred on him by Dartmouth college.

In March 1859 Mr. Goodwin was elected Governor of New Hampshire, and was re-elected in 1860, his term of office extending to June 5th, 1861, covering the breaking out of the rebellion and the raising of the first two regiments of volunteer infantry from this State. This was a most trying period in the history of New Hampshire, and nobly and patriotically did the Governor meet the emergency. The people everywhere had confidence in his wisdom and financial skill, and when he issued a call for men and money for the war, they responded promptly. There then being no funds in the treasury aside from what was required to meet the ordinary expenses of the state, and the crisis demanding that the quota of men called for by the President, from New Hampshire, should be raised and made ready for the field without delay, he personally appealed to the banking institutions and private individuals of the State for assistance, and they promptly placed at his disposal six hundred and eighty thousand dollars.

To call an extra session of the Legislature would involve not only delay but expense, and Governor Goodwin, with the advice of his council, assumed the entire responsibility as commander-in-chief of the militia to act without special legislative authority. The result of his work became, as we all know, a vital part of our State's history. On the assembling of the Legislature in June, Gov. Goodwin plainly and concisely stated the position he assumed and the motives which actuated him. The Legislature at once endorsed all his acts by unanimously passing the enabling act, relieving the Governor of his heavy responsibility. His administration of State affairs for two years met with almost universal approval, and he left the office with the highest respect of all parties.

Because of an earnest desire to retire from the active duties of life, ex Governor Goodwin had been gradually withdrawing from official positions, but at the time of his death he was President of the following organizations:—First National Bank, Piscataqua Savings Bank, Portsmouth Gas Company, Portsmouth Bridge Company, and Portsmouth Howard Benevolent Society, which offices he held with ability.

As a member of the Legislature and of the Constitutional Convention he took a leading part on committees and in debate. His speeches were never made for show: he spoke only when there seemed to be occasion for it, and then always to the point, and was listened to with great respect and attention, for his conservatism and practical wisdom in all matters of public policy were well-known.

In 1827 he married Sarah Parker Rice, daughter of William Rice, Esq., a wealthy merchant in this city, by whom he had seven children: his wife, one son and two daughters surviving him.

His last appearance before the public was on the evening of Memorial day, May 30, 1882, in Music Hall, at which (as in all the years since that day was set apart for remembering the dead heroes of the late war) the ex-Governor presided, and as usual gave an address full of patriotic sentiment. His remarks on that occasion were particularly choice and delivered with unusual force.

Without neglecting any private duty, he yielded to frequent calls upon his time and services for the public weal, and in everything promotive of the prosperity of his country, state and city, he ever manifested an earnest interest, and every good work found in him an earnest friend and helper.

He was charitable, but his charities were not bestowed 'to be seen of men.'

Very many in this city who have been the recipients of his bounty will miss and mourn a sympathetic friend indeed. In theological opinion he was a Unitarian of the highest type of the Channing school, and was a devoted member of the Stone church in this city. His social life was consistent with the faith he professed, and alike in official or unofficial positions, his influence was helpful to public and private morality. Truly a good man has gone and 'his works follow him.'

What more fitting time for a noblehearted patriot to breathe his last than on the evening of the anniversary of his nation's birth-day!

The funeral will take place at the Unitarian church on Saturday [July 8th] at 12 o'clock."

"Deaths. In this city, on Thursday evening last [Sept. 18, 1851], Mr. Mark Green, aged 89.

Mr. Green was three years in the land and sea service of his country in the time of the Revolution. He was an original member of the Mechanics Association, of which he has been a member in good standing for forty-nine years. He was engaged in the building of the first frigate 'Congress.' He has been confined to his house for the present year, but had lost no interest in the scenes, events and remembrances of the Revolution.

At the celebration of the 4th of July the present year [1851], he requested that a portion of the display might pass by his window. The sight afforded him great gratification. The day before his death his thoughts were wandering over his early scenes with such intensity that he remarked, 'Do you hear those guns?—Washington is reviewing his troops!'

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon [Sept. 20] at four-o'clock from the residence of Mr. Mark Green, Jr., No. 4 High street. The Mechanics Association will meet at Jefferson Hall at half-past three-o'clock to attend the funeral.

Portsmouth Journal, Sept. 20, 1851.

Thus died and was buried, sixty-eight years after the close of the Revolution, our last resident Continental soldier.

Of the citizens of Portsmouth who took part in the Revolution, Capt. John McClintock, who served in a private-armed vessel, alone survived him.

"Mr. Samuel S. Green, of No. 49 Daniel street, this city, is the son of Mark Wentworth Green, [usually known as Mark Green], who was born in Portsmouth in the year 1762.

He [Mark Wentworth Green] was baptized in Queen's Chapel—now St. John's church—his sponsor being Mark Hunking Wentworth. The interest of the latter gentleman in his godchild took shape in a proposition to send the young man to England to be educated.

Young Green was a patriot, however, and declined the generous offer, and shipped on board a Portsmouth privateer. This vessel was fortunate in capturing three or four prizes, but was in turn captured by three British men-of-war. The youth was sent, a prisoner, to Halifax; but was exchanged not long after, and sent on a cartel to Gloucester, Mass. Like his shipmates, he was penniless, and together they returned on foot to Portsmouth. During the passage from Halifax the men were crowded so closely in the hold of the vessel that no change of position was possible except by command, and 'Ready—About!' was the order by which they were permitted to relieve their cramped bodies.

Upon reaching home Mr. Green enlisted in the federal army and served until the end of the war. With his regiment he witnessed the British evacuation of New York. Upon the disbanding of the patriot army, he, with his comrades from Portsmouth and Eliot, again took the road which led homeward. On arriving at Haverhill they crossed the river on the ice, regardless of danger, so eager were they to reach home and friends.

The father of this young man, Mr. John Green, was carpenter on the privateer 'Rambler' under Paul Jones [See below].

Mr. Samuel S. Green, who counts an experience of seventy years, is justly proud of his patriotic kinsmen, and stands, himself, before his fellow citizens an upright and honorable man, content that in his person his patriotic lineage has suffered no stain."

Portsmouth Daily Chronicle, April 2, 1889.

John Green, stated above to have served on the "privateer 'Rambler' under Paul Jones," is believed by his grandson, Mr. Samuel S. Green, to have sailed from Portsmouth on the "Ranger," Nov., 1, 1777. He was, however, certainly on the U. S. Frigate "Alliance," as the name of "John Green, Carpenter's Mate," appears on the "Roll of the Officers and Crew of the Frigate 'Alliance,' Captain Peter Landais, October 3d, 1779," printed in "Sherburne's Life of John Paul Jones." The "Alliance" was then one of the vessels of Commodore Jones' squadron, and was present when he captured the "Serapis," Sept. 23, 1779, but took little part in the action. Mark Green, not long before his death, received prize money due his father for captures made by the "Alliance."

"Interesting Revolutionary Documents. —Our readers will recall a reference to the services of Mark Green of Portsmouth, in the Revolutionary army and navy, in a recent number of the Chronicle. In connection therewith several interesting papers have turned up, the quaintness of which entitles them to a passing notice. Two of them are here presented. The first bears the file-inscription: 'Mark Green's discharge,' and reads thus:

'By the Honorable Major General Knox, commanding the American forces on Hudson's River, Mark Green, Soldier in the Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, being inlisted for three years, is hereby honourably discharged from the service of the United States.

(Given in the State of New York — the Thirty-first day of December, 1783—

By the General's command

J. Knox, M. Gen.

Registered on the Books of the Regiment. Charles Seldin, Adjutant.

Portsmouth, New Hampshire, April 6th, 1818—I hereby certify that the above discharge is a true copy from the original—

Samuel Fernald, Justice Peace.'

This document is written on half cap, laid paper, and lines are ruled with a pencil for the convenience of the writer.

The second paper is a printed form, and is thus filed on the middle fold, instead of the outer as is the present custom: 'Mark Green's Pension Certificate. Payable semi-annually. The first payment on this Certificate will be made on the 4th of March next, in Portsmouth, at the U. S. Branch Bank.' At the foot of the fold is the word, 'Recorded.' The document is numbered '16,344.' The body of the instrument reads:

'War Department.

Revolutionary Claim.

I certify that, in conformity with the Law of the United States, of the 18th March, 1818, Mark Green, late a Private in the Army of the Revolution, is inscribed on the Pension List, Roll of the New Hampshire Agency, at the rate of Eight dollars per month, to commence on the Seventh day of April, one thousand eight hundred and Eighteen.

Given at the War office of the United States, this Seventh day of September, one thousand eight hundred and Nineteen.

J. C. Calhoun,

Secretary of War.'

To this page is affixed the seal of the War office, stamped on a lozenge-shaped paper over red wax."

Portsmouth Daily Chronicle, April 18, 1889.

Mark Green always made his home in Portsmouth. During his enlistment in the army the encampment for winter quarters was at one time in a large walnut grove on the Hudson river, near West Point. He related that they commenced cutting trees, building huts, and making roads, so that before leaving they had to go a mile or two for their fuel.

Mr. Samuel S. Green is also a nephew of Thomas Harvey, whose Revolutionary service is given on later pages.

Soldier of the Revolution,

Aged 84 years."

"Deaths.—In this town, Mr. Thomas Harvey, aged 85 [See above]—a Revolutionary pensioner."

Portsmouth Journal, January 21, 1837.

"We announced the death a week or two since of Thomas Harvey, a Revolutionary pensioner, at the age of 85 [See above]. The following incident is related in a Boston paper:

"When Lafayette visited Portsmouth in 1824 an interesting scene occurred in the hall of audience. Harvey was introduced to the General as a soldier who had fought under him. 'Do you recollect, Marquis (said Harvey), who bore you on his back, after being wounded at the battle of Brandywine, to the surgeon's quarters?' 'He was called 'Tom Harvey,' said the excellent Lafayette. What took place thereafter, if we know, it is not proper to relate.'"

Portsmouth Journal, February 4, 1837.

Thomas Harvey was born in Portsmouth in 1752 or 1753, and served gallantly in the Continental army during seven years of the Revolutionary war. He crossed the Delaware with Washington, and was at the battle of Brandywine, Sept. 11, 1777. He died in Portsmouth, January 18, 1837.

When Lafayette visited Portsmouth, Wednesday, September 1, 1824, and was given a public reception in Franklin Hall, at least thirty soldiers of the Revolution, who had served under him, and many of whom had come from a great distance for the purpose of seeing him, were present.

Among those who pressed forward to shake hands with the illustrious visitor was Thomas Harvey. While retaining the General's hand the veteran asked him if he remembered who carried him off the field severely wounded at the battle of Brandywine?

"I do," instantly replied the General—"It was a New Hampshire soldier named Thomas Harvey, who rendered me that gallant service."

"Yes," said the soldier. "It was Thomas Harvey, and—with a military salute—I am the man."

The General recognized his friend of the battle-field, and manifested great pleasure at meeting him again after the lapse of so many eventful years, and greeted him with a cordiality and a warmth of manner highly gratifying to the patriot soldier.

A newspaper of the time says: "Our old friend Thomas Harvey found it difficult to restrain himself; the sight of Lafayette recalled all the scenes of the Revolution and well nigh overcame him."

Harvey was always very patriotic and could ill brook a Tory, as was a citizen of Portsmouth, whose hired man he was for a time. The story is told, that one morning he was with him at the old Spring Market, with his basket, when Governor Langdon came in with his hired man and basket. Mr. Harvey's employer said to him—"Why can I not have my shoes shined like Governor Langdon's?" The reply was—"Because he is a gentleman!"—"And am I not a gentleman?"—The answer was—"No!"—with a capital N so forcibly given, that a sympathizing citizen, standing near, put half a dollar in Harvey's hand.

In his later years Harvey was not overburdened with this world's goods, and was bent nearly double, but he received a small pension, and was always happy and contented, and quick witted also, as the following incident will show.

The Benevolent Society of the then town of Portsmouth had a committee appointed to visit the poor one hard winter to ascertain their wants.

Among others Mr. Harvey was visited, and the gentleman apologized for his visit, by saying—"You look very comfortable here, I am a sort of a spy going around"—Harvey interrupted him excitedly by saying,—"I don't like spies, we hung one (André) in the Army, and a handsome man he was too! A good deal better looking than you are!"

"Hon.

Nathaniel A. Haven,
Died

March 13, A. D. 1831,
Aged 69 years.

Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Stone.

Nathaniel A. Haven was born in Portsmouth in 1762, graduated at Harvard College in 1779, was several years a physician, and afterwards a merchant of Portsmouth, and Member of Congress in 1809.

He was the son of Rev. Samuel Haven,

D. D., fifty-four years pastor of the South Church in Portsmouth; who was born August 4, 1727, in Framingham, Mass., graduated at Harvard College in 1749, ordained minister of the South Church, Portsmouth, May 6, 1752, received the degree of Doctor in Divinity from the University of Edinburgh in 1770, and afterward from Dartmouth College, and died March 3, 1806, aged 79.

Nathaniel A. Haven was Assistant Surgeon, or Surgeon, of an armed vessel in the latter part of the Revolutionary war. The vessel was captured by the British, and he was confined as a prisoner of war on board the Jersey prison ship at New York, but was soon exchanged at the special request of General Washington.

Haven, S. Cushman—162nd N. Y.

Samuel Cushman Haven was son of James Henderson and Elizabeth (Cushman) Haven, and grandson of Hon. Samuel Cushman, all of Portsmouth, where he himself passed several years of his boyhood. A flag, with wreath and flowers, has for many years been placed on Memorial Day near his grandfather's stone in Proprietors' cemetery, Portsmouth, in remembrance of him: but he is buried in the National Cemetery at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where friends, who became greatly attached to him at New Orleans a few months before his death, have erected a stone to his memory, inscribed with his name and age, the passage,

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," and beneath it the stanza from Longfellow,—

"He, the young and strong, who cherished
Noble longings for the strife,
By the roadside fell and perished,
Weary with the march of life."

Adjutant General's Records, N. Y.

"Samuel Cushman Haven was born in Nanvoo, Ill. [where his parents temporarily resided], Feb. 19, 1843."

He graduated at Harvard College in 1862. "He had hoped to become a physician, but postponed his studies to serve his country, and immediately after graduation was commissioned as Second Lieutenant in the 162nd Regiment N. Y. Volunteer Militia [N. Y. Volunteers] under General Banks.

In February 1863, he was promoted to a first-lieutenancy [See below]. On the 15th of June he was obliged to leave his regiment, then before Port Hudson, to go to the hospital at Baton Rouge where he died of diphtheria on the 25th of June, 1863."

The Adjutant of the Regiment wrote to a member of Mr. Haven's family from "Before Port Hudson, June 27, 1863," as follows:

"Colonel Benedict desires me to say that the 162nd Regiment has, in his opinion, lost one of its very best and most faithful officers, one whom he had recommended for promotion, and whose place cannot be filled. The late Lieutenant Haven's conduct as an officer and bearing as a gentleman have, ever since the formation of the regiment, met the Colonel's unqualified approval. He begs you to assure his friends that he sympathizes with them in the grief his loss will excite."

"From the records of this office it does not appear that Samuel C. Haven, a 2d Lieut. of Co. B, 162 N. Y. V., was ever promoted to 1st Lieut."

In 1889 he took the lead in the House of Representatives in favor of the establishment of the N. H. Soldiers' Home, and to him is largely due its success in that body.

On the reorganization of Storer Post, No. 1, of Portsmouth, he became a member [June 28, 1878], was elected its commander in 1880, and since then has been an earnest worker and prominent leader in the ranks of the Grand Army.

In 1885 he served as Assistant Adjutant-General, Judge Advocate in 1887, Junior Vice Department Commander in 1889, Senior Vice Department Commander in 1890, to both the latter positions being unanimously chosen, and had he not absolutely refused further preferment he would have been chosen Department Commander at the last state encampment [1891], his business engagements and health warning him not to take upon himself the labors and responsibilities of the office. He was undemonstrative in his nature, but firm in his convictions, and had hosts of warm personal friends, especially among his comrades."

Stationed at Fort Washington, Portsmouth Harbor, N. H.

A large force of the N. H. Militia was called out by Governor J. T. Gilman, in September, 1814, for the defense of Portsmouth.

"The British had made every arrangement to destroy the Navy Yard and the town of Portsmouth. For this purpose their cruisers were off the bay of Piscataqua. A British officer told Col. Walbach, after the war, that he went up the Piscataqua and reconnoitred the town, disguised as a fisherman, and returned to the fleet and reported that the town was swarming with soldiers and well defended; and the British commander abandoned the project of attacking the town."

"The danger being past, the British forces evidently extended their predatory warfare southward. The main part of the troops, detached for the protection of Portsmouth, were discharged about the 1st of October. A small detachment of troops still remained, however, until winter approached."

Dr. Hall Jackson was born in Hampton, N. H., Nov. 11, 1739. [His father, Dr. Clement Jackson, removed from Hampton to Portsmouth about 1749.]

Hampton Church Records.

"During the Revolution Dr. Hall Jackson was Surgeon in the army, and Captain of an artillery corps."

Portsmouth Guide Book.

"On the 28th of September, 1797, died Dr. Hall Jackson, after a short illness, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. In visiting some patients, his sulkey was over-set, whereby several ribs were fractured, and a fever ensued, which terminated his life.

Dr. Jackson was born in this town [See above], and received the first rudiments of his education in the public schools here. He studied the theory of physic and surgery, under the direction of his father, Doctor Clement Jackson.

After completing his studies here, he went to London, and attended lectures in the public hospitals there, to perfect himself in surgery. Upon his return to this country, he opened an apothecary's shop, but his practice as a physician soon became so extensive, that he was obliged to relinquish in a great measure, his business as a druggist, and attend almost entirely to his profession.

As a physician, he was skilful; as a surgeon, eminent. No operation of importance was performed for many miles round, without consulting him, and seldom without his aid. He had great experience in the small-pox; and many hospitals, which were established for inoculating with that disorder, were committed to his care, and he was remarkably successful in conducting his patients safely through the disease. In the obstetric art he obtained high reputation, and was frequently applied to for advice and assistance in difficult cases, by persons who did not generally employ him. He frequently performed the operation of couching, and always with success.

Harvard College conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Medicine [1793]; and he was elected an honorary member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. He was Grand Master of the Free and Accepted Masons in New Hampshire, at the time of his decease. His sprightly talents, lively imagination, and social habits, rendered him an agreeable companion; facetious and pleasant in conversation, his friends enjoyed in his company 'the feast of reason,' with the flow of wit; and the several societies of which he was a member, found their entertainment greatly heightened by his presence."

Adams' Annals of Portsmouth.

Three letters written by Dr. Hall Jackson, while serving with the Continental army near Boston, dated, "Cambridge, July 19, 1775," "Camp Winter Hill, September 5, 1775," and "Camp on Winter Hill, September 16, 1775," will be found in "Letters by Josiah Bartlett, William Whipple and others, written before and during the Revolution," Philadelphia, 1889. These letters relate to his services in the army.

On Nov. 14, 1775, the Provincial Congress of New Hampshire voted its thanks to Dr. Hall Jackson, and "that he receive a commission from this Congress as Chief Surgeon of the New Hampshire Troops in the Continental Army," as shown by the "Provincial Papers of New Hampshire," Vol. VII. page 657.

In November, 1775, he was Captain of a company of Field Artillery, "stationed in the town of Portsmouth, upon the Parade," and in September, 1776, he was Surgeon of Col. Pierse Long's regiment, as stated in the "Adjutant General's Report," New Hampshire, Vol. 2, 1866, pages 276 and 290.

Dr. Hall Jackson's residence in 1775, in its present modernized form, is still in existence at the north-east corner of Court and Washington streets, Portsmouth.

"In Memoriam.
COLONEL JOHN H. JACKSON.
T. E. O. Marvin.

Droop, droop ye banners proud
O'er hero lying low:
Sheathed is his sword, his pennon lowered,
No more the bugles blow.

Hushed is the battle cry;
The tone of stern command—
Bent low in grief o'er fallen chief
His war-worn veterans stand.

Upon his brow they place
The wreath in battle won;
With solemn tread they bear their dead
While booms the minute gun.

No more will Jackson's arm
His battle steed control:
The fight is done, the field is won—
Farewell, intrepid soul.

Let sculptured urn and shaft
Record our hero's name;
Be his the meed of gallant deed,
Undying be his fame."

Portsmouth Penny Post, April 14, 1890.

"Col. John H. Jackson died at his residence in Boston on the 10th April [1890], after a brief illness, at the age of 75 years and 6 months. He was a native of Portsmouth and was the son of John H. Jackson, who died before his birth while nobly fighting in the second war with Great Britain. His grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution, so that the gallant colonel inherited the martial spirit that early in life led him to join the militia and afterward made him the hero of two wars.

He was commissioned April 9, 1847, as First Lieutenant in the 9th U. S. Infantry, for service in the war with Mexico. August 20th of the same year he was brevetted Captain for gallantry in the battles of Contreras and Churubusco, and commissioned as Captain the following December. At the battle of Chapultepec his bravery drew forth honorable mention from his superior officers, and there is no doubt that had the war lasted much longer he would have attained to very high rank. At this battle one of those fortunate occurrences of which we read so often, but which really occur so seldom, happened to the Colonel. While gallantly leading his company in the magnificent charge which resulted in the capture of this hitherto regarded impregnable fortress, he felt himself struck full in the chest by a bullet, but as he found no wound, paid but slight attention to the circumstance until the battle was over, when upon investigation he found that his life had been saved by a pocket bible, the gift of his sister, which was pierced nearly through by a Mexican bullet.

The Colonel was mustered out of the service with his regiment in August, 1848, went to California with the pioneers in 1849, where he remained four years, returning east in 1853, when he was appointed an inspector in the Boston Custom House. He continued to serve in this position until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when he was offered and accepted the commission of Lieutenant-Colonel of the 3rd N. H. Volunteers. The resignation of Col. Fellows promoted him to the command of the regiment June 27, 1862, and he led his men in all their engagements until the storming of Fort Wagner, where he received a severe wound, which incapacitated him from active duty and undoubtedly shortened his life. He was honorably discharged from the service, Feb. 24, 1864. In 1867 he was re-appointed to a lucrative and most important position in the Boston Custom House, and held the place until his decease.

The following is an extract from a letter of Dec. 9, 1889, from Col. John H. Jackson, dated Custom House, Boston, Mass.:

"My father's family came early to New York from Holland. He was a ship carpenter and served some time in our navy. He had been living at Portsmouth, and early in 1814 he enlisted at Portsmouth, N. H., in Col. Winfield Scott's regiment, and on the 26th of September 1814, at or near Lundy's Lane, he was killed. I was born October 20, 1814, at Portsmouth, N. H. You see I never saw my father. His name was John H. Jackson. No other member of his father's family ever came to Portsmouth."

Sherburne's Life of John Paul Jones.

"Died on the 24th inst. [June 24, 1823], Capt. Nathaniel Kennard of this town, aged 68.

His character demands none of the usual unmeaning panegyric of an obituary notice. To those who knew him, his services, his sufferings and his worth will ever render his memory dear. All who partake of the blessings secured by the enterprise and valor of our revolutionary heroes, cannot but feel an interest in the events of his life.

At the commencement of the war of the Revolution, he entered as a volunteer in one of the first regiments in Massachusetts, for the term of one year.

At the expiration of that engagement, he entered on board a private armed vessel—was captured, carried to England and kept in close confinement at the Mill Prison for two years and a quarter, being encouraged with no other prospect than a still protracted confinement, or a termination of it by being hanged as a rebel.

Thence he was sent to France in a cartel, where on the 20th April, 1779, he entered on board the 'Bon Homme Richard,' under the celebrated John Paul Jones, and was with him in some of the most desperate enterprises, in which that commander was engaged. From that vessel he was put on board a prize and ordered for France.

He was again captured and carried into Hull in the north of England, transported to Spithead, put on board the 'Unicorn' frigate and compelled to do duty until at the imminent hazard of his life he escaped in the Island of Jamaica. Thence he returned to America a little before the close of the war.

After the peace of '83 he engaged in the merchant service and continued a reputable shipmaster until near the commencement of the late war [1812-15], when he was appointed by government to the command of a Revenue Cutter and continued in the same to the close of the war.

After that period, until his death, he was employed as Inspector of the Customs at this port. In all his various services, Capt. Kennard sustained the character of an honest man and a good citizen."

Portsmouth Journal, July 5, 1823.

Capt. Nathaniel Kennard was born on Kennard's hill in Elliot, Maine, then a part of Massachusetts, and died in Portsmouth, N. H. His son, Capt. Nathaniel Kennard, Jr., of Portsmouth, was captured in the "Harlequin" privateer in the War of 1812, and afterwards died in the West Indies of yellow-fever.

The monument was erected by the generosity of the Rev. Alfred Langdon Elwyn, of Philadelphia [his great-grandson]."

Portsmouth Daily Eve. Post, Nov. 5, 1891.

"Col. John Langdon was one of the most zealous and worthy patriots of the time, at work in season and out of season, with mind, hands and means, in the cause of liberty. He was born in Portsmouth, in 1740 [See above], and was the son of John, and grandson of Tobias Langdon. He served an apprenticeship as a merchant in the counting-room of the Hon. Daniel Ringe [Rindge], but preferring a sea-faring life, he went out as supercargo of one of Ringe's [Rindge's] vessels and subsequently as master or captain. He continued in this business until the Revolution, and had amassed a handsome fortune for the time. The British cruisers stopping entirely his shipping and mercantile operations, and early espousing the patriot cause, he had inclination, leisure and means to largely subserve the cause of independence.

He was one of the leaders in taking Fort William and Mary [now Fort Constitution], at Newcastle, in December, 1774, was a Delegate to the general congress in 1775-6, raised an independent company of light infantry, with rank of Colonel, in June of the latter year, was judge of the court of common pleas in 1776, speaker of the House of Representatives in 1776-7, in which last position, during a session of three days, to devise ways and means to check the haughty Burgoyne, he rose at his desk and made the noble, generous, apt and effective speech of the Revolution:—"Gentlemen, I have three thousand dollars in hard money, thirty hogsheads of Tobago rum, worth as much, I can pledge my plate for as much more; these are at the service of the State. With this money we can raise and provision troops, our friend John Stark will lead them. If we check Burgoyne, the State can repay me, and if we do not, the money will be of no use to me."

his own company of infantry and followed to Bennington and Saratoga. Burgoyne defeated, he returned home only to labor in the good cause, and early in 1778, as agent of Congress, built the Raleigh frigate. In this year, also, he mounted his company of infantry, equipped them as cavalry, and marched to the defense of Rhode Island.

In 1779 he was President of the New Hampshire Convention, in 1780 Commissioner of the United States, and in 1783 Delegate to the Congress of the same. In 1784-5, he was a member of the New Hampshire Senate, and in this last year was President of the State, elected as successor of Meshech Weare. In 1788 he was a member of the Convention that formed the Constitution of the United States, was Speaker of the New Hampshire House of Representatives in June of the same year, and was again elected President of the State.

In November of the same year [1788], he was elected to the United States Senate, and had the honor of being elected the first President pro tem. of that body, and in 1794, he was reelected for another term. In 1801 he was elected a representative to the New Hampshire Legislature and was elected for the three successive years, and was Speaker of the House in 1805—when he was elected Governor of the State, and was reelected to that office until 1809, and again in 1810-11. Col. Langdon died September 18, 1819, aged 79 years.—D. P. Brown, Jonathan Eastman, John Farmer, and N. H. Rolls.

Adjutant General's Report, N. H., Vol. 2, 1866.

"Langdon, John, statesman, born in Portsmouth, N. H., 25 June, 1741, died there, 18 Sept., 1819. After receiving a common-school education he entered a counting-house and became a successful merchant.

In 1774, with John Sullivan and others, he participated in the removal of the armament and military stores from Fort William and Mary [now Fort Constitution] in Portsmouth harbor. He was elected a delegate to the Continental Congress in 1775, but resigned in June, 1776, to become navy agent.

In 1777, while he was speaker of the the New Hampshire assembly, when means were wanted to support a regiment, Langdon gave all his money, pledged his plate, and subscribed the proceeds of seventy hogsheads of tobacco [See above] for the purpose of equipping the brigade with which Gen. John Stark subsequently defeated the Hessians at Bennington. Langdon participated in this battle, and was in command of a volunteer company at Saratoga, and in Rhode Island. In 1779 he was Continental agent in New Hampshire, and president of the State convention.

He was again a delegate to Congress in 1783, was repeatedly a member of the Legislature and its speaker, and in 1787 a delegate to the convention that framed the constitution of the United States.

In March, 1788, he became Governor of New Hampshire, and in 1789 he was elected U. S. Senator, holding office till 1801, and was chosen president of the Senate in order that the electoral votes for President of the United States might be counted [He thus officially announced the election of George Washington as the first President of the United States.] A president of the Senate had therefore a legal existence before there was either a president or a vice-president of the United States.

He was a Republican in politics and acted with Jefferson, who, on assuming office in 1801, offered him the post of Secretary of the Navy, which he declined. From 1805 till 1812, with the exception of two years, he was Governor of New Hampshire, and in 1812 the Republican Congressional caucus offered him the nomination for the office of Vice-President of the United States, which he declined on the score of age and infirmities, passing the remainder of his life in retirement."

Long, Pierse—Rev. War.

"In memory
Col. Pierse Long."

Stone.

"Pierse Long (the father of Col. Pierse Long of Revolutionary memory) was born in Limerick, Ireland, about the commencement of the eighteenth century, and served an apprenticeship with one who did business with America; and by him was sent out with goods, the manufacture of Ireland, to this town, in the year 1730." Here he settled, married, and had three children; one son, and two daughters; the latter died unmarried. "Pierse Long, the senior, died in 1740."

"Pierse Long, Jr. (afterwards Col. Long), was born in 1739. He received instruction in the elements of education from the celebrated teacher, Samuel Hale. At the age of fourteen, Pierse was apprenticed as a clerk to Robert Trail [Traill], an emigrant from Scotland, and a distinguished merchant of Portsmouth. At the close of his apprenticeship, Pierse Long was established in business by Mr. Trail [Traill], as a shipping merchant, which he continued to prosecute with success until the war of the Revolution.

In this Mr. Long took an early and decided part, and in 1775 was chosen one of the delegates to the first provincial Congress, convened at Exeter. In this office he continued for some time, acting also about this period as one of the Committee of Safety for Portsmouth, and was engaged with Langdon, Pickering, Drown, and about forty other citizens, in surprising and capturing the fort at the mouth of Portsmouth harbor.

Pierse Long continued to fill different offices under the then province and town until May, 1776, when the provincial Legislature appointed him to the command of the First New Hampshire regiment. . . . This regiment continued in the service of the Province until July 15, 1776, when, it being determined by the general government to receive into the service no more provincial troops, it was disbanded, but immediately reenlisted into the Continental service, under Pierse Long as Colonel and commander.

This regiment continued to be stationed at the forts around Portsmouth harbor (a company in Portsmouth being stationed near the Old South) until October [November 23], 1776, when it received orders to march to the Canada border, near Lake Champlain [to reinforce the army at Ticonderoga, and marched for that post in February following].

It reached there safely in about twenty days; and reporting for duty to Gen. St. Clair, Col. Long was assigned to the command of Fort Independence, across the Lake, with his own and Col. Carleton's regiments; and at the same time was made Brigadier General, by brevet.

The lake being closed with ice during the latter part of the fall, the winter and part of the spring, nothing of note occurred until about the middle of June, 1777, when the English flotilla of many guns advancing by water, to be joined by Gen. Burgoyne, with ten thousand English, Canadians, Tories, and Indians, by land, it was determined by Gen. St. Clair, in a council of officers, to abandon his position with his small army of three thousand men, and retreat with the American flotilla up through Lake George, towards Fort Edward.

Col. Long was entrusted with the command of the flotilla, consisting of one schooner of sixteen guns, one of ten, and several smaller crafts, with orders to blow up the vessels to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy,—which was accomplished after they had disembarked his own and Col. Carleton's regiment at Skenesborough.

Leaving Skenesborough, the troops proceeded on towards Saratoga, and the next day (July 6) Col. Long and his command was overtaken by the British ninth regiment, under the command of Col. Hayes. An action ensued, in which the British were beaten, and retreating left the field in the possession of the Americans.

At about this time, the period for which the troops had enlisted having expired, they all asked and received their discharge, officers as well as men, excepting Edward Evans, chaplain; Noah Emery, paymaster; and Lieut. or Col. [Lieutenant] Meshach Bell, and Col. Long's servant, James Mullen.

These, with Col. Long, continued on to Saratoga, and there volunteered their services to the commander-in-chief [General Gates], and assisted in the capture of General Burgoyne and his army [who surrendered October 16, 1777].

Col. Long being ill, arrived in Portsmouth, Dec. 6 [1777]; and continued confined to his house for six months, with the disorder usual to camps; nor did he entirely recover till a year had expired. As soon as he had sufficiently recovered his health he resumed his mercantile pursuits, but at the same time suffered from attacks of the gout, and sometimes could not move without the aid of crutches.

In 1784 he was appointed by the State of New Hampshire a delegate to the old Congress, which post he filled through three or four successive years till 1786 [1784-5 6]. From the year 1786 to 1789 [1788-9—N. H. Manual.] he was elected State Senator or Councillor, and in 1788 was delegate to the Convention to adopt the present Constitution [of the United States], and gave his influence and vote for its reception by New Hampshire.

When Washington was chosen President, he appointed Col. Long Collector of the Customs at Portsmouth; but before he had taken possession of his office, he was found dead in his bed. He retired in apparent health, but died without any previous warning, of (as it was supposed) gout in the stomach, at the early age of fifty, April 3, 1789. His remains are interred in the lot in the Proprietors' burying ground, belonging to his son, at the western end of the granite monuments [monument]. Col. Long was a handsome, portly man, of unblemished christian character, amiable and courteous, a correct merchant and a good soldier."

Rambles About Portsmouth, First Series.

An interesting account of the retreat of the Americans from Fort Ticonderoga in 1777, with special mention of Col. Long's services, will be found in Irving's "Life of Washington," New York, 1882, Vol. III, pages 103-110.

Col. Pierse Long was twice married and had three children. Hon. George Long, a successful shipmaster and merchant of Portsmouth, born July 4, 1762, who died April 8, 1849; the father of Mrs. Henry H. Ladd and the late Samuel P. Long of Portsmouth, and of the late Commodore John Collings Long, U. S. Navy, of Portsmouth and Exeter, N. H., who was a midshipman on the "Constitution" when she captured the British frigate "Java," Dec. 29, 1812. Abigail, who married George W. Prescott, and died at St. Bartholomews, in 1793. Mary, who married Col. Tobias Lear, private secretary to Gen. Washington, April 22, 1790, and died of yellow-fever in the family of Gen. Washington, at Philadelphia, in 1791.

A beautiful Memorial Record Book was presented to Storer Post, G. A. R., on its twenty-fifth anniversary, celebrated November 14, 1892, by Mrs. Henry H. Ladd, of Portsmouth, in memory of her grandfather, Col. Pierse Long. A full account of the presentation was printed in the Portsmouth Daily Evening Times, of November 15, 1892, and the following vote was passed at the next meeting of the Post:

"Resolved, That the earnest thanks of Storer Post are hereby tendered to Mrs. Marcy E. Ladd, of Portsmouth, for the magnificent volume recently presented by her to the Post in memory of her grandfather, Colonel Pierse Long of the Revolutionary army; and the Post gladly accepts the opportunity to inscribe therein the record of Colonel Long and the Personal War Sketches of its Comrades, for future preservation."

McClintock, John—Rev. War.

"John McClintock,

Died

Nov. 13, 1855,

Aged 94 yrs."

Stone.

"The late John McClintock.—It becomes our duty this week to record the departure of another of our venerable citizens. In the death, on Tuesday afternoon last [Nov. 13, 1855], of John McClintock, Esq., Naval Officer for the Port of Portsmouth, in the 95th year of his age.

Capt. John McClintock was the son of the Rev. Dr. Samuel McClintock of Greenland, N. H., who was Chaplain in the army of the Revolution, and was at the battle of Bunker Hill. The patriotic clergyman may be seen represented in the engraving of the battle, in his ministerial bands, near the spot where Gen. Warren lies wounded [See below]."

"John McClintock, who was born on the 28th of August, 1761, entered the service at the age of about 16, in the private armed ship 'Alexander' of 20 guns, under Captain Thomas Simpson, who afterwards succeeded Paul Jones in command of the 'Ranger.' At the age of 17, John McClintock was Master's Mate, and was entrusted with conducting a prize into the West Indies. He remained in the service four years, lacking one month—but not being in any public ship he received no pension for revolutionary services."

"After the peace, John McClintock entered the merchant service, and was before the close of the last century ship-master and owner. He met with losses by the French Spoilings in 1797, of over $10,000, for which his government received a remuneration, but none ever reached him—nor did he ever dispose of a dollar of his claims to any one."

After leaving the ocean he followed mercantile pursuits in this city, and ever manifested a high sense of honor and integrity in his dealings and intercourse—and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of all the leading men of his times. He was of a vigorous constitution, and strengthened it by a temperate and industrious course of life."

Under Harrison's administration he was appointed Naval Officer of this port, and when his term of office expired in August, 1854, President Pierce renewed his commission."

"The world may perhaps be challenged to produce another man who performed the daily duties of a responsible public office, in the full possession of his faculties, until within five years of a century in age."

But he has now gone—and with him departs our last living chronicle of the American Revolution—the last intelligent tie which bound us with those patriots and heroes who achieved the blessings under which our country has acquired her high position among the nations. Yes, the Patriarch of the Revolution, who has so long been left to tell us of the spirit of our fathers—the Man who by his noble spirit, his industrious habits, his upright life and stern integrity, has inspired a veneration for the men of a former age, is now no more—and none can fill his place."

Portsmouth Journal, Nov. 17, 1855.

"To the memory of Samuel McClintock, D. D., who died April 27th, 1804, in the 72d year of his age
& the 48th year of his ministry.

His Body rests here in the certain hope of a resurrection to life & second time to destroy the last enemy death & to consummate the great design of his mediatorial Kingdom."

N. H. State Papers, Vol. XIV.

"In the picture [by Trumbull] of the battle of Bunker Hill, representing the fall of Gen. Warren, may be seen in the group a clergyman arrayed in his bands, who appears to be deeply interested in the battle. That man was the Rev. Samuel McClintock, D. D., of Greenland, N. H., the father of the venerable John McClintock, who [served in a private armed ship in the Revolution and] died in Portsmouth a few years since [Nov. 13, 1855] at the age of 94, retaining his mental and physical faculties to the last [See above]."

William McClintock, (the father of Dr. Samuel McClintock) was born in Scotland; early removed to Londonderry, Ireland; and after the siege of that place in 1688-9, came to this country and settled on Mystic river."

"Dr. Samuel McClintock was born in 1732. He was educated at Princeton College," and soon after finishing his studies became minister of the church at Greenland."

"During the Revolution he strongly espoused the side of the people, . . . and was Chaplain at the battle of Bunker Hill."

"Three of his sons perished in the war. One of them, Nathaniel, received a collegiate education at Harvard, but the war breaking out he joined General Washington, and was raised to the rank of Major of Brigade. [“He was with Washington at the memorable capture of the Hessians at Trenton,” Dec. 25, 1776.] He was in the New Hampshire line at the battles before the capture of Burgoyne on the 19th of September and the 7th of October [1777]. After the capture, his regiment was ordered South. . . . He was then (although he had not reached 21 years of age) raised to the rank of Major of the line, over all the older Captains. As he was therefore regarded with jealousy by those lower than himself in rank, he resigned his commission and returned home. He was induced to take the command of a company of marines which went out in a ship-of-war, the 'Raleigh,' and soon after perished in an engagement. Another son of Dr. McClintock was an officer at the battle of Trenton and there slain: and a third was lost at sea, serving as a Midshipman, and afterwards as a Lieutenant, in a ship-of-war."

Rev. Mr. McClintock "was loved and esteemed by his parish, and in the latter part of his life received the Diploma of Doctor of Divinity from Princeton College where he was educated."

"History informs us that during the battle of Bunker Hill" Rev. Samuel McClintock "knelt on the field, with hands upraised, and grey head uncovered; and, while the bullets whistled around him, prayed for the success of the patriots, and the deliverance of his country."

This rare incident prompted the following beautiful ode from the pen of Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney."

THE PRAYER ON BUNKER HILL.

"It was an hour of fear and dread—
High rose the battle-cry,
And round, in heavy volumes, spread
The war-cloud to the sky,
'Twas not, as when in rival strength
Contending nations meet,
Or love of conquest madly hurls
A monarch from his seat:
Yet one was there, unused to tread
The path of mortal strife,
Who but the Saviour's flock had fed
Beside the fount of life.
He knelt him where the black smoke wreathed—
His head was bowed and bare,— While, for an infant land he breathed
The agony of prayer.

The column, red with early morn,
May tower o'er Bunker's height,
And proudly tell a race unborn
Their patriot fathers' night:—
But thou, O patriarch, old and grey,
Thou prophet of the free,
Who knelt among the dead that day,
What fame shall rise to thee?

It is not meet that brass or stone
Which feel the touch of time,
Should keep the record of a 'nith
That woke thy deed sublime:
We trace it to the tablet fair,
Which glows when stars wax pale.
A promise that the good man's prayer Shall with his God prevail."

"Capt. John Murray of Company D, 5th N. H. Volunteers, was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862.

It was stated by Col. Cross, who commanded the famous 'Fighting Fifth,' that Capt. Murray left the hospital against the express orders of the surgeon on the morning of the day of the battle, saying his men should never go into a fight without him while he lived.

In the disastrous charge upon the stone wall, after three color bearers of Company D had been shot down in succession, the colors were taken by Capt. Murray, and he was pressing on at the head of the remnant of his company when he fell, shot through the head, his body being nearer the stone wall than that of any other Union soldier. Two days after his death his commission as Major arrived at regimental headquarters.

Capt. Murray is said . . . to have been the first man from Newcastle killed in the war. His body was brought home, and on Sunday, the 21st of December, a bitter cold day, his funeral services were held in the Congregational church, Rev. Lucius Alden officiating, and the church being crowded with the citizens, including all the town officials.

He was buried under arms by a company of State militia composed wholly of Newcastle men.

Capt. Murray served in the regular army during the Mexican war as a member of Company K, 3rd U. S. Artillery, and on the recommendation of Lieut. Col. Francis S. Belton, who commanded that regiment, was granted a certificate of merit for special gallantry at the battle of Chapultepec, near the City of Mexico, Sept. 13, 1847, and this certificate, signed by Millard Fillmore as President of the United States, and Charles M. Conrad as Secretary of War, is still preserved."

"Nathaniel F. Palmer, a native of Portsmouth, and member of Company K, 2nd Regiment, N. H. Volunteers, died Aug. 9, 1862, near Harrison's Landing, Va., at the age of 19 years. The body was removed to Harrison's Landing, where it was embalmed and forwarded by Company K, at their own expense, to his family in this city [Portsmouth].

Mr. Palmer was the first man who was enlisted by Capt. William O. Sides (the latter having been himself the first man in New Hampshire to enlist), and was the first man who died and was brought home after the regiment was mustered into the service of the United States.

The funeral services were held in the State Street Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 17, 1862. Rev. R. W. Humphries, pastor of the church, made the address.

The funeral procession was long and imposing. The coffin was appropriately draped with the American flag, and was borne on the shoulders of six of his brother firemen through the streets to Harmony Grove cemetery, where prayer was again offered, and three volleys were fired by the Goodwin Guards over the grave.

The flags throughout the city were displayed at half mast during the day."

He was appointed Midshipman, 11 March, 1815, and cruised in the frigates 'United States' and 'Independence' in the Mediterranean in 1816-20, and in the West Indies in 1822-3. He was commissioned Lieutenant, 13 Jan., 1825, commanded the schooner 'Shark' at Norfolk, in 1839, and served at the Portsmouth Navy Yard in 1839-41. He was promoted to Commander on 8 Sept. of the latter year, was in the 'Falmouth' at Norfolk in 1852-3, and became Captain, 14 Sept., 1855. He commanded the steamer 'Powhatan' in the East Indies in 1858-60. During the civil war he rendered valuable service as Commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, which post he held at his death [Commandant Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H., 1860-4; commanding Pacific Squadron, 1865-6; waiting orders, 1867]. He was retired by law, being over sixty-two years old, 21 Dec., 1861, and became Commodore on the Retired list, 16 July, 1862, and Rear Admiral, 25 July, 1866." Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography.

He was in command of the U. S. steam frigate "Powhatan," carrying the flag of Commodore Josiah Tatnall (afterwards a flag officer in the Confederate Navy), during her cruise in the East Indies, in the years 1857-60.

An interesting account of this cruise will be found in "China and Japan," by Lieut. James D. Johnston, U. S. N., Executive-Officer of the "Powhatan," Philadelphia, 1861, with full particulars of the affair at the Peiho forts, when Flag Officer Tatnall, declaring that "blood is thicker than water," set aside for a moment the duties of a neutral, and gave help to the English, repulsed by the Chinese—aid which no English Naval officer will ever forget.

"Died at St. Augustine, Florida, February 29, 1888." Navy Register, 1889.

"Born in New Hampshire, from which State he was appointed Midshipman, May 22 [1], 1822. In 1822-3 made his first cruise with his uncle, Captain R. T. Spencer [Robert Traill Spence], on board the sloop-of-war 'Cyane', a prize to the 'Constitution', under Commodore Stewart. During this cruise the 'Cyane' was stationed on the coast of Africa, and lost by fever fifty of her officers and crew. On leave, 1824-6: Naval School, New York, 1827; in 1828, attached to sloop-of-war 'Erie', Captain Daniel Turner, West India station; on the return of the 'Erie' to New York, was ordered to the Naval School, but by permission of the Department, was placed at a boarding-school in New York City, where he remained until the summer of 1831; from the summer of 1831 to February, 1834, was attached to the sloop-of-war 'Falmouth', Captain F. H. Gregory, Pacific Squadron.

Promoted to Passed Midshipman, June 1833; serving at Navy Yard, Boston, during the years 1835-6; from 1837-9, attached to United States frigate 'Fulton', stationed on the United States coast.

Commissioned as Lieutenant, December 8, 1838; from 1840-2, attached to sloop 'Yorktown', Pacific Squadron; from 1844-5, Executive-Officer of the sloop 'Preble', West India and African Squadrons; attached to Navy Yard Portsmouth, New Hampshire, 1846-7; in 1848-9, attached to sloop-of-war 'St. Mary's', Pacific Squadron; commanding the sloop-of-war 'Warren', Pacific Squadron, during the years 1850-1; in 1854, served as Executive-Officer of the sloop 'Cyane', which vessel took out the Darien Expedition, under Lieutenant Strain, who lost seven of his men by starvation. Lieutenant Pickering in his search for that party, was within four hours' march of the head-waters of the Chiquenaque, the course of which it was his intention to follow, when he was apprised by Indian runners of the arrival of Lieutenant Strain and party at Chapagana, Pacific side. Lieutenant Pickering's observations during two successive expeditions from the ship, in search of Strain, convinced him of the utter folly of any attempt to cut a canal at Darien.

After landing Lieutenant Strain with the remainder of his party at New York, the 'Cyane' was ordered to Greytown, Nicaragua, which town, in pursuance of redress, was reduced to ashes, after a bombardment of four hours. Only one house was left standing. In 1855-7, attached to United States Navy Yard, Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

Promoted to Commander, September 14, 1855; in 1859-61, Inspector of the Seventh Light-House District, headquarters at Key West.

Commissioned as Captain, July 15 [16], 1862; in 1862-3, commanding United States steam-sloop 'Kearsarge', Mediterranean and Western Islands; in 1863-4, commanding United States steam-sloop 'Housatonic,' which was blown up, off Charleston, on the night of February 17, 1864, by a submarine torpedo. As soon as recovered from wounds received on board the 'Housatonic,' took command of the United States steamer 'Vanderbilt,' which vessel participated in the capture of Fort Fisher. Detached from 'Vanderbilt' in August, 1865, and ordered to Portsmouth Navy Yard; detached from Portsmouth Navy Yard, February, 1867, when Captain Pickering went upon the retired list at his own request.

Commissioned as Commodore [from December 8, 1867] in 1871."

"Born in Portsmouth, N. H., in the year 1837,—Died August 24 [See above], 1887, at the age of fifty years.

Our deceased comrade first entered the U. S. service in 1859, at which time he shipped on board the U. S. S. 'St. Louis,' which was [in 1861] ordered to Florida, to guard Fort Pickens. Comrade Randall's term of Navy service expired in 1862, and he was honorably discharged therefrom.

After remaining at home for a short time, he enlisted August 8, 1862, as a Private in Capt. Betton's company, K, of the 13th Regiment, N. H. Volunteers, for a term of three years, and participated in nearly every engagement that the regiment was in. At the battles of Fredericksburg, Suffolk, at Bermuda Hundred, the ten days fight at Coal [Cold] Harbor, at the capture of Battery 5 in front of Petersburg, and many other engagements, the tall and conspicuous form of Charles W. Randall, could be seen at the right of the company; and yet there were more jewels to be added to his crown of honor, for in the famous charge and capture of Fort Harrison on Sept. 29, 1864, comrade Randall bore his part of that terrible battle.

On the day following the capture of the fort, and while the regiment was lying behind shallow breastworks composed of two logs, from which the rebels had been repulsed by our scanty forces in three successive charges, he was struck by a bullet, which entered the body just back of, and below the right arm, making a very bad wound, which was pronounced mortal. Notwithstanding his injury his courage never failed him, and he remarked to his comrade, First Sergeant B. F. Winn, that he wished for one more shot before leaving the field, he succeeded in loading and firing his rifle, and then made his way to the rear as best he could. His wound was probed for the bullet, but without success, and his condition was pronounced hopeless. A strong constitution and a persistent courage which nothing daunted, kept him up, however, and he was restored to partial health.

Our comrade was a constant sufferer from the effects of the rebel bullet which he carried for twenty-three years, and yet his spirit remained unbroken till the last, and when his brave soul left the poor shrunken body, encumbered with rebel lead, there passed away as brave a soldier as ever wore the blue.

Comrade Randall joined Storer Post, G. A. R., May 27, 1881, where he remained a respected member, and his death adds one more to the silent roll-call."

"Late Henry L. Richards.—It pains us to say that this noble hearted man is no more. At the commencement of the rebellion he offered his services in defence of his country. Though possessing sterling ability, he sought no high position, but only that in which he was confident of being most useful. When requested to take a commission, his reply was, 'No—I had rather be a good soldier than a poor officer.'

When the company of Sharpshooters was forming at Concord, he went on foot to that place from Portsmouth, was examined, accepted, and he returned home in the same way, to fit up for his departure. After an absence with the army of fourteen months, in which time he was exposed in several engagements, he came home wounded in November [1862] last.

As soon as his health would permit he again joined the army, on the Rappahannock, and on the 2d of July [1863], at the battle of Gettysburg, was severely wounded in his knee by a minnie ball. After remaining on the ground all night, he was taken up and carried to the hospital, where amputation was performed, while under the influence of chloroform, from the effects of which he did not revive. His age was 38 [39]. His remains will probably reach here in a few days, and the performance of the last sad rites will bring feelings of heartfelt sorrow to our whole community.

And now, and in all future time, as those who knew him well pass under the shade which is just beginning to be made by the long range of trees in Auburn street, they will be reminded of the one who selected and with his own hand placed them there to cheer the passage to the cemetery—and the name of the noble Richards will be as green in their memory as the leaves which every returning spring will renew."

Portsmouth Journal, July 18, 1863.

Soon after the death of Henry L. Richards, the name of Auburn street was changed to Richards' avenue, in memory of him.

Commissioned Lieutenant, July 10, 1875; sick leave, 1876; 'Enterprise,' special service, surveying Amazon River, 1877; and same vessel, European Squadron, 1878-80."

Hamersly's Naval Encyclopedia.

"The terrible accident in Newport harbor on Monday last," August 29, 1881, resulting in the instant death by the explosion of a torpedo, of Lieut. Commander Benjamin Long Edes and Lieutenant Lyman Greenleaf Spalding of the United States Navy, "specially receives the profound sympathy and regard of this community."

A resident of this city, and a Portsmouth boy by birth, Lieutenant Spalding was recognized and valued by those who knew him, as a man of estimable character and honorable ambition. The descendant of one of our best known families, he was born January 1, 1845, and was admitted to the Naval School at Newport, September 25 [26], 1862. He was graduated thence and entered the United States Navy [See above], receiving the commission of Master, June 28, 1871, and of Lieutenant July 10, 1875.

Although comparatively a young man, it was the good fortune of Lieutenant Spalding to have rendered very acceptable services to the Government upon various occasions, among which is specially to be noted his last cruise in the United States steamer 'Enterprise,' detailed upon survey duty along the coast of South America, and closed in May, 1880."

"It may truthfully be said of Lieutenant Spalding, that he honored the uniform which he wore, in discharging the duties which devolved upon him with a high sense of conscientiousness and fidelity. Frank and straightforward in disposition, he was possessed of many noble qualities of head and heart, which endeared him to those who knew him best."

"We voice the general sentiment of our citizens in expressing the sorrow of this community, and its sympathy for his bereaved family. In his untimely end, Portsmouth is deprived of one ever attached to its welfare, and the United States Navy sustains the loss of a trusted and promising officer and gentleman."

Portsmouth Journal, Sept. 3, 1881.

He was retired, 21 Dec. 1861, on account of age, and promoted to Rear Admiral on the Retired list, 16 July, 1862. In 1861-2 he served on special duty in Brooklyn, after which he was unemployed for one year." Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography.

It is related in Brewster's "Rambles about Portsmouth," 1st series, pages 254 and 266, that during Washington's visit to Portsmouth in 1789, he called, Tuesday forenoon, November 3rd, on Mrs. Tobias Lear, the mother of his private secretary, Col. Tobias Lear, then living near the east end of Hunking street, and "in the south-west parlor, he was introduced to and cordially greeted every member of the family—the venerable mother, her children and her grandchildren."

Among the grandchildren a babe is presented, son of Samuel Storer, a dry goods merchant of Portsmouth, then residing in the same house, "who has been christened 'George Washington.' The President places his hand gently upon the infant's head, and expresses the wish that he may 'be a better man than the one whose name he bears.'"

This child was George Washington Storer—and as his name is proudly borne by Storer Post, it is particularly worthy of remembrance that he is one of the very few men of whom it could be said "that they have thus been under the hand and received thus the personal blessing of our country's father."

"U. S. Frigate 'Raritan,'
July 22, 1847.

Sir :

It is with deep regret that I inform the Department of the demise of Midshipman Robert B. Storer, who died of fever on the passage to the United States on the 4th instant. He was buried at sea, with the ceremony due to his rank.

Mr. Storer had been attached to the 'Cumberland' under my command; and at his request was transferred to this ship, that he might lend his services to the war in whatever quarter they might be needed.

The ability and zeal with which he discharged his duties, and his exemplary, amiable and moral deportment, rendered him a great favorite on board. It will be a melancholy satisfaction to his relatives to know that every attention and kindness was extended to him during his illness, and that his shipmates feel the bereavement in common with his nearest kindred.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

F. Forrest, Captain.

Hon. John Y. Mason,
Secretary of the Navy."

In mortal breast lies here
Let us sit down awhile and weep
O'er his lone grave so dear.
Yes weep; but not for his dear sake,
Who sleeps so peacefully—
They who sleep calmly in their graves
Are better off than we.

And here he lies insensible
 Alike to pain or mirth;
 Ah, how much valor when he died
 And virtue fled from earth.
 His sufferings were terrible,
 Before he went to sleep,
 But he will never suffer more
 His slumber is so deep,
 O, never bitterer tears were wept,
 Than those I shed for him
 His dark eyes once were bright with joy,
 But sorrow made them dim."

He was promoted to Commodore and subsequently, in 1872, to the grade of Rear-Admiral, and was retired soon after. Rear-Admiral Taylor married a daughter of Major [General] Justin Dimick, U. S. Jeffress's History Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard.

In August, 1777, "the 'Raleigh,' a fine twelve-pounder frigate, that had been constructed in New Hampshire, under the law of 1775, was enabled to get to sea for the first time. She was commanded by Captain Thompson, the officer who appears as sixth on the list, and sailed in company with the 'Alfred,' 24, Captain Hinman. These two ships went to sea, short of men, bound to France, where military stores were in waiting to be transported to America.

The 'Raleigh' and 'Alfred' had a good run off the coast, and they made several prizes of little value during the first few days of their passage. On the 2d of September they overtook and captured a snow, called the 'Nancy,' which had been left by the outward bound Windward Island fleet the previous day. Ascertaining from his prisoners the position of the West Indiamen, Captain Thompson made sail in chase. The fleet was under the charge of the 'Camel,' 'Druid,' 'Weasel,' and 'Grasshopper,' the first of which is said to have had an armament of twelve pounders. The following day, or September 3d, 1777, the 'Raleigh' made the convoy from her mast-heads, and by sunset was near enough to ascertain that there were sixty sail, as well as the positions of the men-of-war. Captain Thompson had got the signals of the fleet from his prize, and he now signalled the 'Alfred,' as if belonging to the convoy. After dark he spoke his consort, and directed her commander to keep near him, it being his intention to run in among the enemy, and to lay the commodore aboard. At this time, the two American ships were to windward, but nearly astern.

In the course of the night the wind shifted to the northward, and the convoy hauled by the wind, bringing the American ships to leeward. At daylight the wind had freshened, and it became necessary to carry more sail than the 'Alfred' (a tender-sided ship) could bear. Here occurred one of those instances of the unfortunate consequences which must always follow the employment of vessels of unequal qualities in the same squadron, or the employment of officers not trained in the same high school. The 'Alfred' would not bear her canvas, and while the 'Raleigh' fetched handsomely into the fleet, under double-reefed topsails, the former fell to leeward more than a league.

Captain Thompson did not dare to shorten sail, lest his character might be suspected, and despairing of being supported by the 'Alfred,' he stood boldly in among the British ships alone, and hove-to his ship in order to permit the merchantmen astern to draw more ahead of him.

When his plan was laid, Captain Thompson filled away, and stood directly through the convoy, luffing up towards the vessel of war that was most to windward. In doing this he spoke several of the merchantmen, giving them orders how to steer, as if belonging himself to the fleet, and repeating all the commodore's signals. Up to this moment the 'Raleigh' appears to have escaped detection, nor had she any signs of preparation about her, as her guns were housed, and her ports lowered.

Having obtained a weatherly position, the 'Raleigh' now ran along-side of the vessel-of-war, and when within pistol-shot, she hauled up her courses, run out her guns, set her ensign, and commanded the enemy to strike. So completely was this vessel taken by surprise, that the order threw her into great confusion, and even her sails got aback. The 'Raleigh' seized this favorable moment to pour in a broadside, which was feebly returned. The enemy were soon driven from their guns, and the 'Raleigh' fired twelve broadsides into the English ship in twenty minutes, scarcely receiving a shot in return. A heavy swell rendered the aim uncertain, but it was evident that the British vessel suffered severely, and this the more so, as she was of inferior force.

A squall had come on, and at first it shut in the two ships engaged. When it cleared away, the convoy was seen steering in all directions, in the utmost confusion, but the vessels of war, with several heavy well-armed West Indiamen, tacked and hauled up for the 'Raleigh,' leaving no doubt of their intentions to engage. The frigate lay by her adversary until the other vessels were so near, that it became absolutely necessary to quit her, and then she ran to leeward and joined the 'Alfred.' Here she shortened sail, and waited for the enemy to come down, but it being dark, the British commodore tacked and hauled in among his convoy again. The 'Raleigh' and 'Alfred' kept near this fleet for several days, but no provocation could induce the vessels of war to come out of it, and it was finally abandoned.

The ship engaged by the 'Raleigh,' proved to be the 'Druid,' 20, Captain Carteret. She was much cut up, and the official report of her commander made her loss six killed and twenty-six wounded. Of the latter, five died soon after the action, and among the wounded was her commander. The 'Druid' was unable to pursue the voyage, and returned to England.

In this affair, Captain Thompson discovered a proper spirit, for he might easily have cut out of the fleet half a dozen merchantmen, but he appears to have acted on the principle that vessels of war should first seek vessels of war. The 'Raleigh' had three men killed and wounded in the engagement, but otherwise sustained little injury."

The "Raleigh", 32, built at Portsmouth, in 1776, under the superintendence of Captain Thomas Thompson, was captured by the British in 1778. Capt. John Barry was then in command.

"Timothy Upham was of Portsmouth. He was the son of Rev. Timothy Upham, of Deerfield, where he was born in the year 1783. His mother was Hannah, the daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Gookin, of North Hampton. Timothy Upham moved to Portsmouth in 1807, and opened a store in Market street. In June, 1811, he was appointed, by Governor Langdon, one of his aids, with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He continued in business as a merchant until 1812, when, in anticipation of a war with Great Britain, he was commissioned a Major in the United States service in March of that year. In June following he was appointed to command the detachment of troops from New Hampshire ordered to garrison Fort McClary [in Portsmouth harbor], by Governor Plumer.

In July he was commissioned as Major of the 11th U. S. Infantry. In September he joined his regiment at Plattsburg, N. Y. January 15, 1813, he was ordered to Portland as superintendent of the recruiting district of Maine. In the spring he joined his regiment, and was detailed to command a battalion which was to join Gen. Hampton's army preparing to attack Montreal. On this futile expedition, Major (now Lieutenant-Colonel) Upham fought his battalion with credit at Crysler's Field. Just before this expedition he had been promoted to the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the 21st Regiment. On the 14th of September, 1814, he was in command of his regiment, at the 'sortie of Fort Erie,' and did gallant service with his regiment, in going to the rescue, by special order of Gen. Brown, of its former gallant commander, General Miller. At the close of this campaign, with impaired health, Col. Upham was ordered upon recruiting service.

At the close of the war he resigned his commission, and in 1816 was appointed Collector of Customs at Portsmouth, and continued in that office for thirteen years. In 1819, May 15, he was appointed Brigadier General of the 1st Brigade, 1st Division New Hampshire Militia, and was promoted to Major General of the Division May 19, 1820, upon the resignation of General Clement Storer. This office he resigned May 13, 1823.

After leaving the Custom-House in 1829, he again entered upon commercial pursuits, and in 1841 was appointed Navy Agent at Portsmouth by President Harrison. He soon resigned this office, and in 1845 removed to Charlestown, Mass., following his business of a merchant in Boston. Here his success did not meet his anticipations, and, impaired in health, he retired from active business. He died at Charlestown, November 2, 1855, in the 72d year of his age."

"Whipple, Amiel Weeks, soldier, born in Greenwich, Mass., in 1818; died in Washington, D. C., 7 May, 1863. He studied at Amherst, was graduated at the U. S. Military Academy in 1841, was engaged immediately afterward in the hydrographic survey of Patapsco river, and in 1842 in surveying the approaches to New Orleans and the harbor of Portsmouth, N. H. In 1844 he was detailed as assistant astronomer upon the northeastern boundary survey, and in 1845 he was employed in determining the northern boundaries of New York, Vermont and New Hampshire. In 1849 he was appointed assistant astronomer in the Mexican boundary commission, and in 1853 he had charge of the Pacific railroad survey along the 35th parallel. In 1856 he was appointed engineer for the southern light-house district and superintendent of the improvements of St. Clair flats and St. Mary's river.

At the opening of the civil war he at once applied for service in the field, and was assigned as Chief Topographical Engineer on the staff of Gen. Irvin McDowell. In this capacity he was the author of the first maps of that part of Virginia that were issued during the war, and performed creditable service at the first battle of Fredericksburg.

Upon the second advance of the army he was attached, as Chief Topographical Engineer, to the staff of Gen. George B. McClellan, but, being appointed Brigadier-General of Volunteers, was recalled in May, 1862, and assigned to the command of the defences of Washington south of Potomac river. His service here was so well performed that he received in orders the thanks of the President of the United States.

His division was assigned in October, 1862, to the 9th corps, and took part in the movement down the eastern base of the Blue Ridge, upon the skirts of Lee's retreating army. At Waterloo his division was attached to the 3rd army corps, and he led it at the battle of Fredericksburg.

At the battle of Chancellorsville it was much exposed, and suffered more, probably, in that engagement than any other division of the army. He was shot on Monday, 4 May, 1863, when the battle was practically at an end, and, living three days, was appointed Major-General of Volunteers for gallantry in action. He had received the brevets of Lieutenant-Colonel for the Manassas campaign, Colonel for Fredericksburg, Brigadier-General for Chancellorsville, and Major-General for services during the war—all in the regular army."

Whipple, Prince—Rev. War.

His name appears on "Gen. Whipple's Staff Roll" for the Saratoga campaign in 1777, and the Rhode Island campaign in 1778.

"Prince Whipple [who is said to have been the son of an African prince] was a slave of General Whipple, but had his freedom from his master on condition of his good fighting."

When General Whipple started for Saratoga, "Prince was ordered to get the horses ready for the march. He was dilatory, and General Whipple upbraiding him, he replied thus: 'Master, you are going to fight for your liberty, but I have none to fight for.' 'Prince,' said the General, 'Behave like a man, and do your duty, and from this hour you shall be free.' Prince did his duty, accompanied his master in his expedition and was a freeman.—'Brewster's Rambles about Portsmouth.'"

Adjutant General's Report, N. H., Vol. 2, 1866.

"Prince Whipple died in this town [Portsmouth] in 1797, twelve years after his former master. He was a large, well-proportioned and fine looking man, and of gentlemanly manners and deportment." Rambles About Portsmouth, First Series.

The grave of Prince Whipple in the North Cemetery, Portsmouth, was identified a few years since by his grandson, John Smith. It is in the southern part of the cemetery, south-west from General Whipple's stone, and next east of the foot stone of Capt. Theodore Furber, but is unmarked except by two rough stones which scarcely appear above the surface of the ground.

"Whipple, William, signer of the Declaration of Independence, born in Kittery, Maine, 14 January, 1730; died in Portsmouth, N. H., 28 November, 1785. His father, William, a native of Ipswich, Mass., was bred as a malster, but, removing to Kittery, engaged in a seafaring life for several years. The son was educated at a public school in his native town, and afterward became a sailor, having command of a vessel before he was twenty-one years of age. He engaged in the European, West India, and African trade, and brought large numbers of negro slaves to this country, but afterward, during the Revolution, liberated those that belonged to him. In 1759 he abandoned the sea entirely and entered into business in Portsmouth with his brother Joseph, which connection lasted till about two years previous to the Revolution.

At an early period of the contest between the colonies and Great Britain he took a decided part in favor of the former. He was elected a delegate from New Hampshire to the Continental Congress in 1775, taking his seat in May, was re-elected, 23 January, 1776, took his seat on 29 February following, and signed the Declaration of Independence in July. He was re-elected to Congress in 1778, and declined to be chosen again, but was a member of the state assembly in 1780-4. He was commissioned a Brigadier General in 1777, commanded a brigade of New Hampshire troops at the battles of Saratoga and Stillwater, and, after the surrender of Burgoyne, signed the articles of capitulation with Col. James Wilkinson on behalf of General Horatio Gates. General Whipple was afterward selected as one of the officers under whose charge the British troops were conducted to their place of encampment on Winter

Hill, near Boston. In 1778, he participated in General Sullivan's expedition to Rhode Island, and he resigned his military appointment, 20 June, 1782. In 1780 he was appointed a commissioner of the board of admiralty, which post he declined. He was state superintendent of finances in 1782-4, appointed judge of the supreme court 20 June, 1782, and justice of the peace and quorum throughout the state in December, 1784 and acted in this capacity till his death."

Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography.

The Whipple School in Portsmouth, was thus named in 1890, in honor of William Whipple, Signer of the Declaration of Independence, by the city of Portsmouth, at the suggestion of Storer Post, G. A. R.; which, in the following year presented an oil portrait of General Whipple to the city, to be placed in the school, where it may now be seen.

Additional information in relation to General Whipple will be found in the Appendix to "The Presentation of Flags to the Schools of Portsmouth, N. H., October 9th, 1890, by Storer Post," Portsmouth, 1890; and in "The Presentation of the Portraits of General William Whipple and Admiral David Glasgow Farragut, November 20th, 1891, by Storer Post to the city of Portsmouth, N. H." Portsmouth, 1891. The Farragut portrait was presented for, and has been placed at the Farragut school, which name, at the request of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of Portsmouth, was also suggested by Storer Post.

Samuel C. Whittier, M. D., died in Portsmouth, N. H., February 1st, 1893.

"Samuel Crook Whittier was born at Dover, this state, Jan. 3, 1837, and was, consequently, 56 years old at the time of his death. He was the third son of John and Hannah (Hanson) Whittier, a grandson of Obadiah, and a cousin to the poet John Greenleaf Whittier.

He attended school at West Lebanon, Me., and was fitted for college at Franklin Academy, Dover.

He graduated from Harvard Medical College in the summer of 1862, and on the 29th of August, of the same year, was commissioned Assistant Surgeon of the 11th Mass. Vol. Infantry, which regiment he joined at Fairfax Seminary, Va., on the 4th of September following.

He remained with this regiment, rendering his country distinguished services, until May 26, 1864, when he was commissioned Surgeon of the 23d Mass. Vol. Infantry, with which organization he remained until his muster out in June, 1865. Both commissions bear the autograph of Massachusetts' celebrated war governor, John A. Andrew.

At the battle of Gettysburg, Surgeon Whittier was placed in charge of a large number of wounded Confederate officers, captured in Pickett's memorable charge, and it was to him the dying Mississippi, Gen. Barksdale, said: 'Why was Hooker succeeded by Meade? We will whip you tomorrow.'

Returning from the war he practised medicine and surgery for a time in Lynn and Boston, Mass., and in Great Falls, this state."

"On the 22d of November, 1869, Dr. Whittier took up his residence in this city, where he has since lived." "As a physician and surgeon he took high rank," and "every one of his patients considered him a friend as well as physician."

He was a member of "Storer Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, in which he was mustered May 26, 1884, and had held for several years the position of Surgeon.

On the Sunday preceeding Memorial Day, 1891, at the service held by Storer Post in Grand Army hall in commemoration of its comrades who had died during the preceding year, Dr. Whittier delivered the Memorial address, pronounced by those who heard it one of the most eloquent, impressive and tenderly pathetic efforts ever delivered in Grand Army hall on a similar occasion."

ADDENDA.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

The following names were omitted from the alphabetical list of "The Graves We Decorate," as the burial place of Lieut. Elijah Hall could not be ascertained, although he is supposed to have been buried in the Episcopal Cemetery, adjoining St. John's Church, Portsmouth, and Rev. Samuel Langdon, D. D., is buried at Hampton Falls, N. H.

A tablet to the memory of the former has been placed in St. John's, and to the latter in the North Church, Portsmouth.

Hall, Elijah—Rev. War.

"In memory of the Hon. Elijah Hall, who died
June 22, A. D. 1830,
aged 84 years.

As an Officer of the Ranger, under Capt. J. Paul Jones; a Merchant; a Representative, Senator and Councillor of this State; as Naval Officer; Member of this Church, and in his other relations,
he sustained the character of a

Tablet, St. John's Church, Portsmouth.

"Died. In this town, on Tuesday last [June 22, 1830], Hon. Elijah Hall, aged 87 [See above]. Capt. Hall was Lieutenant in the Navy in the Revolutionary war, sailed under John Paul Jones in the 'Ranger'; was many years elected Counsellor from this district; and for several years prior to his death was Naval Officer of the District of Portsmouth.

He was, in private life, an estimable citizen, a fair merchant, a tender parent, and an honest man."

Portsmouth Journal, June 26, 1830.

"Lieut. Elijah Hall," a "brave and meritorious officer, . . . served with the Chevalier John Paul Jones," . . . and "was a lieutenant under the Chevalier in the 'Ranger.'"

Lieut. Hall had entered on board this vessel at Portsmouth, N. H., before her departure for France [Nov. 1, 1777], and was in her with Jones in his cruise on the coasts of Scotland and Ireland, in the descent on Whitehaven, and in the battle with the 'Drake' [April 24, 1778]. When [Lieut.], Simpson behaved so badly as to disobey orders, it was Hall that was selected to arrest him, and to command the 'Drake' in his stead. The prominent traits of Lieut. Hall's character were promptitude and energy; of which he gave a remarkable instance in repairing the 'Drake' in the course of one night, with the assistance of forty men, after Simpson had pronounced it impossible in her then shattered condition.

Lieut. Hall went to Brest with Jones; and when, through the benevolence of the latter, Simpson was put in command of the 'Ranger' for the purpose of returning to America, Hall occupied the post of first lieutenant.

After his return to the United States, he was engaged in several expeditions against the enemy, on board the same ship, with Commodore Whipple, and was very successful in making captures, most of which arrived safely in port. When the 'America,' 74, was assigned to Jones, he offered Lieut. Hall a very honorable and efficient station in her; but the gift of that vessel to France frustrated his good intentions.

Lieut. Hall eventually proceeded in the 'Ranger,' with other ships of war, to assist in the defence of Charleston, S. C., where he fell into the hands of the enemy, in common with the garrison, by capitulation [May 11, 1780]. He returned to New Hampshire, but was not exchanged until a general surrender of prisoners. He never resigned his commission, and was always ready for active service.

At the close of the war of the Revolution he engaged in commercial pursuits, by which he enriched himself; but suffered considerably by the British orders in council, and the French Berlin and Milan decrees.

Although offered a pension by government, he would not receive it, but accepted the appointment of Naval Officer for Portsmouth, a situation which he still retains [1825], at the advanced age of 83 [See above]. With the snow of so many winters upon his head, he discharges his duty, it is understood, with the greatest satisfaction to the merchants and others, affording proof of an uncommon vigor of constitution and strength of intellect. Faithful to his country and true to his duty in every situation, there can be no doubt that a consciousness of probity has ensured for him that intellectual tranquillity which is so favorable to human life.

As far as the author of this work is informed, Commodore [Richard] Dale and Lieutenant Hall are [were in 1825] the only surviving officers of all those who, at various times, sailed with and fought under the Chevalier John Paul Jones. Time has laid others in the dust; but seems to have preserved these two venerable men as a sample of the stout hearts and strong frames of the heroes who braved the shores and squadrons of Great Britain, and plucked laurels in her very ports to deck the brow and promote the glory of infant America."

Sherburne's Life of John Paul Jones.

An interesting account of the cruise of the "Ranger," under John Paul Jones, will be found in the N. E. H. G. Register, Vol XXIX, pages 13 and 170.

Hon. Elijah Hall long resided and died in the house now Nos. 36 and 38 Daniel street, Portsmouth.

President of Harvard College, 1774 to 1780. Offered the prayer for the assembled army the night previous to the battle of Bunker Hill.

Constitutional Convention in 1788, for the adoption of the Federal Constitution.

Pastor of the Church at Hampton Falls, 1781 to 1797.

Died, Nov. 29, 1797."

Tablet, North Church, Portsmouth.

"In the auditorium of the North Congregational church in this city, near the entrance to the northern aisle, is a mural tablet, exquisitely wrought in statuary marble, spotless and pure as was the scholar, statesman, patriot, whose name it celebrates, erected by Mrs. Thomas Aston Harris of Portsmouth, N. H., in loving memory of her great-grandfather, Rev. Samuel Langdon, D. D."

"Dr. Langdon was a pious man of letters, and throughout his life was connected with and interested in educational matters, and while assistant pastor of the North church he taught the grammar school in Portsmouth up to the date of his departure for Louisburg. Afterward, during his full pastorate, he built the house in which Capt. and Mrs. Harris now reside, on Pleasant street, and occupied it during his pastoral connection with the church. The mansion has been in the possession of the family and occupied by them uninterruptedly since that period.

He graduated at Harvard in 1740, with high honors, his conspicuous merit afterward winning distinguished recognition by his elevation to the presidential chair of his college. In public affairs he naturally exercised a profound influence; this was felt in the Constitutional Convention of 1788, where, by his voice and example he contributed more perhaps, than any other man to the favorable action of that body."

Portsmouth Daily Eve. Times, Jan. 1, 1891.

••Landgon, Samuel, clergyman, born in Boston, Mass., 12 Jan. 1723 [See above]; died in Hampton Falls, N. H., 29 Nov., 1797.

He was graduated at Harvard in 1740, and while teaching in Portsmouth, N. H., studied theology, and was licensed to preach. In 1745 he was appointed Chaplain of a regiment, and was present at the capture of Louisburg.

On his return he was appointed assistant to Rev. James Fitch, of the North Church of Portsmouth, was ordained Pastor in 1747, and continued in that charge till 1774, when he became President of Harvard. His ardent patriotism led him to adopt measures that were obnoxious to the Tory students, and although he endeavored to administer the government of the college with justice, his resignation was virtually compelled in 1780. The next year he became pastor of the Congregational church at Hampton Falls, N. H.

In 1788 he was a delegate to the New Hampshire convention that adopted the Constitution of the United States, often led its debates, and did much to remove prejudice against the Constitution.

He was distinguished as a scholar and theologian, and exerted a wide influence in his community. The University of Aberdeen gave him the degree of D. D. in 1762, and he was a member of the American academy of arts and sciences from its foundation. He published 'Summary of Christian Faith and Practice' (1768); 'Observations on the Revelations' (1791); 'Remarks on the Leading Sentiments of Dr. Hopkins' System of Doctrines' (1794); and many sermons. In 1761, in connection with Col. Joseph Blanchard, he prepared and published a map of New Hampshire." Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography.

PRE-REVOLUTION.

The services of the following named men in the British Navy and in the Colonial Wars, while we were yet subjects of Great Britain, should cause their memory to be preserved.

Coues, Peter—British Navy.

Marks the Grave
of Peter Coues
who died
Nov. 29, 1818.
Æt. 86"

Stone.—Pleasant St. Cemetery.—North east.
For date of birth and age see below.

"Among the venerable citizens of Portsmouth of half a century ago [1869], we well remember Capt. Peter Coues, a gentleman of independent circumstances, who might be seen, with his cane under his arm on State street, or in the vicinity. His residence previous to the fire of 1813, was on the southwest corner of Atkinson and State streets [the latter being then named Buck street], on the spot where W. J. Loughton's house now [1869] stands. In the old dwelling house was a store where for many years he kept ship chandlery, merchandise, groceries, etc.

In early life Capt. Peter Coues was pressed into the British service [See below]. He was at one time sailing-master of the famous 'Royal George,' which was afterwards, in 1782, sunk in the British Channel [Portsmouth harbor, England] with eight hundred men on board. He also served in the capacity of midshipman. After several years service in the British Navy, he returned to Portsmouth before the American Revolution, where, by that urbanity of mind and simplicity of manners for which seafaring men of liberal views are generally distinguished, he obtained a good standing among his fellow citizens, and died on the 29th of November, 1818, at the advanced age of eighty-three years [See below]."

Rambles About Portsmouth, Second Series.

Capt. Peter Coues was born in Portsmouth, July 30, 1736. He was the son of Peter Coues, senior, who was born in the Parish of Saint Peters in the Island of Jersey, in the English Channel, about the year 1710, settled in Portsmouth, and married Mary Long of this town, Nov. 4, 1735. Mary Long, probably born in Plymouth, England, was the daughter of Emanuel and Mary (Carne) Long, and grand-daughter of George and Ursula (Wills) Carne, of "Endelha" and "Plimton," near Plymouth, England.

As Commodore Digby Dent, R. N.—who was Commodore on the Jamaica Station in 1747, and a "Commissioner of the Navy" from 1756 to 1761 (See "Charnock's Biographia Navalis," London, 1796, Vol. IV, pages 378-380), served many years in the West Indies, when he perhaps visited Portsmouth—was his mother's cousin; Capt. Peter Coues was probably appointed a Midshipman in the British Navy, when a boy, through his influence, and the statement in the "Rambles," that he was "pressed," is doubtless an error. Another cousin, Captain Cotton Dent, R. N., also commanded a sloop-of-war on the Jamaica Station, in 1744 (See "Charnock," Vol. V, pages 440-1).

Family traditions relate that Capt. Coues took part in several battles, and was at one time sailing-master of the "Royal George."

The Dents have continued a Naval family, and Vice Admiral Charles Bayley Calmady Dent, R. N., retired,—great-grand grandson of Captain Cotton Dent, R. N., brother of Commodore Digby Dent, R. N., both sons of Captain Digby Dent, R. N., and Ursula (Carne) Dent—is the seventh in a direct line, father and son, of British Admirals and Captains.

Captain Digby Dent, R. N., who married a sister of Mary (Carne) Long died a Commodore on the Jamaica Station August 19, 1737 (See "Charnock," Vol. IV, page 57).

Loss of the Royal George.

WILLIAM COWPER.

"The 'Royal George,' of 108 guns, while undergoing a partial careening in Portsmouth harbor [England], was overset about 10 a. m., August 29, 1782. The total loss was believed to be near one thousand souls."

"Toll for the brave!

The brave that are no more!

All sunk beneath the wave,

Fast by their native shore!

Eight hundred of the brave,
Whose courage well was tried,
Had made the vessel heel,
And laid her on her side.

A land-breeze shook the shrouds,
And she was overset;
Down went the Royal George,
With all her crew complete.

Toll for the brave!
Brave Kempenfelt is gone;
His last sea-fight is fought,
His work of glory done.

It was not in the battle;
No tempest gave the shock:
She sprang no fatal leak,
She ran upon no rock.

His sword was in its sheath,
His fingers held the pen,
When Kempenfelt went down
With twice four hundred men.

Weigh the vessel up
Once dreaded by our foes!
And mingle with our cup
The tear that England owes.

Her timbers yet are sound,
And she may float again,
Full charged with England's thunder,
And plough the distant main:

But Kempenfelt is gone,
His victories are o'er;
And he and his eight hundred Shall plough the wave no more."

"Samuel Hale was born in Newbury, Mass., in 1718, and graduated at Harvard College in 1740. He removed to Portsmouth soon after, and became a teacher. He engaged in the Louisburg expedition as a Captain in Col. Moore's Regiment, and was made Major of the same, Oct. 7, 1745. After his return he became the instructor of the Latin grammar school in Portsmouth, and continued as such for near forty years, distinguished for discipline and aptness as a teacher. For his services he was rewarded by the grant of the town of Weare, which for a long time was known as Halestown. He was Representative and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for Rockingham, and died July 7, 1807, in the 89th year of his age." Adjutant General's Report, N. H., Vol. 2, 1866.

Hart, John—Colonial War.

"In Peace
Amidst ye Rage of Noise & War, Here Rests the Remains of Col. John Hart, Esqr. who departed this Life
Octo. 30th, 1777.
Aged 72 Years."

Stone.—North Cemetery.—North-east.

"Col. John Hart was of a prominent family of Portsmouth. He was Captain of a company in Col. Meserve's regiment of 1756, and Lieutenant-Colonel of the same, which regiment was attached to the expedition against Crown Point."

"In 1758 New Hampshire raised still another regiment for 'the Crown Point Expedition.' This numbered eight hundred men, and was commanded by Col. John Hart, of Portsmouth. A portion of the regiment [under Col. Hart] was ordered to join the expedition against Louisburg, and the remainder did duty under Lieut. Col. Goffe on the western frontier."

Adjutant General's Report, N. H., Vol. 2, 1866.

"Col. John Hart was the owner of the land now used as the North burying-ground, and it did not become town property until 1753, little more than a century [140 years] ago, when Col. Hart sold it to the town for £150, on condition that it should be kept for a burying-ground." Rambles About Portsmouth, First Series.

THE NATION'S DEAD.

1861—1865.

[From the Round Table.]

Four hundred thousand men,
 The brave—the good—the true,
 In tangled wood, in mountain glen,
 On battle plain, in prison pen,
 Lie dead for me and you!
 Four hundred thousand of the brave
 Have made our ransomed soil their grave,
 For me and you!
 Good friend, for me and you!

In many a fevered swamp,
 By many a black bayou,
 In many a cold and frozen camp
 The weary sentinel ceased his tramp,
 And died for me and you!
 From Western plain to ocean tide
 Are stretched the graves of those who died
 For me and you!
 Good friend, for me and you!

On many a bloody plain
 Their ready swords they drew,
 And poured their life-blood, like the rain,
 A home—a heritage to gain,
 To gain for me and you!
 Our brothers mustered by our side;
 They marched, and fought, and bravely
 died,
 For me and you!
 Good friend, for me and you!

Up many a fortress wall
 They charged—those boys in blue—
 'Mid surging smoke, and volleyed ball
 The bravest were the first to fall!
 To fall for me and you!
 These noble men--the nation's pride--
 Four hundred thousand men have died,
 For me and you!
 Good friend, for me and you!

In treason's prison-hold
 Their martyr spirits grew
 To stature like the saints of old;
 While, amid agonies untold,
 They starved for me and you!
 The good, the patient, and the tried,
 Four hundred thousand men have died,
 For me and you!
 Good friend, for me and you!

A debt we ne'er can pay
 To them is justly due;
 And to the nation's latest day
 Our children's children still shall say,
 "They died for me and you!"
 Four hundred thousand of the brave
 Made this our ransomed soil their grave,
 For me and you!
 Good friend, for me and you!

THE NATION'S DEAD.

1861—1865.

Four hundred thousand men,
 The brave—the good—the true,
 In tangled wood, in mountain glen,
 On battle plain, in prison pen,
 Lie dead for me and you !
 Four hundred thousand of the brave
 Have made our ransomed soil their grave,
 For me and you !
 Good friend, for me and you !

In many a fevered swamp,
 By many a black bayou,
 In many a cold and frozen camp
 The weary sentinel ceased his tramp,
 And died for me and you !
 From Western plain to ocean tide
 Are stretched the graves of those who died
 For me and you !
 Good friend, for me and you !

On many a bloody plain
 Their ready swords they drew,
 And poured their life-blood, like the rain.
 A home—a heritage to gain,
 To gain for me and you !
 Our brothers mustered by our side ;
 They marched, and fought, and bravely
 died,
 For me and you !
 Good friend, for me and you !

Up many a fortress wall
 They charged—those boys in blue—
 'Mid surging smoke, and volleyed ball
 The bravest were the first to fall !
 To fall for me and you !
 These noble men—the nation's pride—
 Four hundred thousand men have died.
 For me and you !
 Good friend, for me and you !

In treason's prison-hold
 Their martyr spirits grew
 To stature like the saints of old ;
 While, amid agonies untold,
 They starved for me and you !
 The good, the patient, and the tried,
 Four hundred thousand men have died.
 For me and you !
 Good friend, for me and you !

A debt we ne'er can pay
 To them is justly due ;
 And to the nation's latest day
 Our children's children still shall say,
 " They died for me and you !"
 Four hundred thousand of the brave
 Made this our ransomed soil their grave,
 For me and you !
 Good friend, for me and you !

GEORGE WASHINGTON STORER,

Rear Admiral, U. S. Navy.

It is related in BREWSTER'S "Rambles about Portsmouth," 1st series, pages 254 and 266, that during Washington's visit to Portsmouth in 1789, he called Tuesday forenoon, 3rd November, on Mrs. Tobias Lear, the mother of his private secretary, Col. Tobias Lear, then living near the east end of Hunking street, and "in the southwest parlor he was introduced to and cordially greeted every member of the family—the venerable mother, her children, and her grandchildren."

With the other grandchildren a babe was presented, son of Samuel Storer, a dry goods merchant of Portsmouth, then residing in the same house, "who had been christened 'George Washington'." The President places his hand gently upon the infant's head, and expresses the wish that he may 'be a better man than the one whose name he bears'".

As the name of this child—Rear Admiral GEORGE WASHINGTON STORER, U. S. Navy—is proudly borne by STORER POST, it is particularly worthy of remembrance that he is one of the very few men of whom it could be said "that they have thus been under the hand and received the personal blessing of our country's father."

Rear Admiral STORER was correct in his department, attached to his profession, and devoted to his country. As an officer in the Navy he has served faithfully, and has filled with credit many important positions both ashore and afloat.

As a mark of respect to his memory, it is hereby directed that at the Portsmouth, N. H. Navy Yard the flags be hoisted at half-mast and thirteen minute-guns be fired at meridian on the day after the receipt hereof.

LINCOLN'S SPEECH AT GETTYSBURG.

NOVEMBER 19, 1863.

"Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

(Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography.)

OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

"To New Hampshire men the whole nation is a sepulchre, for their blood has watered the soil of every state but their own, and their dust is mouldering by every great river and in every mountain pass from Maine to Georgia—from the Charles to the Rio Grande and the Red River of the North. They died before Warren at Bunker Hill, before Washington at Yorktown, under the eye of Jackson at New Orleans; they were thrown in their hammock-shroud from the bloody deck of Paul Jones, and Lawrence, and Decatur, and Farragut; they marched with Sherman, they charged with Sheridan, they conquered with Thomas, they fought it out on his own line with Grant. But no soldier of my native state ever fell on his own soil, or was buried in his dear native earth, unless the restless ocean cast his body on its narrow sea coast, or the love and care of parent, or brother, or child, restored to their sorrow and pride the corpse that had fallen a thousand miles from home."

in the Massachusetts Legislature, March 14, 1889.)*

DECORATION DAY.

BY ANNIE DOUGLAS ROBINSON (MARION DOUGLAS).

Loud, ringing strains of victory,
Low dirges, soft and tender,
Fair wreaths, where Spring's last violets meet
The rose's opening splendor ;
So proud ! so sad ! what is it, say ?
A funeral or a festal day ?

A funeral for remembered love
Still makes the true heart falter ;
A festival, for Valor's grave
Is ever Freedom's altar ;
And Glory's flower its proudest bloom
Shows only on a soldier's tomb.

("Boston Evening Transcript," May 27, 1916.)

THE NUMBER OF NAMES.

PRINTED RECORD, 1893. The total number of names was 402, alphabetically arranged in one list and not by Cemeteries as in later Records.

PRINTED RECORD, 1907. The total number of names was 574. Between 1893 and 1907 there were nineteen removals from one cemetery to another, including four to the G. A. R. Lot; the name of Thomas W. Heheir ("Proprietors", South) was corrected to Thomas Hare, and four names were omitted—one, George F. Partridge ("Sagamore") removed to Massachusetts, and three, Alfred E. Davis ("Cotton's"), Samuel Harding, Jr., ("Proprietors", North) and James Norton, 2nd ("St. Mary's"), erroneously inserted in 1893, leaving 398 names. 176 new names were added.

PRINTED RECORD, 1915. (Additional List, 1907—1915, only. The total number of names, including the 1907 List and the new Names, was 722. Between 1907 and 1915 there were two removals from one cemetery to another, viz:—Peter Bonnen from "Greenland—Brackett Farm" to "Greenland—New Cemetery," and John Murray from "New Castle—Tarlton's Cemetery" to "New Castle—Riverside Cemetery"; and three names were omitted—Robert Driver, removed to Pine Grove Cemetery, Manchester, N. H., and Matthew W. Earing and Charles R. Green, erroneously inserted in 1907 (all "Harmony Grove"), leaving 571 names. 151 new names were added.

PRINTED RECORD, 1917. The total number of names is 745. Since 1907 there have been several changes in the Record under "Part" to more exactly describe the position without actual change in the location; John A. Payne has been removed from one part of "Harmony Grove" to another; and between 1915 and 1917 the records of James M. Goodrich and Francis F. Young have been transferred from "Proprietors' Cemetery—South of Pond" to "Proprietors' Cemetery—North of Pond" to correct erroneous entry in 1915; and two names have been omitted—John J. Smart ("Cotton's") and Michael Moran ("Calvary"), erroneously inserted in 1915, leaving 720 names. 25 new names are added.

Two women are included in 1917—Mary A. Foster, "Army Nurse, Civil War," ("Proprietors", North), and Ann Downing, "With Co. C, 9th U. S. Infantry, Mexican War" (North Cemetery); the latter was first included in 1907.

JACOB WALDEN, “Revolutionary War,” “Ship Ranger,” “North Cemetery,” appears in Remick’s “Roll of the Ranger”, “when she sailed on her first cruise Nov. 1, 1777, from the Piscataqua River”, as “Steward, Jacob Walden, of Portsmouth”;—but he is not shown by “Buell’s Paul Jones” to have been attached to the “Ranger” in the battle of April 24, 1778; which confirms a family tradition that he joined the ship for passage to France only, and left soon after her arrival there. He was pensioned as “Jacob Walden, Mariner, Ship Ranger”. (Pension List, Act of March 18, 1818, Report Secretary of War, Washington, 1820.)

THE “RANGER.”

The Continental ship “Ranger,” first called the “Hampshire,” but named the “Ranger” by Congress June 14, 1777, when Captain John Paul Jones was appointed to the command, was built by Captain Tobias Lear of Portsmouth (Grandfather of Rear Admiral George W. Storer, U. S. Navy), at the Continental Shipyard, Langdon’s (now Badger's) Island, in the Piscataqua river, opposite Portsmouth, N. H., in 1777; Col. John Langdon, Continental Agent. (See Builder's Accounts and Biographical Notice, "The Granite Monthly," Concord, N. H., Vol. II, New Series, 1907, pages 85-92.)

(Bronze Tablet, Ferry Landing, Badger's Island.)

The "Ranger" arrived at Brest, France, on May 7, 1778, with her prize, the "Drake". On July 27, 1778, when Captain Jones left her, First Lieutenant Simpson took command of the "Ranger" by authority of the American Commissioners in France, and August 21 she sailed for America, arriving in the Piscataqua, Oct. 16, 1778. She afterwards made several cruises on the coast; continuing under the command of Captain Simpson, until captured.

The "Ranger" was taken by the British at the surrender of Charleston, S. C., May 12, 1780; added to the Royal Navy. Renamed the "Halifax," arrived at Plymouth, England, "came into harbour on 20th July, 1781, and was docked on 6th of August, 1781, and undocked the same day."

The "Ranger"—"Halifax" was recommended for sale as "Fit for any Trade in the Merchant Service" (Advertisement of sale, "The London Gazette," Sept. 25 to 29, 1781), and though valued Sept. 11, 1781, preparatory to the sale—"Hull £949 10s. 7d." "Two Cabouses £8, 2s. 0d.," "Copper Kettles Two £3 0s. 8d."—"Total, £1115, 10s. 3d."—was sold at Plymouth Yard "on the 13th October, 1781, to Mr. William Scott of Plymouth for £650." Naval Officer; Member of this Church, and in his other relations,
he sustained the character of a Patriot and an upright Man.”

(Tablet, St. John's Church, Portsmouth.)

“Died. In this town, on Tuesday last [June 22, 1830], Hon. Elijah Hall, aged 87. Capt. Hall was Lieutenant in the Navy in the Revolutionary War, sailed under John Paul Jones in the ‘Ranger’; was many years Counsellor from this district; and for several years prior to his death was Naval Officer of the District of Portsmouth.

“He was, in private life, an estimable citizen, a fair merchant, a tender parent, and an honest man.”

(“Portsmouth Journal,” June 26, 1830.)

“Lieut. Elijah Hall was born Dec. 9, 1742, at Raynham, Mass., son of Phillip and Huldah (Leonard) Hall; he went to Portsmouth, N. H., when young, was a ship builder and merchant, married Elizabeth, daughter of Col. James Stoodley, of Portsmouth. He remained on the ‘Ranger’ until she was destroyed [taken by the British], was captured and paroled, but not exchanged until the end of the war. Was commissioned Naval Officer, Jan. 28, 1818, of the port here [Portsmouth, N. H.] and held it until his death, which occurred June 22, 1830, at Portsmouth.”

Lieut. Hall returned to America in the “Ranger”, occupying the post of First Lieutenant under Captain Simpson, and continued in that position until the ship was captured. In 1829 Lieut. Hall wrote:—

“I served my Country faithfully during the whole Revolutionary War, and part of the time with the gallant Paul Jones as his First Lieutenant, and was in several desperate battles; I commanded a Marine Battery during the siege of Charleston [S. C.] and there lost the sight of my left eye by the bursting of a shell, and have never asked my Country for a pension. During the last War [1812-1815] I lost my only three sons in battle [Leonard, James and Ashton S. Hall], all of whom were officers, while defending their Country’s flag; the youngest [Ashton S. Hall, Midshipman, U. S. Navy] was in the ‘Wasp’, Capt. Blakely, in the action and capture of the ‘Reindeer’, and for his gallantry Congress voted him a sword.”

(Extracts from an unpublished letter written by Lieut. Elijah Hall in 1829.)

Mr. John H. Sherburne, author of "Sherburne's Life of Paul Jones," Washington, 1825, and New York, 1851, in which a good notice of Lieut. Elijah Hall appeared (re-printed from the 1825 edition in "The Graves We Decorate," 1893, pages 73-74), was his son-in-law.

An interesting account of the cruise of the "Ranger" under John Paul Jones was printed in the "N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XXIX, pages 13 and 170.

Hon. Elijah Hall long resided and died in the house Nos. 36 and 38 old numbers, Daniel Street, Portsmouth.

SAMUEL HOLBROOK.

"Deaths. In this town [Portsmouth, N. H., September 15, 1836], Mr. Samuel Holbrook, aged 76 [79], a Soldier of the Revolution. Mr. H. took up arms in defence of his country, at the first roll of the drum. He was with Washington at Cambridge during the operations of the American Army against the British in Boston. He left the Army soon after and enrolled himself with the gallant John Paul Jones. He was stationed with three others in the main-top of the Bonne Homme Richard ['Bon Homme Richard'] during the severe action with the Serapis, and was the only one of the four who escaped from that tremendous struggle."

(New Hampshire Gazette, September 20, 1836.)

The name of Samuel Holbrook does not appear on the "Roll of the Officers, Seamen, Marines, and Volunteers, who served on board the 'Bon Homme Richard', commanded by Commodore John Paul Jones, in her cruize made in 1779", printed in "Sherburne's Life of John Paul Jones", 1st Edition, Washington, 1825, and 2nd Edition, New York, 1851; in the list printed in "Buell's Paul Jones", New York, 1900, Vol. II; nor in that printed in "The Logs of the Serapis-Alliance-Ariel", Naval History Society's Publications, Vol. I, New York, 1911:—but does appear on the "Roll of the Ranger" and "Roster of the Ranger" printed above:—and it therefore seems evident that the notice in the "New Hampshire Gazette", stating that he served on the "Bon Homme Richard", is incorrect. He was pensioned as "Samuel Holbrook, Seaman, Ship Ranger" (Pension List, 1820.)

THOMAS SIMPSON, of Portsmouth, N. H., First Lieutenant of the "Ranger", under Paul Jones, succeeded him in command of that vessel at Brest, France, July 27, 1778, and remained in command until her capture at Charleston, S. C., May 1780. He afterwards commanded the privateer ship "Alexander" of Portsmouth. After the war "he was master of the ship 'Ceres', and died on the homeward passage from Martinico, West Indies, Feb. 18, 1784". He was "buried at Portsmouth, N. H., March 16, 1784", but there is no stone in any Portsmouth cemetery to mark the spot. (See Notes and Queries, "Boston Transcript", Feb. 25 and May 24, 1905.) Mrs. Martha Simpson, his widow, a sister of Governor John Langdon, married Jan. 1st, 1787, at Portsmouth, Hon. James Sullivan, of Boston, afterwards Governor of Massachusetts.

NATHANIEL KENNARD

"Died on the 24th inst. [June 24, 1823], Capt. Nathaniel Kennard of this town [Portsmouth, N. H.], aged 68.

His character demands none of the usual unmeaning panegyric of an obituary notice. To those who knew him, his services, his sufferings and his worth will ever render his memory dear. All who partake of the blessings secured by the enterprise and valor of our Revolutionary heroes, cannot but feel an interest in the events of his life.

At the commencement of the war of the Revolution, he entered as a volunteer in one of the first regiments in Massachusetts, for the term of one year.

At the expiration of that engagement, he entered on board a private armed vessel—was captured, carried to England and kept in close confinement at the Mill Prison for two years and a quarter, being encouraged with no other prospect than a still protracted confinement, or a termination of it by being hanged as a rebel.

Thence he was sent to France in a cartel, where on the 20th April, 1779, he entered on board the 'Bon Homme Richard,' under the celebrated John Paul Jones, and was with him in some of the most desperate enterprises, in which that Commander was engaged. From that vessel he was put on board a prize and ordered for France.

He was again captured and carried into Hull in the north of England, transported to Spithead, put on board the 'Unicorn' frigate and compelled to do duty until at the imminent hazard of his life he escaped in the Island of Jamaica. Thence he returned to America a little before the close of the war.

After the peace of '83 he engaged in the merchant service and continued a reputable shipmaster until near the commencement of the late war [1812-15], when he was appointed by government to the command of a Revenue Cutter and continued in the same to the close of the war.

After that period, until his death, he was employed as Inspector of the Customs at this port. In all his various services, Capt. Kennard sustained the character of an honest man and a good citizen."

("Portsmouth Journal," July 5, 1823.)

Capt. Nathaniel Kennard was born on Kennard's hill, in Eliot, Maine, then a part of Massachusetts, and died in Portsmouth, N. H. His son, Capt. Nathaniel Kennard, Jr., of Portsmouth, was captured in the "Harlequin" privateer in the War of 1812, and afterwards died in the West Indies of yellow-fever.

An interesting notice of Capt. Nathaniel Kennard will be found in Remick's "Kittery and Eliot, Maine, in the American Revolution," pages 134-135.

Washington, D. C.)*

Mary Appleton Foster was born in Portsmouth, N. H., February 26, 1829, and was baptized by Dr. Nathan Parker, of the South (Unitarian) Church, Portsmouth, May 17, 1829.

She was the daughter of John Welsh Foster, 1789-1852, and Mary (Appleton) Foster; and sister of Joseph Hiller Foster, 1825-1885, and of Miss Sarah Haven Foster, 1827-1900, author of the "Portsmouth Guide Book," and of the poem, "Not Long Ago," printed on pages 73-74,—all well known citizens of Portsmouth.

"John Welsh Foster (James, Nathan, Joseph, Jacob, Reginald),"—a descendant of Reginald Foster who came from England to Ipswich, Mass., in 1638; and a son of James Foster, born Ipswich, Mass., December 18, 1747, married Elizabeth Hiller, and died, a resident of Boston, Mass., in 1793—was "born June 6, 1789, married August 31, 1824, in Portsmouth, N. H., Mary Appleton, born in 1789 [1799], in Boston, daughter of Dr. Nathaniel Walker Appleton (Nathaniel, Nathaniel, John, John, Samuel) and Sarah, daughter of William Greenleaf, of Boston (as stated in the "Genealogy of the Appleton Family;" W. S. Appleton, Boston, 1874, page 22.)

"Mrs. Foster's great grandfather was Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Appleton, of Cambridge, in honor of whom the Appleton Chapel at Harvard University was named, and Dr. Appleton's grandfather was President John Rogers of Harvard."

"John Welsh Foster, after his father's death, in 1793, lived for nine years with his uncle, Joseph Hiller, then Collector of the port of Salem. He settled in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1812, and in 1819 was chosen Deacon of the Unitarian Church; he held that position, and was one of the Superintendents of the Sunday School as long as he lived.

"A memorial of John W. Foster, edited by Andrew P. Peabody, D. D., pastor of the church, was published in Portsmouth, in 1852. He died January 10, 1852, in Portsmouth. [Mrs. Foster died in November, 1879, in Portsmouth, age 80.]"

Miss Mary A. Foster was Treasurer of the "Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society," of Portsmouth, in the summer of 1862; and in November of that year volunteered as an Army Nurse.

She was attached to Epiphany General Hospital, Washington, D. C., November 21, 1862; and to the General Hospital, Fairfax Seminary, Virginia, November 22, 1862, to May 19, 1863; the Finley General Hospital, District of Columbia, in April 1865; and the Harewood General Hospital, District of Columbia, in June 1865; as shown by the Hospital Muster Rolls.

A sketch of Miss Mary A. Foster's experience as an Army Nurse, written by her when about eighty years of age, for a Club in which she was interested, gives further particulars of her service.

Her niece, Miss Margaret Foster, of San Rafael, California, has her War Diary.

Miss Foster left Portsmouth, Sept. 5, 1862, for Washington; and staying there with some friends, at first joined a hospital established in a church on "H" street, passing the days there only. After a short time she fell ill, and was obliged to leave for two or three weeks; and not long after, that hospital was closed.

On recovery, she sought and obtained an appointment as an Army Nurse from Miss Dorothea L. Dix, and was sent to the Fairfax Seminary General Hospital, in Virginia, some six miles beyond Alexandria.

This was in November 1862. When hot weather came in the spring of 1863, all the patients who could travel were sent North, and part of the hospital being closed, Miss Foster went home for a few months, to recuperate.

In October of that same year, 1863, Miss Foster accepted an invitation to go to St. Louis and work under the Western Sanitary Commission. After a trip to Nashville, Tenn., without result, she was sent down the river to New Orleans, La., to help take charge of the "Soldier's Home" there. Preferring service as an Army Nurse, she soon sought and obtained a position in the Hospital of the Thirteenth Army Corps, established in a huge cotton press. "Here began some months of the hardest, but yet the most satisfactory work which I ever did,"—she says.

In March 1864, most of the patients in that hospital were sent North, and the remainder were transferred to the "Marine Hospital," a large permanent institution, whither Miss Foster followed them; and in June of that year, this hospital having become less crowded, and feeling pretty well worn out, she came North to New York, on a transport, being nearly wrecked in a severe gale off Charleston, S. C., and passing safely through a serious railroad accident between New York and Portsmouth.

Her third, and last experience as an Army Nurse, came in the spring of 1865, when Miss Dix sent a request for Miss Foster to report to her for duty in Washington; but the very day she started came the glad news of the fall of Richmond.

After a few weeks at the Finley and the Harewood General Hospitals, Washington, both were closed, one after the other; and the war happily ended, Miss Foster joyfully returned home.

Miss Mary A. Foster was one of the founders of the Portsmouth Public Library, and had a great deal to do with its beginning.

In 1871, Rev. James De Normandie, minister of the Unitarian Church, together with Miss Foster and others, established a Young People's Union, in three rooms at the corner of Congress and Vazughan streets, Portsmouth, where young people might resort in the evening. They collected about a thousand volumes, which, when the Union ceased to exist in 1874, were stored in the basement of the Unitarian Chapel.

In 1880, Miss Foster conceived the idea of loaning these books to the people of the city. Mr. Robert E. Rich (a veteran of the War for the preservation of the Union, who lost his right leg at the battle of Antietam—Record, "Harmony Grove Cemetery"—afterwards long Librarian of the Portsmouth Public Library,) catalogued them, and Miss Foster and other ladies arranged and covered them. They secured a little room in the Custom House for temporary use, and on January 1st, 1881, the Public Library began the issue of books. After several changes of location the Library was finally established in its present building, formerly the "Portsmouth Academy," in 1896.

"Word was received this morning [November 19, 1913] of the death at San Rafael, California, yesterday of Miss Mary A. Foster. Until ten years ago Miss Foster was all her life a resident of Portsmouth [excepting during her Army service], and she and her sister Sarah were well known and highly honored here. She represented the best type of New England character. Her zeal for the highest things in life, moral, intellectual and religious, never flagged, and she could always be counted upon for loyal service to her friends, her church and her town. She will be remembered here with respect and affection."

(Rev. Alfred Gooding, in "The Portsmouth Times," November 19, 1913.)

Miss Mary A. Foster died at San Rafael, California, November 18, 1913, age 84, and is interred in Proprietors' Cemetery, North of Pond, Portsmouth.

She is the only one of the Portsmouth Army Nurses who was born, resided most of her life, and is buried in Portsmouth.

MISS MARY LEWIS ISRAEL.

ARMY NURSE.

ARMORY SQUARE GENERAL HOSPITAL, WASHINGTON, D. C.
1863-1864.

"The records show that on the muster rolls of the Armory Square General Hospital, Washington, D. C., for March and April, May and June, July and August, and September and October, 1863, Mary L. Israel is reported present as a female nurse, attached to hospital April 18, 1863. The rolls for July and August, September and October, and November and December, 1864, report her present, attached to hospital as a nurse May 2, 1864, and discharged December 22, 1864."

(Records Adjutant General's Office, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.)

Mary Lewis Israel was born in Great Falls (Somersworth), N. H., October 8, 1835, and baptized by Rev. Andrew P. Peabody of the South (Unitarian) Church, Portsmouth, N. H., November 26, 1835.

She was the daughter of Robert Wain and Mary Sheafe (Cushing) Israel, of Little Harbor, Portsmouth, N. H.

Her mother, Mary Sheafe Cushing, was born Dec. 29, 1814, in Roxbury, Mass. She married December 24, 1834, Robert Wain Israel of Philadelphia, Pa., born March 2, 1809, died February 22, 1847. She died August 7, 1903.

Mrs. Israel was the daughter of Charles Cushing, born Dec. 22, 1775, who married March 12, 1805, Ann Huske Sheafe, born January 14, 1781, daughter of Jacob and Mary Huske (Quincy) Sheafe, of Portsmouth. She died at Little Harbor in 1876, aged 93 [95]. Charles Cushing died August 6, 1849. He was a descendant of Matthew Cushing from Hingham, England, who came in the ship "Diligent" to Hingham, Mass., in 1638.

"He [Charles Cushing] resided in the old Gov. Benning Wentworth house at Little Harbor, Portsmouth, N. H., immortalized by Longfellow in his poem on the marriage of Gov. Wentworth to his servant maid."

("The Genealogy of the Cushing Family," by James S. Cushing, Montreal, 1905, pages 180-181.)

Miss Mary Lewis Israel was attached to the Armory Square General Hospital, 6th Street, West, South of Canal, from April 18th, 1863, to October 1863, and from May 2, 1864, to December 22, 1864, as shown by the Hospital Muster Rolls,

A diary, kept at that time by her mother, states that she left Portsmouth, N. H., April 14, 1863, "to become an Army Nurse in the Armory Square Hospital, Washington, D. C." After an absence of five months she came home on furlough, returning to the Hospital May 2, 1864, and remaining, except for a short furlough, until she returned home, January 11, 1865.

Miss Mary Lewis Israel was married at the old Wentworth House, Little Harbor, Portsmouth, her family home, on May 9, 1865, just one month after Lee's surrender at Appomattox, by Rev. James De Normandie, of Portsmouth, to Assistant Surgeon George Smith Rose, U. S. Army, of Kingston, Canada, Surgeon of her ward "G," at the Hospital.

"Rose, George Smith—Born in Canada, Appointed from Massachusetts, Acting Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Army, Dec. 1862 to Sept. 1863, First Lieutenant, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Volunteers, Sept. 24, 1863, Brevet Captain and Major, U. S. Volunteers Oct. 25, 1865, Mustered out Oct. 31, 1865. First Lieutenant, Assistant Surgeon U. S. Army, May 14, 1867. Died [Madison Barracks, Sackett's Harbor, New York] Nov. 20, 1876 [age 39].

("Massachusetts in the Army and Navy, 1861-1865," Boston 1895, Vol. II, page 441.)

Dr. and Mrs. Rose had four children, who are no longer living. Mrs. Rose died in Camden, Maine, June 6, 1915, age 80. Interment, Cataraqui Cemetery, Kingston, Ontario, Canada, by the side of her husband and children.

MRS. MARY T. WILDES.

ARMY NURSE.

GENERAL HOSPITAL, FORT MONROE, VA.
1864-1865.

"The records show that Mrs. Marie [Maria] L. Campbell, and Mrs. Mary F. [T.] Wildes were attached to the General Hospital, Fort Monroe, Virginia, on September 9 and 6, 1864, respectively, and that they were on duty in that hospital as nurses until May 30, 1865."

(Records, Adjutant General's Office, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.)

Mrs. Mary T. Wildes was the widow of Lieutenant George T. Wildes, of Co. K, Captain Joseph H. Thacher, 16th Regiment, New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, who, born in Massachusetts, removed to Portsmouth several years before the war. He enlisted October 21, 1862, as Private, was appointed First Lieutenant November 4, 1862, and died of disease at New Orleans, Louisiana, April 20, 1863, age 30.

Mrs. Wildes' maiden name was Mary Tyler McLaughlin, and she was born at Georgetown, Mass., March 5, 1836, married November 1855, and soon after came to Portsmouth to reside. Together with her husband, she was prominent in the choir and beloved in the Middle Street Baptist Church and society. Soon after her husband's death Mrs. Wildes returned to Georgetown, after eight years' residence in Portsmouth.

Mrs. Wildes and Mrs. Maria L. Campbell, widow of Assistant Surgeon Sylvester Campbell, of the 16th Regiment, were appointed Army Nurses by Miss Dorothea L. Dix, early in September 1864; and meeting at and going South from Portsmouth, where Mrs. Wildes then was, served together in the General Hospital, Fort Monroe, Virginia, until the close of the war. After the war both friends were teachers under the Freedmen's Bureau, in schools for negroes in Florida, in a small city about a hundred miles from Jacksonville.

After two years more of teaching in the South Mrs. Wildes came to Andover, Mass., in 1871, where in the historic Stone House she made a home for herself and family.

She died in Andover June 21, 1909, age 73. Interment, Harmony Grove Cemetery, Georgetown, Mass.

MRS. MARIA L. CAMPBELL.

ARMY NURSE.

GENERAL HOSPITAL, FORT MONROE, VA.

1864-1865.

"The records show that Mrs. Marie [Maria] L. Campbell and Mrs. Mary F. [T.] Wildes were attached to the General Hospital, Fort Monroe, Virginia, on September 9 and 6, 1864, respectively, and that they were on duty in that hospital as nurses until May 30, 1865."

(Records, Adjutant General's Office, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.)

Mrs. Maria L. Campbell was the widow of Assistant Surgeon Sylvester Campbell, of the 16th Regiment, New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, who, previously a resident of Sanbornton, N. H., was credited to Portsmouth, when appointed Assistant Surgeon, November 6, 1862 (N. H. Register, page 769.) He died of disease at Carrollton, near New Orleans, Louisiana, February 6, 1863.

Mrs. Campbell was born in Maine, March 30, 1836, daughter of Rev. Albert O. and Mary (Brown) Manson, who, when she was a few weeks old, removed to Portsmouth, N. H. She early became a public school teacher, and in July 1858, married Dr. Sylvester Campbell, and resided in Tilton, N. H.

After Dr. Campbell's death, she visited Mrs. Mary T. Wildes, in Georgetown, Mass., widow of a Lieutenant in the same Regiment; and a little later, early in September, 1864, both friends were appointed Army Nurses by Miss Dorothea L. Dix, and going from Portsmouth, served together in the General Hospital, Fort Monroe, Virginia, until the end of the war. Afterwards both were teachers, under the Freedmen's Bureau, in schools for negroes, at Lake City, Florida.

Returning North, Mrs. Campbell taught music at Pennington Seminary in New Jersey, and later became Preceptress of the Seminary. There she married Professor John Tiddy, and they went to Springfield, Mass., to reside. Rev. Mr. Tiddy died; and in September 1875, she became the second wife of Dr. Orlando B. Douglas, and for twenty-five years their home was in New York City. There she studied medicine, and won the degree of M. D. With her husband she travelled extensively in America and Europe: but in 1901 they went to Concord, N. H., for a permanent home.

Mrs. Douglas was prominent and active in many lines of endeavor; being Chaplain of the Woman's Relief Corps in the Department of New Hampshire, and also of the National Woman's Relief Corps. She was elected President of the National Association of Army Nurses in 1911 and 1912; and died while in office, on January 18, 1913. Her husband, Dr. Orlando B. Douglas, of Concord, N. H., now Medical Director of the Department of New Hampshire, Grand Army of the Republic, and one son, Edwin Rust Douglas, of Philadelphia, survive her.

NOT LONG AGO.

A POEM OF 1870.

BY SARAH HAVEN FOSTER.

Not long ago
A darker cloud our Country's sky o'ercast
Than whirling stormrifts in November's blast ;
When Winter, stealing through sad autumn's gate,
Found deeper cold on hearths made desolate
Than all his snow.

It is not long
Since timid Spring, on her first southern breath,
Brought news of terror and a scent of death ;
Since Summer met no answer to her smiles,
And the drum's clangor in her leafy aisles
Hushed the birds' song.

Have we forgot
The ranks that answered freedom's warning bell,
Braved the death tempest and the prison hell,
With sturdy hearts hurled back the impending doom,
But when the trump of Victory called them home, Responded not ?

Not all forget !
The struggling widow keeps with tears the day
That turned her staff to dust, her hope to clay ;
The shadow on the mother's brow that fell
When her brave darling kissed his last farewell
Is brooding yet.

Some yet can tell
Of hours of anguish, worse than sudden doom,
That left them helpless in a helpless home,
Crippled or broken from the cruel strife,
Fettered forever in the race of life
By painful spell.

Oh! hearts at ease!
Your ease was bought at price of others' pain;
Another's loss your ransom and your gain;
Your homes secure with flowers of joy are strown,
But other homes grew dark to bless your own;
Remember these!

With open hand
Pay back the debt where not, alas! too late;
Bid Comfort seek the hearths left desolate;
Save those who saved you from misfortune's blast,
And prove our Country, mindful of the past,
A grateful land!

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

PREPARED BY JOSEPH FOSTER,
MEMBER STORER POST.

1861—1921. SIXTY YEARS AFTER SUMTER.

IN PREPARATION.

A volume of more than three hundred pages is in preparation and will soon be completed, containing a "Record of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines who served the United States of America in the War for the Preservation of the Union, 1861—1865, and in earlier and later wars, buried in the City of Portsmouth, N. H., and in the neighboring towns of Greenland, New Castle, Newington and Rye, January 1st, 1921."

It will comprise the Memorial Day Books printed by me in 1893, 1907, 1915, 1917 and 1921.

The first gives a Record of "The Graves We Decorate," May 30, 1893, and includes notices of many Portsmouth men who served in the Revolutionary War, War of 1812, Mexican War, and in the War of 1861—1865.

The 1907 book gives a Record of the Graves, May 30, 1907; and that of 1915, an additional list. 1907—1915.

That of 1917 gives a complete Record of "The Graves We Decorate," as of January 1st, 1917, including 745 names, with notices of Portsmouth Men who distinguished themselves in their Country's service.

And the last, 1921, gives the Record of forty-eight additional graves, making 793 in all; with much information of interest, as stated in the "Contents," on the next page.

The Volume will also include two other books prepared by me.

First.—"The Presentation of Flags to the Schools of Portsmouth, N. H., October 9, 1890, by Storer Post, G. A. R.," giving the addresses in full; with an "Appendix relating to the Whipple and Farragut Schools," telling the story how they were so named by the City at the request of Storer Post.

Second.—"The Presentation of the Portraits of General William Whipple, Signer of the Declaration of Independence, and of David Glasgow Farragut, Admiral, United States Navy, November 20, 1891, by Storer Post, G. A. R., to the City of Portsmouth, N. H., for the Whipple and Farragut Schools," with the addresses in full as delivered at the public presentation. Both books contain much information as to Admiral Farragut's life, his death at our Navy Yard and his funeral services in Portsmouth; and as to General Whipple, his life, services and family.

Orders will be received in advance, payable on delivery of the volume. Cloth bound. Price $2.50.

OUR FLAG.

BY REV. EDWARD A. HORTON, D. D.

Chaplain Massachusetts Senate, and Edward W. Kinsley Post, G. A. R., Boston.

Why do I love our flag? Ask why
Flowers love the sunshine. Or, ask why
The needle turns with eager eye
Toward the great stars in northern sky.

I love Old Glory, for it waved
Where loyal hearts the Union saved.
I love it, since it shelters me
And all most dear, from sea to sea.
I love it, for it bravely flies
In freedom's cause, 'neath foreign skies.

I love it for, its blessed cheer,
Its starry hopes and scorn of fear;
For good achieved and good to be
To us and to humanity.

It is the people's banner bright,
Forever guiding toward the light;
Foe of the tyrant, friend of right,
God give it leadership and might!

STORER POST,
NO. 1, DEPARTMENT OF NEW HAMPSHIRE,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

ORGANIZED NOVEMBER 8, 1867.
CHARTER SURRENDERED JUNE, 1874.
REORGANIZED JUNE 27, 1878.

ORGANIZATION—FIRST CHARTER.

"On the 6th day of November, 1867, Major A. S. Cushman, Commander of the Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R., after consultation with the Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief, and subject to the approval of the Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, signed a charter authorizing the establishing of Storer Post, No. 1, at Portsmouth, in the Provisional Department of New Hampshire, with George E. Sides, Reuben Kimball, Jr., Edwin A. Tilton, Daniel J. Vaughan, Charles L. Tidd, Frank E. Goodwin, C. Dwight Hanscom, Matthew T. Betton, John S. McDonald, and William J. Morrison, as charter members. This action was approved." (Address of Marcus M. Collis, Past Commander, Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., and Member of Storer Post, at the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic, by Storer Post, April 6, 1891.)

Storer Post was organized by Major Cushman in Rechabite Hall, No. 38 Market Street, Portsmouth, on Friday evening, November 8th, 1867. Matthew T. Betton, Captain Co. K, 13th New Hampshire Volunteers, also Commanding 81st New York Volunteers, was elected the first Commander; with George E. Sides and Charles L. Tidd, Senior and Junior Vice-Commanders; Edwin A. Tilton, Adjutant; and Reuben Kimball, Jr., Quartermaster.

On November 16th, at the request of Major Cushman, the Post nominated and submitted to him a list of officers for a Provisional Department, with Captain Matthew T. Betton as Provisional Commander, and Edwin A. Tilton, as Adjutant General. These nominations were approved, and the Provisional Department was thus duly organized, and began the work of establishing the Grand Army of the Republic on a permanent basis in New Hampshire.

An historical sketch of the formation of Storer Post and the Provisional Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., prepared by Edwin A. Tilton, of Portsmouth, a charter member, first Adjutant of Storer Post, and Adjutant General of the Provisional Department of New Hampshire, was printed in the "Journal of the First to Thirteenth Encampments, Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R.," Concord, N. H., 1889. A more detailed account was given by him in an address at the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the organization of Storer Post, November 14, 1892, which was printed in the "Daily Evening Post" of Portsmouth, November 16, 1892.

The ten original charter members of Storer Post were all living on the 25th anniversary in 1892, but only three, Daniel J. Vaughan, C. Dwight Hanscom, and Matthew T. Betton, were then members of the Post.

Three of the ten original charter members, C. Dwight Hanscom, John S. McDonald, and William J. Morrison, were living on the semi-centennial anniversary in 1917, and the first two were members of the Post. All died before January 1, 1921.

Storer Post was so named in honor of Rear Admiral George Washington Storer, U. S. Navy, 1789—1864, of Portsmouth, N. H., at the suggestion of Edwin A. Tilton, one of the charter members, and the "Father" of Storer Post, who first wrote to the Department Commander of Massachusetts, G. A. R., requested him to grant the charter, and arranged for his visit to Portsmouth to muster the charter members and organize the Post.

The Semi-Centennial of the organization of Storer Post was celebrated at a special meeting of the Post at Grand Army Hall, Daniel Street, Portsmouth, November 23, 1917.

Articles by Joseph Foster, member of Storer Post, covering the history of the Post for fifty years, were printed in the "Portsmouth Times" of November 8 and 24, 1917.

Two pamphlets relating to the patriotic work of the Post, compiled by him, were printed in 1890 and 1891, viz.—

"The Presentation of Flags, by Storer Post, G. A. R., to the Schools of Portsmouth, N. H., October 9th, 1890. Portsmouth, N. H., 1890."

"The Presentation of Portraits of General William Whipple, Signer of the Declaration of Independence, and of David Glasgow Farragut, Admiral United States Navy, by Storer Post, G. A. R., to the City of Portsmouth, N. H., for the Whipple and Farragut Schools, November 20, 1891. Portsmouth, N. H., 1891."

These Schools were so named by the City at the request of the Post.

Storer Post's beautiful "Memorial Record Book for the Personal War Sketches of Comrades," presented to the Post on its twenty-fifth anniversary, celebrated November 14, 1892, in memory of Col. Pierse Long, Revolutionary War, of Portsmouth (Proprietors' Cemetery—North of Pond), by his granddaughter, Mrs. Henry H. Ladd (Mercy Elizabeth Long), of Portsmouth, is now at the Public Library, Portsmouth. See Printed Records, 1893 and 1917.

1. Members Post, Jan. 1st, 1921.

Thomas Entwistle, 3rd N. H.—Born in England, January 12, 1840, coming to Portsmouth with his parents in 1847. Enlisted in 1861 in Company D, 3rd N. H. Infantry. Wounded July 10, 1863, at Morris Island, S. C. Wounded and captured May 16, 1864, at Drury's Bluff, Va. He was confined in Libby Prison, Richmond, for three weeks, and at Andersonville, Georgia, for seven months, and then at Florence, S. C., for two months. During his next transfer to Goldsboro, N. C., he, with several others, jumped from the cars, and found their way to Wilmington, N. C., which had just been taken by the Union forces. Entering there, February 22, 1865, Washington's Birthday, he relates—"Strange to say the first regiment we met was my own regiment, the Third New Hampshire, and it seemed as if the boys would eat me."

SONS OF VETERANS.

HENRY L. RICHARDS CAMP, NO. 12.

"The first Camp of Sons of Veterans was organized at Pittsburg, Penn., in 1881, by Major A. P. Davis, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic." (Storer Post Roster, 1891, page 29.)

Henry L. Richards Camp, No. 12, Sons of Veterans, was organized prior to 1885 in Portsmouth, but after a few years ceased to exist. The exact dates are not available for this Record.

Henry Lakeman Richards of Portsmouth, for whom the Camp was named, a "noble hearted man" of "sterling ability" (Portsmouth Journal, July 18, 1863), Sergeant Co. F, 2nd U. S. Sharpshooters, mustered in November 26, 1861, for three years, was wounded at the battle of Antietam, Maryland, September 17, 1862. After recovery he rejoined his regiment, was severely wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, Penn., July 2d and died July 4th, 1863, age 39.

Before the war, with James B. Parrott, of Portsmouth, he placed the long range of trees in Auburn Street leading to the South Cemetery. Soon after his death the name of this street was changed to Richards Avenue in his memory. See Printed Record, 1893, and Records "Proprietors' Cemetery, South of Pond, 1917."

There was a second Camp named for Henry L. Richards, after the disbandment of the Marcus M. Collis Camp, but of a different number. No further information is available for this Record.

MARCUS M. COLLIS CAMP, NO. 53.

Marcus M. Collis Camp, No. 53, Division of New Hampshire, Sons of Veterans, of Portsmouth, auxiliary to Storer Post, G. A. R., was instituted February 26, 1891, with fifty-six charter members,

The Camp was named in honor of Marcus M. Collis, 21st, 36th and 56th Massachusetts Infantry, of Portsmouth, Commander of Storer Post, 1882—1884, and of the Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., 1885. (See Printed Record, 1921, page 38-114.)

The Roster of the Camp, May 30, 1891, was printed with Storer Post's Roster of that date, and gives the names of sixty-two members, with "Father's Name" and "Service" in each case. Clement M. Waterhouse,—son of James A. Waterhouse, 16th N. H. Infantry and N. H. Heavy Artillery, Charter Member Storer Post, 1878,—was then Captain of the Camp, After some years the Camp surrendered its charter, but the exact date is not available for this Record.

CAPTAIN THOMAS ASTON HARRIS CAMP, NO. 3.

Captain Thomas Aston Harris Camp, No. 3. Department of New Hampshire, Sons of Veterans, of Portsmouth, auxiliary to Storer Post, G. A. R., was instituted January 22, 1917, with Judge Edward H. Adams, Mayor of Portsmouth, 1909—1910,—son of L. Woodbury Adams, U. S. Navy, U. S. S. "Ossipee." (Printed Record, 1917, page 23)—as Commander.

The Camp was named in honor of Captain Thomas Aston Harris, a prominent citizen of Portsmouth—son of Portsmouth's famous teacher, William C. Harris, 1788—1853,—who served as an officer in the U. S. Navy in the War for the Preservation of the Union. He entered the service in 1861 as Acting Master, was promoted to Acting Volunteer Lieutenant, and Acting Volunteer Lieutenant Commander, U. S. Navy, for good service; and during the war commanded no less than seven U. S. ships.

After the war, he represented the Pacific Mail Steamship Company at Hong Kong, China, for seven years; and later was President of the New Hampshire National Bank, Portsmouth. He died June 26, 1893, age 69. See Records "Proprietors' Cemetery, South of Pond, 1917."

Captain Harris was an interested and generous member of Storer Post, presenting with his brother, Captain Robert Harris, the G. A. R. Lot in Proprietors' Cemetery, South of the Pond, to the Post in 1892, for the burial of Comrades not otherwise provided for. Captain Robert Harris was 1st Lieutenant, 17th Mass. Infantry, and Captain C. S., U. S. Volunteers, in the War for the Preservation of the Union, and afterwards General Manager of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. See Records "Proprietors' Cemetery, South of Pond, 1917." The lot is now cared for under the bequest of their brother, Acting Ensign J. Louis Harris, U. S. Navy, of Portsmouth. See Records "Harmony Grove Cemetery, 1917." All three brothers were members of Storer Post. (Printed Records, 1917, page 64, and 1921, page 26—102.)

Mrs. Thomas Aston Harris presented a beautiful American flag to the Camp at its meeting held February 26, 1917. Many members of Storer Post, and Storer Relief Corps, were guests on the occasion. Meshach H. Bell, Commander of Storer Post, who July 2, 1890, as Commander, had mustered Captain Harris into Storer Post, in making the presentation for Mrs. Harris, outlined the good service of Captain Harris in the Navy, and described particularly the brilliant capture of a Confederate battery at Hill's Point, Virginia, April 19, 1863, when he, commanding the U. S. Steamer "Stepping Stones," with an Army detachment of Co. G, 10th N. H. Infantry, a Portsmouth Company, and other troops, beached his vessel under this battery,—which, while patrolling the Nansmond River, he had often passed peacefully,—when the troops quickly captured it in an unexpected assault.

Several Comrades of Storer Post who took part in the capture were at the presentation.

Percy A. Moulton is Commander of the Camp for 1921.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

STORER RELIEF CORPS, NO. 1.

Storer Relief Corps, No. 1, of Portsmouth, N. H., auxiliary to Storer Post, G. A. R., was organized June 16, 1887, under a provisional charter from the Woman's State Relief Corps of Maine, with sixteen charter members. It numbered forty-one members May 30, 1891, all of whom were connected by ties of kindred with men who served their country in the War for the Preservation of the Union.

Its Roster, May 30, 1891, was printed with Storer Post's Roster of that date, and gives the names of forty-one members, with "Tie," "Veterans' Name" and "Service" in each case. Mrs. Catherine A. Osgood—wife of Charles N. Osgood, 3rd Maine Infantry, a Charter Member of Storer Post under its Second Charter, 1878,—was then President of the Corps.

The Corps soon after surrendered its charter, but the exact date is not available for this Record.

STORER RELIEF CORPS, NO. 6.

Storer Relief Corps, No. 6, National Organization, Woman's Relief Corps, of Portsmouth, N. H., auxiliary to Storer Post, G. A. R., with membership open to all loyal women, was organized early in the history of Storer Post, but after some years surrendered its charter. The exact dates are not available for this Record.

It was reorganized May 9, 1892, with seventy-two charter members. Mrs. Sarah Burnham,—wife of Lorenzo T. Burnham, 29th Maine Infantry, Commander of Storer Post, 1887,—was President of the Corps for the years 1892, 1893 and 1894.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the reorganization of Storer Relief Corps, No. 6, was celebrated in G. A. R. Hall, Portsmouth, May 9, 1917. The Department President, with many members of Storer Relief Corps, Storer Post, G. A. R., and Captain Thomas Aston Harris Camp, Sons of Veterans, were present.

Mrs. Adaline P. Kent, of Portsmouth,—wife of John Horace Kent, 43rd Mass. Infantry, Charter Member Storer Post, 1878,—a member of Storer Relief Corps, No. 6, under its first organization, was President of the Department of New Hampshire, W. R. C., 1884—1885.

Miss Edith M. Paul,—daughter of Henry S. Paul, 13th N. H. Infantry, a devoted member of Storer Post for many years, Commander, 1901, and Quartermaster for 1921,—President of Storer Relief Corps, 1906, is Department President, W. R. C., January 1, 1921.

Mrs. Annie C. Goodrich is President of the Portsmouth Corps for 1921.

Storer Relief Corps, No. 6, has long been, and is now a highly valued and most efficient and helpful auxiliary to Storer Post.

OUR HERO DEAD.

[IN PART.]

"We never cease to get inspiration from Abraham Lincoln. Today there comes to us with imperative propriety his inspired words delivered on the battlefield of Gettysburg after that miraculous engagement. What we say here is of passing moment, but what these men did, their deeds, preserved civilization itself, and can never perish from the memory of man; nay, even more, they shall increase in importance as time shall give us clearer vision of present-day history.

"A part of these boys actually sleep under the sacred soil of France, some in other places, but in our hallowed memory of them, in a vague but inspiring way we shall feel, as we pass this spot, that it belongs to them, and that here is the immortal shrine bearing their stars of gold and their names of love, and that here their spirits lie or dwell, here their valor shines and here their influence shall radiate forever, as an inspiration to the future lads who follow with the same old flag.

"We have a trust, we who live and follow on in the procession of the living, to keep these historic 'Plains' neat, clean and attractive, as becomes the place where our boys are to be remembered.

"God bless these fallen boys, may we never forget them. May we never forget the sacrifice, nor the cost of the thing which they saved. May our love for the flag be greater because they died for it. May we hate the mob more and stand by the government firmer. May we not allow another war to come to make other graves like these because we are narrow or bigoted, because we are forgetful and careless, remembering that these boys went to war feeling that wars were to be ended by their sacrifices.

"May they rest in peace, and the flag for which they died forever wave, o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

(Hon. John H. Bartlett, Governor of New Hampshire.)

"As Mayor of the city I accept and receive this monument on behalf of all our citizens. I assure that this city which has so much of history and brave deeds to its credit will never forget these, our latest and newest heroes.

"We will always keep their memory green, and we will also keep this marker in its place and in repair, and this beautiful park in good condition out of respect to their memory.

"The sacrifice of these twenty-four boys shall never be forgotten in Portsmouth, and their heroic deeds will be our pride forever."

(Hon. Albert Hislop, Mayor of Portsmouth.)

AN APPENDIX RELATING TO THE WHIPPLE AND FARRAGUT SCHOOLS.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

OUR COUNTRY.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Our thought of thee is glad with hope,
Dear country of our love and prayers;
Thy way is down no fatal slope,
But up to freer sun and airs.

Tried as by furnace fires, and yet
By God's grace only stronger made;
In future tasks before thee set
Thou shalt not lack the old time aid.

The fathers sleep, but men remain
As true and wise and brave as they;
Why count the loss without the gain?
The best is that we have to-day.

No lack was in thy primal stock,
No weakling founders builded here;
There were the men of Plymouth Rock,
The Puritan and Cavalier;

And they whose firm endurance gained
The freedom of the souls of men,
Whose hands unstained in peace maintained
The swordless commonwealth of Penn.

And time shall be the power of all
To do the work that duty bids;
And make the people's Council Hall
As lasting as the Pyramids.

Thy lesson all the world shall learn,
The nations at thy feet shall sit;
Earth's farthest mountain tops shall burn
With watchfires from thine own uplift.

Great, without seeking to be great
By fraud or conquest—rich in gold;
But richer in the large estate
Of virtue which thy children hold.

With peace that comes of purity,
And strength to simple justice due,
So owns our loyal dream of thee,
God of our fathers! make it true.

Oh, land of lands! to thee we give
Our love, our trust, our service free:
For thee thy sons shall nobly live,
And at thy need shall die for thee.

THE EXERCISES.

O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?

Whose broad stripes and bright stars
Through the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watched
Were so gallantly streaming.
While the rocket's red glare,
The bombs bursting in air
Gave proof through the night
That our Flag was still there,
The Star Spangled Banner,
O long may it wave
O'er the land of the free
And the home of the brave.

TO THE coming generations should be constantly brought a full realization of the sacrifices of the men of '61-'65 in behalf of the free institutions of America. That community thrives best wherein public opinion is stirring and constant in past events as well as in the current happenings which compel a hearing. History grows old, but it should never become stale, and that which concerned the state, decades or centuries ago, is as much a part of present history as effect is a relative of cause. The men of '61 were sons of the patriots of '76, and the pages of New Hampshire's history, made memorable by Langdon, Whipple, Stark, Sullivan and an innumerable host of heroes, were again illumined by the deeds of men who gather to-day under the folds of the starry banner, victorious for the right on a hundred bloody fields.

From this year of grace to the Continental congress of '76 is a far cry; but on occasions like this of to-day Time comes back, and space is abridged. One lives in the past for a moment, and memory brings back tender partings, cheered with hope, yet tempered with misgiving, the latter, alas! too often realized; brings back the weary march, the hurried bivouac, the crack of the rifle or the rush of shell, and one by one, in obedience to an involuntary roll-call, former comrades pass in review with a silent—"Here!"—until the dreamer awakens to a realization that the companion in tent and field is "present" only in memory, but is, perhaps, happily accounted for, and his resting place shrouded with the blossoms of each recurring May.

But living men are here today, some of whom bear the ineffaceable marks of the bloody strife of a quarter century ago; some who stood with Farragut and dared the danger the old hero courted and despised; men who marched through Georgia with Sherman; who fought at Vicksburg with Grant; at Chancellorsville and Look-out Mountain with Hooker; who stood with Burnside at bloody Fredericksburg, with Little Mac at Antietam; who had sailed through a deluge of fire at New Orleans and Mobile; men who followed Sheridan up the Shenandoah valley; who came at last through Five Forks and the Petersburg trenches to victory and a restored nation, at Richmond.

The presence of these men on this occasion is a living lesson to the youth of today. The lesson of the Flag is manifest in the person of the men who saved it; could anything be more impressive? They have come back from the brink of the grave to tell the world that where floats the Stars and Stripes, liberty and equal rights are man's birthright, which none shall dare assail.

As the flag passes from hand to hand, with an added blessing as it goes, its final custodian should receive it with a vow of allegiance so heartfelt that he may experience an honest joy wherever its broad field greets his eye, and attune his heart and train his hand to sing its glory and maintain its honor in whatever station in life he may be called.

Under the Flag, as a student, he will imbibe the virtues of loyalty and fidelity; and steadfast to those virtues as a citizen in after life, under the same Flag his manhood will make good the promise of his youth. The lass of today will be the matron of tomorrow, and she will tell to the patriots of a future generation how the stars and stripes floated over the common schools wherein her youth was passed, and where she learned the duty of love to country, and of sacrifice to maintain its integrity; and they shall rise and call her blessed.

Moved by a patriotic impulse, a few weeks ago, the members of Storer Post voted to donate to the several schools of this city, a handsome national color, to be displayed daily when weather permits. Having secured the adoption by the city of the names, "Whipple" and "Farragut," for the new schoolhouses, the programme which has been carried out today, was carefully arranged, and the formal investiture, so anxiously anticipated, has now become a fact accomplished.

THE PRESENTATIONS.

The morning dawned delightfully; everybody was up and stirring at an early hour, breakfast was swallowed with little ceremony, judging from the numbers on the street, and when at 8.30 the line was formed on the Square, Storer Post was greeted by an assemblage respectable in character and in point of size.

The High School

As announced in the official programme, the Post proceeded directly to the High school, halted and faced the side entrance on Chapel street, the speakers and custodians of the different flags at the front and centre. The pupils filed out and took position in rear of the Post, in charge of George D. Whittier, teacher of music in the public schools. At the entrance stood the Rev. Alfred Gooding, Principal Upton and his corps of assistants. At the command:

ATTENTION !

Commander M.H. Bell ordered the drum corps to play, to which Bandmaster Kay responded with The Star Spangled Banner. This being concluded, Comd'r Bell addressed Rev. Mr. Gooding in the following pithy and expressive words:

ADDRESS OF COMD'R M. H. BELL.

REV. SIR:—It is my privilege as the representative of Storer Post, Grand Army of the Republic, to present you, and through you to the scholars of the High School, this beautiful emblem of our country.

May the flag as it waves daily over their heads, spreading its gentle influence so lovingly around, fill the heart of each scholar with the warmest patriotism and love of country and the flag, that through life it shall be ever present in their thoughts.

For liberty and union, one and inseparable, now and forever, we fought, and hundreds of thousands of our comrades died; and that they may not have died in vain, the Grand Army of the Republic seeks that our starry flag may everywhere through the great republic, teach the coming generations that all men are equal before the law and that this union must and shall be preserved.

See to it, scholars of the High school, if another crisis comes, that you too declare by word and deed if need be, that this government of the people, for the people, and by the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Mr. Gooding received the color and turning it over to Comrade Charles F. Goodwin of the Post, and John F. Tracy of the High school, responded in substance as follows:

REV. MR. GOODING'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Commander: In behalf of the mayor of the city of Portsmouth, who is unavoidably absent, I thank you and your comrades of Storer Post for this beautiful flag, the emblem of Liberty, the pride of a reunited and happy country. This custom is a most excellent one, generally observed throughout the country; and it is a source of great satisfaction to know that we in Portsmouth are not slow in imitating it. It is, as it should be, to the pupils of the schools, a perpetual reminder of the higher privileges we enjoy, higher than those attained by any nation on the globe.

It teaches us to cherish the lofty spirit of patriotism and self-sacrifice you and your comrades displayed in the country's hour of need, and to emulate the deeds of their fathers in upholding the sacred trusts transmitted through succeeding generations.

Again I thank you, and in behalf of the city I accept this beautiful flag, the gift of Storer Post.

As the flag was unfurled from the towering staff, the pupils sang "America;" but not a cheer was heard, the ritual of the Grand Army making no provision therefor. At the close of the singing Commander Bell gave the order:

ATTENTION! SALUTE THE FLAG!

And where a thousand throats should have made Heaven's blue vault ring with patriotic cheers, fifty hands went to the rims of fifty hats instead; and the flag was saluted. That ritual needs revising. The march was then resumed and upon arriving at

The Farragut School

The line was formed as before, and in an eloquent address, made doubly so by the speaker's service with Farragut on the Brooklyn before the war and as aid to the Admiral on the flagship Hartford at the memorable fight in Mobile Bay, and in command of the gunboat Selma in the same action.

Capt. Arthur R. Yates, U. S. N., said :—

CAPT. YATES' ADDRESS.

Mr. Seymour, Gentlemen of the city government, teachers and pupils :

The duty that has devolved upon me of presenting the flag of our country to this school is one exceedingly gratifying, not only that in its performance I am carrying out the highly patriotic purposes of the G. A. R.; but that in connection with our beloved Flag, the opportunity is offered of mentioning one after whom this school is named, who did so much to make that Flag wave victoriously at the close of a rebellion greater than had ever been waged. The purpose of presenting the national Flag to the public schools of our country has been stated today, and often on similar occasions throughout the land; but I cannot feel wholly satisfied unless I call your attention, and especially that of the pupils, to the fact that it can scarcely be too frequently repeated, that the G. A. R. knows from personal experience how cheering, how ennobling, how conducive to the performance of heroic deeds, was the sight of the starry Flag in conflicts where the results were doubtful. It was a soul stirring hope of victory, for it was an assurance as long as it waved that the result was yet in the hands of those battling beneath its folds. From time immemorial the National Flag has been the rallying point, and the sentiment attached to it has undoubtedly become hereditary. This sentiment should be one of the holiest and purest that occupies the human breast. Is the Flag not emblematic of the institutions of our country? Does it not call country, home, and all the endearing ties that accompany these words to the mind, making the heart quicken its beat with patriotic impulses?

No matter whether we approve or do not, of all the acts done by the government of our country; it is, nevertheless, "our country, right or wrong," and the Flag representing all it is, should be more precious to us than our lives, and should be kept unsullied by any act that would bring to the cheek of a patriot the suspicion of a blush. To have our country always right, and consequently the Flag in the proud position of universal respect it holds today, let each and all of us resolve to do what within us lies to this purpose. This can be done only by making our politics like our religion, a matter of conscience, and when we exercise the right of a citizen, let each of us do it as if the welfare of the country rested upon his shoulders alone. Most truly and sincerely do I believe that Admiral David Glasgow Farragut, after whom this school is named and to whom I have alluded, always acted as if he felt this responsibility. By our acts are we judged, and no life in our country's history is more studied with evidences of honest and pure intentions than that of the grand old Admiral. He was what a leader should be—brave but modest; bold without recklessness; full of resources; honest as day; true as steel; pure in his personal character, and as a result of these qualities, possessed of that magnetism that caused his subordinates to be loyally attached to him, and to love as well as respect him.

This dear old town of ours will be always mentioned in history in connection with his name, for at this navy yard he died on the 14th of August, 1870, and in the vault at St. John's church his remains were laid until at a later date they were removed to New York, the state of his adoption. Time will not permit me to say more than a few words of this grand old hero, whose love for the Flag was unbounded. The comrade who hoists the Flag this hour upon your schoolhouse, as well as the one who addresses you, has the honor of having served under him.

To Comrade Tibbetts is the honor of carrying in his person today, evidences of his devotion to the Flag, and weighty reminiscences of one of the most memorable actions of the Admiral, in the shape of pieces of shells received during the passage of Forts Jackson and Philip. The successful passage of these forts earned for the admiral the affectionate soubriquet of "old Salamander."

The Admiral's calm self possessed manner in battle, the confidence all felt in his ability, inspired all about him with a touch of his own determination to leave nothing undone to assure success. His plans of battle were like himself, plain and straightforward, easily comprehended, and as a consequence successful. The Admiral, my young friends, did not have the advantages you possess of acquiring an education. He was appointed a midshipman in the Navy in 1810, and having been born in 1801, at Campbell's station near Knoxville, Tenn., was consequently but nine years old. At the early age of thirteen he was in command of one of the Essex's prizes, taken during the eventful cruise of that vessel in the Pacific, under Commodore David Porter. He was but 14 when slightly wounded on that vessel, in her action with the Phœbe and Cherub. He received the commendation of his commander, who regretted the young sailor was not old enough for promotion. Think for a moment of the deeds of this stripling at about your age. One who, instead of having all the aids and encouragement to study that this progressive age and a generous country afford you, acquired his knowledge under great difficulties. That he was a man of varied information, able to converse in some three or four European languages, is an evidence of his refinement as well as of his industry and ability, and truly the promise of the youth was realized in an honorable manhood.

Such was the man after whom your school is named. Such the man who loved most devotedly the Flag that is to fly over your schoolhouse. On coming to your daily tasks may the sight of the Flag create in you a desire to emulate in his good qualities, in his desire for knowledge, the man who has shed so much honor upon our starry banner; and let me ask you to remember, as showing the deference and respect in which the Flag is held by those whose special duty it is to show it in foreign lands, who are most familiar with it, from having it, I may say, almost hourly in their view, that on board every U. S. man-of-war, whenever the Flag is hoisted to or lowered from the peak, every face is turned towards it, and every head is uncovered. This, not from blind idolatry or maudlin sentiment, but as a tribute of respect to our country and her emblem, the symbol of progress and freedom.

Into your hands, my young friends, as representatives of the coming generation, does the G. A. R. commit this Flag, trusting that you will in your turn transmit it to the next generation with added honor, and may the deeds that will make it so, be not necessarily those of bloody war, but of honorable peace, in the advancement of civilization, and the hastening of that day when the world will be wiser, and international questions will not be settled by might, but by right.

The speaker was loudly applauded, and at the conclusion was presented with a fine bouquet by the principal of the school, Miss Pierce, in behalf of a little five-year old pupil, Josie Kaue. The musical programme was here repeated, during which Comrade John P. Tibbetts, who was severely wounded at the passage of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, below New Orleans on the 24th of April, 1862, while serving on the U. S. S. Katahdin—accompanied by Perley Spinney, a pupil of the school, proceeded to the roof of the building and raised "Old Glory," which at this time received the homage of the assembled throats.

Mr. Ira C. Seymour, of the Board of Instruction, delivered the following pointed and stirring address of acceptance:

MR. SEYMOUR'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen: I have been selected to thank you in behalf of this school and its friends for this gift. In the selection of the "ensign" of the nation as a present to the youth of our city, you have again manifested your fidelity to your country, and will place this flag so prominently before these scholars, that it will become a source of study with them, and in studying to ascertain its origin and the purpose it is used for as a "national emblem," they will learn to honor, reverence, and love it, and so strongly will it become entwined around their hearts that as the years of manhood come upon them, they will be as ready to defend it (if need be) as you were. And as the love and respect for the flag becomes a part of their nature, so the union of the states and the form of government will be a part of their very lives to them. In looking upon its stars and stripes we are reminded of what we owe to you and your comrades. We have today the best government on earth, and one in which all law abiding citizens are free. And under this Flag no citizen need to bend the knee to any one except his Creator. Again I thank you heartily for your estimable gift, and the interest you thereby manifested in the pupils of our schools.

The march was again resumed, and a halt was made at

on State street, and on the spacious grounds on the eastern side, the Post faced the side entrance and behind the veterans were deployed the pupils of the school. Within the arch over the entrance stood Depart. S. V. Com. George E. Hodgdon who gracefully delivered the flag in the following impressive words:

ADDRESS OF GEO. E. HODGDON.

REVEREND SIR:—Upon the standard of the United States is written in invisible letters the story of the immense sacrifices endured to establish the Union, to protect its honor when assailed by foreign powers, and to preserve its existence in the most desperate of conflicts, which cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of the American youth, for upon them devolves the future destinies of this great country, and the cost of such a legacy is the true measure of its value.

With a propriety that is most commendable, although an innovation upon the customs of the past, our municipal authorities have designated the two commodious structures recently completed for public instruction, by the names of illustrious patriots of different eras. One has been named in honor of Farragut—the first of American Admirals—over which we have witnessed the unfurling of the colors of the Union; the other, under the walls of which we now stand, is a memorial to one of Portsmouth's most eminent citizens, a distinguished general in the armies of the Revolution, whose autograph is fixed to the immortal document which gave birth to this republic.

To crown the spacious edifice with the national emblems is our duty of today; and for this purpose I have been selected by my comrades of the Grand Army, in their behalf, to present to you, sir, as a representative of the educational interests of this city, the flag of the United States which is henceforth to float over Whipple School.

The Rev. Henry E. Hovey of the Board of Instruction accepted the trust in behalf of the city, in characteristic phrase, graphically picturing the future of the veteran. Here are his words:

REV. MR. HOVEY'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the Storer Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, ladies and gentlemen:

As a member of the Board of Instruction, and of the sub-committee in especial charge of this school, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to accept at your hands this beautiful symbol of our country's freedom, to be cherished and preserved, and constantly displayed from the topmost point of this building.

I cannot but think that such events as these, which are occurring at this time in many parts of the country, hold and will continue to hold a very real place in the history of our land, and that some day the fact will be widely recognized. That for instance, there will be on the walls of our national capitol at Washington, side by side with the paintings of the Discovery of America, of the Landing of the Puritans, of the Declaration of Independence, four equal paintings depicting the history of the volunteer soldier who fought for the integrity of the United States in the great civil war. The first of these four paintings will represent him a young man leaving home in 1861. There will be seen the familiar homestead of our American manhood, and before it will be grouped the father, the mother, the sisters and brothers of the family. And the young man will be bidding them farewell amid his father's blessings and his mother's tears. Then the next painting will represent the volunteer in the midst of battle. There will be the long line of the blue and the gray facing each other in deadly conflict. There will be plunging horses and heavy cannon and glittering swords, and there will be smoke and fire and blood.

And then the third painting represents him coming home at the end of the war. The city dressed in flags, the streets crowded with acclaiming and enthusiastic spectators; the hats thrown in the air, the bells pouring out their loudest clangor, and all that indescribable scene of confusion and joy and exultation in victory, which so many of us remember as school children then, when the boys in blue came home for good from Washington. Well! then, these three paintings of the life of a volunteer of the great civil war would not tell all the story, there would need to be another yet.

And the fourth painting would depict the volunteer handing the flag of the country to the next generation to keep and respect and defend! A quarter of a century has gone by, and he is now no longer a young man. With plenty of life and vigor in him yet, he still begins to feel that in the course of nature the day must come when his grateful country will see him no more. And he feels that his work is not all accomplished until he has done what in him lies to impress upon those coming after him the value of the flag for which he, a generation ago, underwent so much labor, toil and hardship.

The scene in this fourth painting would aptly be laid in the rich autumn season of the year, for the life of our former volunteer is now verging on toward the winter of old age. The place would be surrounded with the sunset glories of the foliage of the trees in our autumnal season; but none of these colors would be so vivid as in the centre of the picture the red, white and blue of the flag which the veteran was handing over to those who represent posterity! And all around would be groups of school children looking on, only half comprehending indeed the significance of the occasion, but to learn more and more what it means as time goes on.

In a word, ladies and gentlemen, that fourth painting would be a reproduction of some such scene as that which we see around here this morning.

It is a joy and pleasure to be concerned in it. And it is a great delight too, here to-day, to remember that bonds of descent and kinship knit together this scene, not only with the civil war a quarter of a century ago, but back further than that in the history of our land, to the very Declaration of Independence itself, for it is a most pleasant fact by no means to be overlooked in the memories of this day, that the little child, who will unite this morning her tiny strength with that of the veteran, to raise the flag aloft, has in her veins the blood of the patriotic William Whipple, for whom this building is worthily named, and who joined with Josiah Bartlett and Matthew Thornton as delegates from New Hampshire, in signing the Declaration of Independence, on July 4th, 1776.

Such coincidences, gentlemen, and such occasions as this, do not happen often in life. They are worth emphasizing and worth remembering when they do come. It is good to be here. It is good to look backward to history through your faces, veteran soldiers of '61, and further backward through the ancestry of this little child and many more around us, and then to turn and look forward to the future in the faces of these children gathered here. In these faces and in those of the millions of their companions through the land, let us see only peace, for our land only prosperity, for our country only a steady and constant patriotism, guarding jealously through generation after generation, the honor and welfare of the United States of America.

Comrade Joseph Foster, Paymaster U. S. N., to whom was assigned the duty of hoisting the colors, was assisted by a pupil, Miss Mary Stearns Heffenger, granddaughter of the late Commodore Charles Whipple Pickering, U. S. N., and a descendant of Mary (Whipple) Trail, sister of General William Whipple.

With Miss Heffenger was Miss Sarah Edmunds Bradford, daughter of Capt. Robert F. Bradford, U. S. N., of this city. The school drill was very fine, especially in view of the short occupation of the building, and reflected great credit upon Principal Pickering and his efficient aids.

The flag was cheered to the echo and the route was taken up for the Parochial school on Austin st.

The Parochial School.

At the impressive devotions on Sunday forenoon at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Rev. E. M. O'Callaghan, the talented pastor, referred in soul-stirring words to the patriotic service of today, and which has now become another consecrated emblazonment on the historic scroll of dear old Portsmouth. During his remarks he spoke fervently and with eloquence of the lesson to be drawn from this occasion, and surely our Catholic brethren who have today entered so unanimously and zealously with the old veterans, in the general observance, have been foremost in contributing their part to the auspicious event.

The gathering at the Parochial school was one of the largest of the day as it was one of the most enthusiastic, parents and scholars seeming to outdo each other in their demonstrations. The pupils, 218 in number, were arranged at each end of the school, the boys occupying positions on the west side, and the girls on the opposite or east side. Between them and the front of the building, and in a semi-circle were young misses dressed in white, each wearing red and blue sashes, and carrying flags, as did the other scholars. The scene was picturesque and effective.

Comrade Marcus M. Collis of Storer Post, No. 1, Past Commander of the Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., in presenting the flag to this school made a graceful address, which is herewith appended:

MR. COLLIS' ADDRESS.

Reverend Sir:—Some months ago, the members of Storer Post, No. 1, G. A. R., realizing that our ranks are rapidly being thinned by the ravages of disease and death, and that in a few years at most our organization must cease to exist, except in the memories of our countrymen, or where the record of our deeds shall be inscribed upon the pages of the history of this nation, the grandest republic the world ever saw. Desiring above all things the perpetuity, peace and prosperity of this union of states, to preserve which we have made so many sacrifices. Knowing that the youths of to-day must soon take our places, and assume the high privilege and responsible duties of citizenship, guarding the weal or contributing to the woe of our common country.

Feeling that the institutions devoted to training the minds of these youths should be surmounted by the emblem of our republic, that it should daily be unfurled to their view, that they might learn to love it, to study it, and learn the lessons of Liberty, Justice, Tolerance and Equal Rights which it symbolizes; and hoping that this object lesson might inspire their young hearts with the spirit of patriotic devotion to flag and country, we resolved to present the American flag to every school in this city. Today, by order of the Commander of our Post, I am assigned the pleasant duty of partially carrying into effect the wishes of my comrades, by presenting to you, and through you to the Parochial School which is under your charge, this beautiful banner.

You will pardon me, in presenting it, if I remind you that from no other body of men in our land could this gift so appropriately come. My comrades know and appreciate, as none others can, what it has cost to create and preserve this Flag untarnished. They have followed it midst the fire and smoke of battle. It has been the beacon star which has led them to victory. They have learned to love it. Many of them have shed their blood in its defense, and beneath its folds thousands of our comrades have yielded up their lives to protect it from dishonor.

During the dark days of the Rebellion, it was the rallying point of men coming from all parts of the civilized world, who loved Liberty and the cause of human progress. Their devotion to it and the principles which it represents, welded them into one homogeneous mass. Today, you find them unitedly standing by those principles in the Grand Army of the Republic, recognizing no East, no West, no North, no South, no party, sect or creed, no color or nationality, all standing on the one broad platform of American citizenship, by birth or adoption, all equal, recognizing only patriotic duty well done.

Such a gift from such men as these is not for mere show. They have higher motives, and I have no doubt that you will so regard it, and that the youths under your charge will be taught to reverence our gift, and if the necessity should ever arise, (which may God forbid), they will not be slow in rallying to its defense.

The response of Rev. Father O'Callaghan was characteristically patriotic and fervent, meriting the deep attention and generous applause it received. We herewith give it in full:

FATHER O'CALLAGHAN'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Collis—Members of Storer Post.

Gentlemen: How can I fittingly thank you for the generous gift and kindly words with which you greet us to-day.

How can I thank you as you ought to be thanked in the name of the children of this school, and the catholic people of our city, for this beautiful and significant testimony of your confidence in our love for our country.

You have come, war-scarred veterans of an historic strife, whose story forms one of the most instructing and grandest records of patriotic endeavor and heroism the world ever saw, bearing lovingly the flag under whose starry folds you fought and suffered, to place it as a crowning glory over our schools, knowing full well that the school should be the nursery of patriots, and feeling that the very sight of this banner, pregnant with such soul-inspiring memories, must be an education in itself to the rising generation.

Remembering the past, calling to mind the comrades who marched shoulder to shoulder with you on the battle-field, catholic in their loyalty to this land of liberty, as well as catholic in their faith, who gave their lives that the republic might live, bearing in mind also the children of those heroes educated within these walls, following the noble instincts of your hearts, you gladly and gratefully include this, our parochial school, among those to whom you offer your beautiful banners as a pledge of your interest and affection.

By your graceful action of to-day you protest in the most effective manner possible against that spirit of mistrust and those doubts about our loyalty, which have been for the past few years so perseveringly and insidiously fostered by men who never saw a battle and who encourage ill feeling between fellow citizens for their own selfish ends. We in this beautiful city by the sea have been happily spared such exhibitions of bigotry.

We catholics can well afford to treat with indifference those fireside warriors who endeavor to persuade the people that the country is in danger from the catholic citizen and the catholic church.

We have only to open the history of that dreadful civil war in which you, gentlemen, had such an honored part, and there, in letters of blood, we read the story of our loyalty to our country and to the starry flag, which to-day, thanks to God, floats triumphantly over it.

What American citizen can ever forget the brave deeds of the Irish Brigade, the heroism of a Meagher, a Corcoran, or a Shields, and last but grandest of all, of catholic Sheridan? And, gentlemen, as you know, hardly a regiment fought for the Union in which the catholic citizen-soldier did not stand side by side with his non-catholic comrade in the thickest of the fight.

True, we are not all agreed on the question of education. True, that we catholics, feeling in our hearts and souls the necessity of an education in which religion should be the informing principle, maintain at a great expense and without the aid of public money, schools where an education of such a character may be given to our children, feeling convinced that in the words of an eminent writer, "he serves the State best who serves God first," and that an education which teaches him to do this, far from being a menace, is a prop to the State.

Our object is to make our children better citizens by rearing them fervent christians, and thus as far as we can, doing our part to avert the dangers which threaten the Republic from that spirit of indifference regarding religion and its tenets, from that wide-spreading laxity of morals, and from that dishonesty in public life which citizens of every creed deplore.

But, gentlemen, education has nothing to fear from us. We know that a free people must be an educated people to preserve their liberties, and whatever best leads to this result will always command our sympathy.

And now, gentlemen, let me again thank you most sincerely for the wealth of good will and generous sentiment signified by this presentation.

Of my long pastorate in this city extending over a period of fifteen years, I have many happy memories of kindness and courtesies at the hands of my fellow citizens, but none so deeply touched my heart, none will be so lovingly remembered by me as the event of to-day. Need I add that I shall ever hold in affectionate memory you, gentlemen, the members of Storer Post, of this city of my adoption, men who remembering " 'tis sweet and glorious to die for one's country" went forth willingly to offer the sacrifice; men, who, in a word, were "true to God, their country and their friends."

In this spirit, then, I congratulate my fellow-citizens on the completion of our new and commodious school houses, and as you join our parochial school with them in this day's solemn and touching ceremonies, I only say that in good-natured rivalry and honest, earnest endeavor we may work side by side for the welfare of the children of our city, and for the love of the flag which today, thanks to your generosity, shelters all of us beneath its folds.

Then, as the handsome emblem of America's Independence, of freedom, and of protection to all her people was run to the masthead by Junior Vice Commander John McCaffery of Storer Post, assisted by pupils Mary McClure and James Dixon, its unfolding and waving was greeted with ringing huzzas from the large concourse, the children singing "America" with splendid effect. It was the intention to have Katie Salmon, a pupil of this school, and daughter of Thomas Salmon who was a fireman on the historic Kearsarge at the time of her contest with the Alabama, assist in the raising of the flag, but an unfortunate delay in her arrival at the grounds prevented the appropriate consummation. The pupils of the Parochial school looked and appeared grandly, and rendered their assigned parts with precision.

All honor to our Catholic residents who so unanimously entered into the spirit of this notable day. Like Chapman's ideal, so their compact was—

Nothing so sweete is as our countrie's earth,
And joy of those from whom we claime our birth.

After the exercises at the school the pupils were taken en masse in front of the fine building by Newell, the photographer.

The flag was hailed and the boys "went marching on" to

The Haven School.

Principal Brown had made preparation in drill for the coming event, and it is claimed by all that the pupils here outdid their fellows in the other schools. Their precision was remarkable and won honest praise.

Presentation was made by Capt. J. Albert Sanborn, whose voice has seldom been heard on public occasions in the past decade, but his address will show that his tongue has lost none of its cunning.

CAPT. SANBORN'S ADDRESS.

Major Urch, Gentlemen of the Board of Instruction, teachers and scholars of the Haven School.

I am certain that I speak the sentiments of my comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, when I say to-day, that the waves of time roll back from the shores of our lives, and we stand here, in thought at least, as scholars in this or a similar school. It is appropriate then if here, on this occasion, we acknowledge with profound gratitude that debt we owe to those devoted teachers, not only of this city, but all over the land, who in their day did so much to prepare their scholars and their generation to act well their part in perhaps one of the most important, tremendous, and eventful periods of modern times.

For, my young hearers, if we of those earlier times, heard less of personal culture for one's own sake, than you do at the present day, our teachers possessed with their learning the rugged virtues of men, and if their strong right arms, heavy hands, and tough birches sometimes gave us an object—I confess though at the time they were objectionable lessons—in endurance, discipline, and an extremely prompt obedience; they also encouraged our young hearts to glow and burn with enthusiasm over the classic epoch of our own country, rather than directing our exclusive admiration to the glories of ancient Greece and Rome.

Under and by reason of these teachings, and during the most sanguinary war of modern times, law and order were maintained, chivalry was revived, liberty was preserved, treason was made odious, and it was demonstrated to the disappointment of monarchical hopes that a republic contains within itself the elements of its own life and self preservation.

These are some of the reasons why we Portsmouth boys, comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic—the older class in school—would summons here to-day the visible and invisible presence of our teachers. We would call to this spot the venerable faces of Harris, Hoyt, Kimball, Nichols, Senter, Durgin, Payson, Demeritt and that long line of lady teachers as well, and lay the tributes of our affection and reverence at their feet. We would say to them if you sometimes, and for our own good, gave to us the stripes, we to-day and always give to you the stars. The stars of memory, of sacred recollection, the tender reminiscence, the romance and hope that are inseparable from, and belong to youth. In all that maze of experience, the light and shade, the joy and sorrow, the victory and defeat which enter into and make up eventful lives in eventful times, the memories of youth and school days and teachers are interwoven in a network we would not unravel if we could.

My young friends, I believe you are as fortunate in your teachers as we were in ours. I can say confidently that you are acquainted with the history of your country, and know for what its battles have been fought. Pardon me if I remind you and all within the hearing of my voice that your countrymen have never fought a battle to sustain that invented phrase of "the higher law." A higher law than the law? That is the destruction of law and is only another way of dressing up an old heresy, that of "the end justifies the means." The author of that seditious doctrine lives only in the annals of his country as a questionable politician, while he who uttered the words, "With malice towards none and charity for all, let us go forward that a government of the people, by the people and for the people may not perish from the earth" is immortal.

My young friends of the Haven School, the historian will tell you what the soldiers of the war of the rebellion endured and accomplished. I desire to state briefly what they have done since the war. For the last twenty-five years we have been organized and known as the Grand Army of the Republic, and we number five hundred thousand men, all war veterans. This is an army twenty times greater than the Regular army of the United States. We have organized one hundred and fifty thousand of our own sons—not somebody's else sons, but our own flesh and blood,—and we have instructed them in their duties in war, as well as in peace. This is an army six times greater than the Regular army. Also during the same period more than three hundred thousand loyal women of America have been our efficient allies. Here is an organization of more than 1,000,000 souls, and what has been its purposes. First; to secure the results for which the war was fought. Second; to teach loyalty and practice charity. Third; to hand over to you, the children of the republic, our free institutions as good or better, if that was possible, than they were handed down to us. The measure of our success, or the importance of our endeavors may not now be measured. If American statesmen, divines, or scholars have been engaged with more ability in supporting our government than we have been able to bring, we bid them God speed; but it is a matter of pride with us that our work has been and is being accomplished without a debate in Congress, without an appropriation bill, and without a roll call in the House of Representatives.

The latest act of the Grand Army of the Republic, is to present a Flag to each of the schools of our country, which we are now doing. Teachers and scholars of the Haven school, we now present this Flag to you, in the confident hope and belief that it will give an impulse to patriotism, and that the rising generation will love it as we love it. We love our beautiful Flag, the stars and stripes, because it is the emblem of liberty. We love it because it has been the banner of American soldiers and sailors in more than four hundred battles. It has been the shroud of hundreds of thousands of patriots, scores of whom were our own school-mates and companions. In the dark cloud of war, or the bright loveliness of peace, we have followed it, and have done what we could to keep its folds unsullied by the stains of dishonor or defeat. And I would have you remember, my young friends, that American soldiers and sailors have never borne this Flag in any but a victorious war.

When we shall have answered the last roll call, which in the course of nature we soon must, if we shall have turned our flag over to the keeping of these young men and women and children, secure in the knowledge that they are ready, if the occasion comes to make the sacrifices of patriots in its defence, the work of the Grand Army of the Republic has been well done, and our mission and life as an organization comes to a glorious end.

Capt. Sanborn's war record gave to his words an unusual weight, and his reception was such as he justly merited.

Comrade David Urch, of the Board of Instruction, accepted the flag for the city.

MAJOR URCH'S ADDRESS.

Comrade Sanborn, Commander and comrades of Storer Post, Grand Army of the Republic:

In behalf of our Haven school, I have the honor, and I esteem it a glorious privilege, to extend to you, our deep and heartfelt thanks for this beautiful starry emblem; the emblem that you amid the smoke and carnage of battle, the shrieks of the dying, and the ghastly forms of your fallen dead, followed to victory and peace, and helped preserve in unity and honor.

We shall gaze upon these stars and stripes as day by day they wave in the breeze from yonder staff, and soldiers of the Grand Army, these children will not forget that they received them from the hands of their defenders and from those, who, in danger and strife, helped preserve them united, in honor and glory for us.

Mr. Commander and comrades, we thank you, far less for the intrinsic worth of these folds, than for that priceless spirit of patriotism in your hearts, that answering when your country called, now actuates you to instill into the hearts of the young, a kindred spirit of loyalty and love, for their country's starry flag.

Again we thank you, and in the not far distant future, when you, who preserved in their unity, the constellation of stars upon this flag, shall have passed to that bourne, from whence none ever return, and have joined your comrades in that celestial Grand Army beyond the river, may you with them, look down from on high, with feelings of pleasure and pride, upon a whitening harvest of patriotism, whose seed your own hands, have this day, cast upon the soil.

Comrade Henry Colson hoisted Old Glory to its position at mast head, where it received an ovation. The Post then returned to headquarters and dispersed for dinner.

The Franklin School.

At two o'clock a detail of ten men from Storer Post, with the Board of Instruction, and the Drum Corps, proceeded in barges to the Franklin school, where S. V. C. Joseph R. Curtis spoke for the Post in the following eloquent address.

ADDRESS OF J. R. CURTIS.

SIR:—By direction of Storer Post No. 1, Dept. of New Hampshire, G. A. R., it becomes my pleasurable duty to present, in behalf of the Post, to you and through you to Franklin School building, its teachers and scholars this flag of our Country—an inspiration to every patriotic and liberty-loving boy and girl in America; a shield to the down-trodden and oppressed of every land who seek protection under its star-embazoned folds; a benison to more than sixty millions of the most happy and prosperous people the sun ever shone upon; and a heritage, purchased by the blood of the manhood of this country, for generations yet unborn.

It is not necessary that I should tell you the reason for this and for other ceremonies that have been witnessed this day. You read it in every tiny flag that flecks our hill-sides and valleys where sleep the martyred dead; you read it in the empty sleeve, and crutch, these gray-visaged men, my comrades—a remnant of that once vast army now swiftly marching into the great beyond. Aye, you read it in this glorious banner, every star of which has been purchased with the blood of your fathers, and immovably set in its field of azure blue, indissoluble as the heavens—saving a country incomparable among the nations of the earth.

I am proud that it has fallen to my lot to represent Storer Post in the presentation of a flag to Franklin School. This building is the oldest for the purpose used, in this city. From its portals have gone out some of the noblest men and women in the State and Nation. Into the war from which this banner was brought unsullied and without the loss of a single star, went more than two scores of its pupils to do battle for Freedom's cause. The bones of some of them lie on Southern fields or beneath the waters of the ocean, martyrs to a holy cause. Who can say that the patriotic ardor which filled their young hearts was not instilled therein by daily sight of "Old Glory"—floating from a flag staff on yonder hill? You, my children, have succeeded to the heritage their valor has preserved. You will love this flag as they loved it. The daily sight of its multiplying stars will instill into your young hearts lessons of patriotism, love of country, liberty, equality and justice, that will make you pillars of strength in the upbuilding of the nation, the deadly foes of treason, and honored men and women in society.

Comrade Urch again spoke in behalf of the city as follows:

MAJOR URCH'S ADDRESS.

Comrade Curtis, Commander and Comrades of Storer Post:—In behalf of Franklin school, it gives me unbounded pleasure and pride to receive at the hands of those who saved undivided, this emblem of our national life.

How shall we thank you, battle scarred veterans, whose deeds of love and loyalty to this flag are written in blood on the escutcheon of our national ensign? How shall we thank you, saviors of the national life, for the priceless spirit of patriotism that actuated you to the gift?

No tongue can tell, nor pen portray, the suffering endured, or the valor displayed, by the Union Patriot army, in defence of this starry flag, and having fought and bled in its victorious defence, you come now to offer it as a crowning glory, for the nursery of the future patriot soldier.

May the seed of patriotism, sown by this your loyal act, be bountiful and multiply within these walls, and may this emblem of a united land, saved by your aid from the hands of its would-be destroyers, prove to the youth of this school, a pillar of fire by night and a cloud by day, that shall lead them in the pathway of ever increasing love and loyalty to their country and their flag.

The color was handsomely mastheaded by comrade W. H. Smith.

The Woodbury School.

Adjutant C. H. Besselevre fittingly bestowed the flag, and this is what he said so well.

ADDRESS OF C. H. BESSELEVRE.

Mr. Seymour, Gentlemen of the Board of Instruction, teachers and scholars of the Woodbury school.

I can assure you that it is a pleasure and gratification to me to have been chosen by the Commander and comrades of Storer Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic to present to you in their behalf this beautiful Flag of the United States of America, emblem of liberty, home of the free; and as it floats proudly over your heads each day as you come and go from school, may your thoughts revert to these brave men which surround you, who stood in the front of battle on land and on sea in its defence, that you, my children, might grow up to be men and women of a free and united country. Trusting that it will teach you lessons of patriotism, love of country, and all that is noble and good, I leave it in your keeping.

The courtesy was acknowledged by a member of the Board of Instruction, and Comrade William H. Lear sent the color to the truck in ship-shape and man o' war fashion, although he was a good infantryman in the service. At

The Spalding School

Came the closing exercise of the day. The Post was happily represented by Quartermaster Henry S. Paul, a veteran of the 13th N. H., whose deeds speak louder than his words. As usual, he was to the point as this transcription will show,—

ADDRESS OF H. S. PAUL.

We are met to-day for a most interesting event. It is one that will have a daily reminder. It is not for this hour and then to be forgotten forever. Not only will memory keep alive the day, but its meaning will have a widening interpretation as young minds become better qualified to understand and enter into the reason of things. The exercises of this day in lifting aloft our country's flag means much for the future. Let us think a moment; what does the flag stand for? It is one of the signs by which nationality is distinguished—by which the sway of a political power is asserted. It is also an appeal to the patriotism of all those who see in it the symbol not only of their country's power but its claims upon themselves. As it floats in the breeze it seems to hold above us the imperial shield of a nation's power.

One of the institutions that has from the first been fostered by this young Nation is the public school. This we regard as one of the corner stones of our national structure. Here we are training intellects—here we are training hearts and lives; here, too, we mean to train patriots.

It is my privilege and pleasure to-day to present through you to this Spalding School, named in honor of one of Portsmouth's noble and generous sons, the Nation's Flag. This is the emblem of our free institutions—the pride of every, loyal heart. It means much to some of us. There are here those who offered their lives to save the nation from being destroyed. They never allowed the old flag to be trailed in the dust. It was carried aloft on many a battle field, and if its standard bearer chanced to be cut down, it was grasped by another and lifted high in air. So let this banner of freedom be flung to the breeze and always mark, as it will, a center of culture and moral refinement—be a lesson on patriotism to every boy and girl who may look upon it, and cause them to love and defend the country that has so generously provided for their education and fitting for places of usefulness in life.

The few remaining members of that Grand Army of the war of the rebellion seek to impress upon these young minds that friendship bound and united together those brave defenders during those long tedious years of the war, and that since its close charity, has spread its wings over foe as well as friend, and that the crowning principle which will perpetuate their results is loyalty.

By order of the commander of Storer Post, No. 1, Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., I present this flag to you to-day.

Flag of the Free! heart's hope and home,
By angel hands to valor given,
The stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.

Forever float that starry sheet,
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And freedom's banner waving o'er us.

A member of the Board of Instruction responded for the city, and as Comrade J. William Watkins sent the Red, White and Blue aloft to sport in the sunshine and tell its lesson of Peace on earth, the duties of the day were accomplished, and the Ensign of Liberty floats where "Wisdom's voice is heard and learning holds sway." There may it float forever, a rainbow of promise, a sign of peace to all the world.

AMERICA.

REV. S. F. SMITH.

My country! 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrim's pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.

My native country! thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love!
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills;
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze
And ring from all the trees,
Sweet Freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake,
Let all that breathe partake,
Let rocks their silence break—
The sound prolong.

My father's God! to Thee,
Author of liberty!
To Thee we sing.
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God! Our King!

APPENDIX

The Whipple School.

The name of Whipple School was first publicly proposed for the new school-house on the northeast corner of State and Sumner streets, Portsmouth, N. H., in the following communication, printed in the Portsmouth Daily Evening Times of May 13th, 1890.

The Whipple School

EDITOR TIMES:—That Portsmouth once numbered among her citizens a signer of the immortal Declaration of American Independence, and that his ashes rest among us, must have long since been forgotten by the people of this city, for no marble statue or public monument exists to record this, one of the chiefest among our glories.

But now an opportunity arises to claim publicly this honor for our town and people, and to offer during the coming century a daily lesson of love of country to our children, by inscribing on enduring marble and placing on the front of the new State street school-house the name of William Whipple, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Let us give no unmeaning name to this building, but place in the daily thought of our city this one, so deeply imbued with patriotism and every virtue.

Appointed Brigadier General in 1777, with the command of the First N. H. Brigade, William Whipple was present at the capture of Burgoyne—a victory which delivered the American cause from the greatest peril, and brought joy without measure to the people: thus serving us and his country in both state and field, and linking his name with two glorious events.

The following inscription will be found on his stone in the North Cemetery:

Here are deposited the remains
Of the Honorable William Whipple
who departed this Life
on the 28th day of November, 1785,
in the 55th year of his Age.

He was often elected and thrice attended
the Continental Congress

as Delegate
for the State of New Hampshire, particularly in that memorable year
in which America declared itself independent of Great Britain.
He was also at the Time of his decease
a Judge of the supreme Court of Judicature.

In Him
a firm & ardent Patriotism was united with universal benevolence
and every social Virtue.

Board of Instruction.

STORER POST MEMORIALIZES THE BOARD
TO NAME THE STATE STREET SCHOOL BUILDING IN HONOR OF GENERAL WIL-LIAM WHIPPLE.

A regular meeting of the School Board was held in the Aldermen's chamber at the city building last evening, [3 June, 1890]; in the absence of Mayor Fay, Major Urch was chosen chairman. * * *

Mr. John Laskey inquired if the committee on the naming the new school buildings were ready to report. Major Urch who is chairman of that committee stated that the committee had deferred taking action while the subject was being discussed by the public, and said that a delegation from Storer Post G. A. R. was present to address the Board relative to the matter. The Board signifying its pleasure to hear the gentlemen, Comrade M. H. Bell stated that at a meeting of Storer Post held on the evening of May 16th last, which was attended by nearly one hundred comrades, it was unanimously voted to memorialize the Board of Instruction to name the new State street school building in honor of William Whipple, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and to that end had appointed the Commander, and Senior and Junior Vice-Commanders to draw up and present such a memorial to the Board. The memorial was read by Superintendent Morss, and on motion, was referred to the committee on naming school houses. * * *

(Penny Post, 4 June, 1890.)

The memorial was as follows :

Memorial.

To the Board of Instruction of the city of Portsmouth, N. H.

GENTLEMEN :—By direction of Storer Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Hampshire, we, a committee of the Post, beg you to rescue from ignominious forgetfulness the name of an illustrious son of Portsmouth, a soldier of the Revolution, whose grave, we, his comrades of a later war do yearly decorate.

On the 4th of July, 1776, one hundred and fourteen years ago, a citizen of Portsmouth, delegate from New Hampshire to the Continental Congress, for your sake and ours, committed high treason against King George III, by placing his name on the list of those, who, if our Revolution had been only a Rebellion, would have ended their lives in the Tower of London or died on the gallows as traitors!

But the Revolution was a success, and a Nation, now counting sixty millions of people, was born to honor the names of the signers of the Declaration of Independence as the authors of our liberty and freedom.

Alas! In Portsmouth a strange forgetfulness has crept over our people. And no marble statue or public monument recalls the name of our representative written there, or boasts our share in this most glorious work.

But now the opportunity comes to make amends for our forgetfulness, and to show our gratitude to this, our most illustrious citizen, by giving his name to the new State street school-house, and thus placing it in the daily thought of our people for the coming century; and to urge this in the name of Storer Post, G. A. R., by the unanimous vote of a large meeting of the Post, we are here tonight.

Portsmouth is, it is true, a town with a history, and has passed her quarter-millennial year; but in this era of her growth and prosperity, when the freshness and beauty of early summer surround us, we can easily imagine her a young and lovely woman seeking to select from her jewel box two gems to place in the chaplet on her brow.

And many names are there from which to choose, stones of beauty and value, names of teachers, members of the school committee, clergymen, and others, living and dead, good citizens, to whom we owe much. Surely Portsmouth is fortunate in having had so many worthy sons, and daughters too, from the first settlement until now, and may the number continue to increase, as doubtless it will, while the grass is green, and the sun shines, and our noble river makes its journey twice a day from the ocean to Great Bay as in the day when our ancestors first settled on Strawberry Bank.

But the thought arises: "Are we more fortunate than other towns in this respect, and have other towns and cities of our country as worthy children?" And the answer comes from tens of thousands of voices, "We too have devoted teachers, diligent committees and reverend clergy."

And turning to History, Portsmouth asks: "To what do we all owe these treasures, this glory of our country?" And quickly the answer is: "To our National Unity and Liberty, born of the Declaration of Independence."

Then Portsmouth, looking more closely at her treasures, perceives, half hidden under the accumulation of later years, a most brilliant stone: hesitatingly she draws it forth, doubting whether it be glass or diamond, false or true. And wonderingly she asks of History:—"Is this really a gem above price, or is this too a common stone, and have all my sisters such?"

And History answers: "Twenty nine of the forty two states of the American Union, more than two thirds, have no such jewel in their caskets, and not one in a thousand of the cities and towns which dot our broad land have such a treasure. Nor can they ever hope to have—for while the list of other illustrious men and women increases with the passing years, there has been but one Declaration of American Independence, source of our Liberty and Freedom, and of our Union, which the war determined must and shall be preserved."

And this priceless jewel, which Portsmouth begs you, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Board of Instruction, to place upon her brow, is the name of William Whipple, Signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Born in Kittery, on the opposite shores of our river, in 1730, one hundred and sixty years ago, he received his education in the public schools of that town, but early went to sea and followed that life for several years. In 1759 he left the sea, settled in Portsmouth, married, and became a merchant and one of our leading citizens. He resided on Market street in the house now the home of Alexander H. Ladd. A Revolutionary soldier—he was present at the capture of Burgoyne. A member of the Continental Congress—his name became ever illustrious. Many interesting incidents in his career are recorded in the "Annals" and in the "Rambles About Portsmouth." He died in 1785, one hundred and five years ago. His ashes rest in our North cemetery, where, on his stone, the history of his life is succinctly told.

William Whipple had but one child, [see page 23] who died in infancy. He therefore left no descendants; but the forty-two states of our Union are his children, and we of Portsmouth, his eldest grandchild, should keep his memory green.

We have spoken of gratitude, and of what we owe to our illustrious men of the past—but this has been a most grievous mistake, for our public schools were not instituted to do honor to this man or that, or to enable us to show our gratitude to any one.

Our public school system was instituted, first and foremost, to make good citizens of each coming generation, so that they might treasure and hand down to their successors the priceless liberty and freedom our ancestors achieved. And to do this we employ the best of teachers, erect stately and convenient schoolhouses, and gather the children for instruction, not simply in reading, writing and arithmetic, but in the history of our country, its settlement, progress and development as a nation of freemen.

It is our duty and privilege, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, to do our utmost to make good citizens of the youth of Portsmouth, by instilling into their hearts love of country and the flag, and in the name of Storer Post we beg you to seize this auspicious opportunity, and give no unmeaning titles to the two new schoolhouses, but to select for them names which are synonyms of patriotism; and especially we ask you to inscribe in large and enduring letters on the front of the State street schoolhouse—William Whipple, Signer of the Declaration of Independence—that a daily lesson of patriotism and love of country may thus be given to many coming generations.

Respectfully,

M. H. BELL, Commander.

JOSEPH R. CURTIS, Senior Vice Comd'r.

JOHN McCAFFERY, Junior Vice Comd'r.

Committee of Storer Post.

Municipal Affairs.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Portsmouth, N. H., Thursday evening, September 4, 1890, a "communication from" Alderman John McCaffery "was read, asking that the State street school house be called the Whipple School in honor of William Whipple, the name to be inscribed upon a marble tablet on front of the building.

Alderman Rider moved to accept, adding a request that Storer Post should suggest for the High street schoolhouse the name of some person intimately connected with the Union side in the war of the rebellion.

Motion was carried."

(Times, 5 September, 1890.)

Alderman McCaffery's communication was as follows:

MR. MAYOR AND GENTLEMEN:

The question of proper and suitable names for our new school buildings is one of interest to all our people.

The question was discussed in the papers and by the people during the summer, and the time has now come, I think, for this body to act in the matter, for it seems to me that the subject is too important to be left in the hands of the Board of Instruction, or of any committee of this body.

That the name of the new State street school-house, our latest and best, where our children will be gathered for many years, should not be an ordinary one, but should teach patriotism and love of country to every scholar, we will all agree, and fortunately the name of Portsmouth's most illustrious citizen, a name well known to everybody a century ago, but half-forgotten in these later days, will vividly teach all this, and remind every hearer of that great landmark of human liberty and freedom, which makes ever memorable the Fourth day of July, 1776—the Declaration of American Independence.

That Portsmouth counted a Signer of the Declaration of Independence among her citizens, and through the Grand Army of the Republic yearly decorates his grave, may not be generally known,—but it is true—and his residence on Market street, and his grave in the North Cemetery, are now, and as the years pass will more and more be points of great interest and pride to every citizen, and will be visited by our summer residents as historic spots, sacred to American Independence.

The Grand Army of the Republic, defenders of the Union, his comrades of another war, at a large meeting of Storer Post, a few months since, unanimously appointed a committee to wait upon the city government and urge that this neglect of our hero, whom no statue or public monument commemorates, should no longer continue, but that this most fitting tribute should be paid to our Portsmouth signer of the Declaration of Independence; which was done, and although no action was then taken the proposition was most favorably received by the city government and people.

I therefore move, Mr. Mayor, that the new State street school be named the Whipple School, in honor of General William Whipple, of Portsmouth, soldier of the Revolution and signer of the Declaration of Independence, and that a marble tablet be placed in front of that school-house bearing this inscription:

WILLIAM WHIPPLE,
of Portsmouth, N. H.
SIGNER OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.
Born 1730—Died 1785.

JOHN McCAFFERY,
Alderman.

Biographical Notice of General William Whipple.

General William Whipple, of Portsmouth, N. H., signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born January 14th, 1730, in Kittery, Me. He was the son of William Whipple, senior, of Kittery, and great-great grandson of Matthew Whipple of Ipswich, Mass.

"Matthew Whipple, born about 1605, died Sept. 28, 1647; came from Essex, England. Received a grant of land in 1638 in Ipswich Hamlet, Mass. [which was incorporated as the town of Hamilton 21st June, 1793] where he resided and held the principal offices. He had a brother John [also a prominent citizen of Ipswich Hamlet, Mass.—See Felt's Ipswich, Cambridge, 1834, p. 159] who died in 1669, and probably a brother David who settled in Rhode Island."—(Penhallo Family, Boston, 1885, p. 19.)

Matthew Whipple "left a wife, Rose, whom he had married November 13, 1646, and children by a former wife, deceased, John, Matthew, Joseph, Mary, Ann, and Elizabeth." "His house was sold July 10, 1647, to John Annable, tailor."—(Felt, p. 157.)

Matthew Whipple's son Joseph, was great-great-great grandfather of Major General Amiel Weeks Whipple, 3d Div. 3rd Army Corps, Major Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, of Portsmouth, born in Greenwich, Mass., in 1818, who died of wounds received at the battle of Chancellorsville, Va., May 7, 1863, aged 45 years, and whose remains rest in Proprietor's Cemetery, Portsmouth.—(Penhallo Family, p. 19.)

"John Whipple, senior [Matthew] of the Hamlet, died Nov. 22, 1695. He was son of Matthew, [and was] baptized in Essex, England, Sept. 6, 1632. He was Lieutenant of a troop, held town offices, was Deputy to the General Court in 1674, 1679, 1682, 1683. He married a daughter (Mary) of Humphrey Reyner of Rowley. She survived him. He left children, John, Matthew, Joseph, Cyprian, Mary, Anna, Sarah, Elizabeth and Hannah. Estate £1639, 16 s."—(Felt p. 170.)

"Matthew Whipple, [John, Matthew] of the Hamlet, died January 28, 1739, in his eightieth year. He married Martha, daughter of John, and grand daughter of General Denison. [Major General Daniel Denison of Ipswich, born in England in 1612, who died Sept. 20, 1682, in Ipswich, was for eleven years Major General of the colony, and very prominent in colonial affairs.—See Denison Memorial, Ipswich, Mass., 1882.] She died Sept 12, 1728, in her sixtieth year. Mr. Whipple left children, Matthew, John, William, who was of Kittery in 1730, where his son William was born, who was a signer of the Declaration of Independence and Brigadier General at the capture of Burgoyne;—Joseph, settled in the ministry at Hampton Falls, and Martha Hartshorne. He had a malt-house and oat-mill, in which he carried on much business. To his mulatto servant he gave freedom. He bequeathed his house and lands to Matthew and John. Estate £3500. He held several offices in the town, was Justice of the Sessions Court, Representative in 1718, 1719, 1729. He was an energetic, useful and respected townsman."—(Ibid, pp. 176-177.)

William Whipple senior, (Matthew, John, Matthew,) "malster, seaman, and afterwards farmer," married Mary, eldest daughter of Robert Cutt (2d) and granddaughter of Robert Cutt (1st), both of Kittery, Maine.

"Among the settlers in this vicinity previous to 1646, were three brothers from Wales, John, Robert and Richard Cutt. (Their descendants bear the name Cutts.) John settled at the Bank [Portsmouth] and acquired much wealth from mercantile pursuits. Richard at first carried on the fisheries at the Shoals, and then removed to this place. Robert, after a short residence at Barbadoes, located on Great Island [Newcastle]. He afterwards went to Kittery, where he carried on ship building. In 1679, when New Hampshire was separated from Massachusetts, the King appointed John Cutt as President." (Rambles, I-28.)

"Robert Cutt [1st] was a shipmaster, and resided for some time at Barbados, where he married his second wife, Mary Hoel. Returning to New England, he settled at Kittery, in the Province of Maine. Here he carried on the business of ship-building. He died in 1674, and his will, dated June 18, 1674, was admitted to probate on the 6th of July next ensuing. His estate was inventoried at £ 890; a large sum, says Savage, for that neighborhood. Among the chattels enumerated were eight slaves. By his wife Mary, Robert Cutt had one son and four daughters; namely Mary, Bridget, Sarah, Elizabeth, and Robert. Sometime subsequent to 1675, his widow married Capt. Francis Champernowae." (Historical Papers, C. W. Tuttle, Boston, 1889, p. 339.)

The will of Robert Cutt, signed 18 July, 1674, appoints "my beloved wife Mary Cutt to bee my soole executrix with my sunn Richd Cutt," and requests his brothers John and Richard to be overseers of his will. It was acknowledged 18 June, 1674, and recorded 24 July, 1674; inventory returned at £ 890, 19 4, 4 July, 1674. (Maine Wills, Portland, 1887, p. 43.)

Robert Cutt (2d) (Robert) born in 1666, resided in Kittery and married, 18 April, 1698, Dorcas Hammond, born May 1674. He died 24 September, 1735, aged 69. She died 17 November, 1757, aged 83. Their stones will be found in the Kittery Point Church Yard. They had four daughters,—

1. Mary born 26 Dec. 1698, married William Whipple, senior.

2. Catharine born 30 Sept. 1700, married John Moffatt, merchant of Portsmouth.

3. Mehitable born 18 August, 1703, married Hon. Jotham Odiorne, of Portsmouth.

4. Elizabeth born 20 March 1710, married Rev. Joseph Whipple of Hampton Falls, brother of William Whipple, senior.

The will of Robert Cutt (2d) of Kittery, "shipwright," dated 18 Sept. 1734, was probated 21 October 1735, and mentions his wife Dorcas Cutt and our children "Mary Whipple, Katherine Moffat, Mehitable Odiorne and Elizabeth Whipple," he appoints his wife Dorcas Cutt, Executrix, and bequeaths "to my well beloved daughter Mary Whipple, besides what I have heretofore given Her my Land or Farm in Kittery, Scituate & being at the Place called & known by the name of Crooked Lane together with the Dwelling house and all other Buildings upon the said Land of whatsoever Denomination," with other land as described.—(Maine Wills, pp. 360-364.)

The will of Dorcas Cutt of Kittery, "Widow," signed 26 May 1749, was probated 3 August 1758, and bequeaths "to my beloved daughter Mary Whipple her Heirs and Assigns all my Household Goods and Furniture, Money, Notes and Bonds and all my moveable or personal Estate of what Nature or kind or Quality soever." It mentions her other daughters Katharine Moffat, Mehitable Odiorne and Elizabeth Whipple, and appoints "my son" William Whipple, executor.—(Ibid, pp. 837-9.)

Further information of the maternal ancestors of General Whipple will doubtless be found in the Cutts Genealogy, by Cecil Hampden Cutts Howard, of Brooklyn, N. Y., which is now in press.

William senior, and Mary (Cutt) Whipple had five children.

1. William, after whom the Whipple School is named, as first proposed by the writer in the Portsmouth DAILY EVENING TIMES, of 13 May, 1890.

2. Robert Cutt, who died 4 May 1761, aged 25 years, and whose stone stands near his father's in the Kittery Point cemetery.

3. Joseph, Colonel, and Collector of Customs for the port of Portsmouth, who resided in the house then and now standing at the northeast corner of State and Chestnut Streets, Portsmouth, (No. 79 State St.) He died 26 February 1816, aged 78 years. Hannah, wife of Joseph Whipple died 30 January 1811, aged 75 years. They had no children.

4. Mary, born in 1730, who married Robert Trail, born in the Orkney Islands, a distinguished merchant of Portsmouth, comptroller of the Port until the Revolution and afterward Collector of the Island of Bermudas, who resided in the house then and now standing at the southwest corner of State and Fleet streets, (No. 82 State street). She survived her husband and died 3 October, 1791, aged 61 years. Their [only] daughter Mary married Keith Spence, Esq., whom she survived, and died January 10, 1824, aged 69. Robert and Mary (Whipple) Trail were the ancestors of the late Commodore Charles Whipple Pickering, U. S. Navy, of Portsmouth, N. H., who died 29 February, 1888, at St. Augustine, Florida; and of James Russell Lowell, poet and essayist, Professor of modern languages and belles lettres at Harvard University, and U. S. Minister to Spain and England, born 22 February, 1819, in Cambridge, Mass., whose father Rev. Charles Lowell born 15 August, 1782 in Boston, married Harriet, daughter of Captain Robert T. Spence, U. S. Navy, of Portsmouth, N. H., and died in Cambridge, Mass., 20 January, 1861.

5. Hannah, born in 1734, married Dr. Joshua Brackett, an eminent and highly esteemed physician of Portsmouth, born in Greenland, N. H., in May, 1733, died in Portsmouth, 17 July, 1802. They resided on State street, in the house nearly opposite the Unitarian church (No. 67) which was formerly much larger than at present, and the grounds extended back as far as Congress street. She died 24 April, 1805, aged 71. They had no children.

The will of William Whipple (senior) of Kittery, "Mariner," dated 21 June, 1751, probated 3 September 1751, inventory returned 26 Sept., 1751, £ 712, 6.7, mentions wife Mary, daughter Mary Traile, children William, Robert Cutt, Joseph and Hannah,—gives "my Silver Hilted Sword & my Watch to my son William," and appoints his brother Joseph Whipple, sole executor. (Maine Wills, pp. 656-8).

The remains of William Whipple, senior, with those of his son, Robert Cutt Whipple, and of his wife's father and mother, rest in the Kittery Point cemetery, opposite the old church, and not far from the Champernowne Hotel. The stones are close together, east of the entrance, and near the road. The inscriptions are as follows.

The "Whipple Garrison House" in Kittery, Maine, the birth place of General William Whipple, "situated on Whipple's Cove, so called, was built for a garrison house at a very early date, though the precise year is not known. [It is directly opposite the Marine Barracks, and the house and water front, with the family tomb of the present owner, can be plainly seen from the bridge leading from Kittery to the Navy Yard.] Until recently altered it was a fine specimen of the architecture of such houses — with the upper story projecting over the lower, so that the doors and windows could be protected from the Indians, and with very small, strongly defended windows [It was altered about 1845, by Jesse A. Philbrick, father of the present owner and occupant, Harrison J. Philbrick, when the old garrison house was taken down, and the remainder which was added to the original house by William Whipple, senior, about 1740, was greatly changed inside and outside, though many interesting features yet remain.] It was probably built by the inhabitants of the little hamlet in the neighborhood. Later it became the residence of Robert Cutt 2d. The first Robert Cutt, a brother of John and Richard, lived at first in the Great House, [Portsmouth] and then removed to Kittery to carry on his business of shipbuilding, which was very extensive. His widow married Francis Champernowne. His son Robert, who lived in this house had four daughters, one of whom married William Whipple, Sen. William Whipple, her son, born here in 1730, became Gen. Whipple, the signer of the Declaration of Independence. When he married his cousin Catherine Moffatt, he went to live at the house of her father on Market street." (Portsmouth Guide Book, 1884, pp. 143 - 144.)

This house, No. 70 Market street, Portsmouth, now the residence of Alexander H. Ladd, Esq., was "built about 1760 by John Moffatt, for his son, Samuel, who married a daughter of Col. John Tufton Mason. John Moffatt was born in England in 1692. He was a rich merchant, and married a grand-daughter of President Cutt. He lived to the age of 94. Samuel Moffatt having failed in business, his father moved into the house himself, and Gen. William Whipple, who had married his daughter, resided with him.

Gen. Whipple, who was born in 1730, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, member of the first N. H. Council, and General of one of the N. H. brigades. He died here in 1785. The magnificent horse-chestnut tree still standing [1890] in the yard [south of the house] was planted by his hand. [It is doubtless the largest and handsomest tree of the kind in New England,—a beautiful photograph of the tree in full bloom was taken by Davis Brothers a few years since].

After his death, his widow, Madam Whipple, resided here for many years. The house afterward passed into the possession of her niece, wife of Dr. N. A. Haven, and thence to Dr. Haven's daughter, who married Alexander Ladd, [father of the present owner]. It is a beautiful and spacious edifice, with a hall of uncommon elegance, and contains many valuable portraits.

Gen. Whipple had two slaves, Prince and Cuffee, almost as well known in Portsmouth as their master. After his death they lived in a small house in High street, on land given them by Madam Whipple, at the foot of her garden. Prince's widow resided here till 1832." (Ibid, pp. 93-94).

General Whipple's slaves, Prince and Cuffee Whipple "were brought from Africa when boys, and it is said were sons of an African prince, sent here to be educated, but to his credit, be it said, that with him theory and practice went hand in hand, and when fighting for his own independence, he gave liberty to his slaves, and even refused to assist Gen. Washington to recover a slave—Ona Stains, 'the waiting woman' of his [Washington's] wife, who had left her mistress and taken refuge in Stratham," N. H. "Prince always attended his master on his travels, as a body servant, being [as stated in the Rambles I-153] a 'large, well-proportioned, and fine looking man, of gentlemanly manners and deportment.' Upon [Whipple's] starting to Saratoga, as general, Prince was ordered to get the horses ready for the march. He was dilatory, and Gen. Whipple upbraiding him, he replied thus: 'Master, you are going to fight for your liberty, but I have none to fight for.' 'Prince', said the general, 'behave like a man, and do your duty, and from this hour you shall be free.' Prince did his duty, accompanied his master in his expedition and was a freeman." (N. H. Adjutant General's Report, 1886, Vol. II, pp. 325-6 and 344).

Seven most interesting Revolutionary letters written by General Whipple to John Langdon and others in 1775 and 1776, will be found in a pamphlet entitled "Letters by Josiah Bartlett, William Whipple and others, written before and during the Revolution," Philadelphia, 1889.

General Whipple attended the [old] North Church, Portsmouth, occupying "the wall pew next to the pulpit on the south side." Washington sat in this pew when he visited Portsmouth in 1789. (Rambles, I-259 and 324-5).

Many interesting incidents of General Whipple's life are related in the Portsmouth annals, pages 281-284, and in the Rambles about Portsmouth, especially in the latter, series I, pages 149-156, where the story of his proposed marriage to his cousin, Mehitabel Odiorne, who changed her mind on the wedding evening, is dramatically told.

General Whipple married another cousin Catharine Moffatt, as already stated. Her portrait with that of her father, John Moffatt, and her mother, Catharine (Cutt) Moffatt, are mentioned in the Rambles, II, 192, as having been exhibited at Portsmouth in 1823, at the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the settlement of New Hampshire. The two latter portraits still remain in Portsmouth, and are the property of Alexander H. Ladd, Esq., but the former was given by Madam Whipple to her niece and namesake, Catharine Whipple Roberts, who married the distinguished Unitarian divine, Andrew P. Peabody, D. D., once of Portsmouth, and now of Cambridge, Mass., to whom it at present belongs.

Mr. Ladd also possesses a handsome and valuable portrait of General Whipple, painted by U. D. Tenney, the artist, from the miniature used by Trumbull in painting his celebrated picture, "The Declaration of Independence," painted by order of Congress in 1817-1824, which hangs in the Rotunda of the Capitol at Washington. It is believed by those well qualified to judge, that the portrait in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, claimed to be that of General Whipple, is really that of his brother, Col. Joseph Whipple, a picture of whom is in possession of Mr. Ladd. It is hoped that the proposed presentation of a duplicate of Mr. Tenney's portrait of General Whipple to the Whipple School, may meet with the enthusiastic support of our people, and be successfully accomplished.

Madam Whipple was living in 1823 at a very advanced age. She resided the latter part of her life at, and died in the large gambrel-roof house, now standing, the first on the left, on the road leading south from Portsmouth Plains. General and Mrs. Whipple had seven children, all of whom died in infancy. General Whipple died 28 November 1785, in Portsmouth. His grave in the North Cemetery, which is yearly decorated by Storer Post, G. A. R., is reverently visited by many citizens of the great Republic he helped to found.

General Whipple's remains rest on the rising ground near the center of the Cemetery, where his stone, with that of his son "William Whipple, died April 29, 1773, aged 1 year." that of his niece Mrs. Spence, and his sisters Mrs. Trail and Mrs. Brackett, and the husband of the latter, will be found. A little to the North are the stones of his brother, Col. Joseph Whipple and the latter's wife. General Whipple's wife's stone has not been found in the North Cemetery, or elsewhere [see below], but her father's and mother's stones, a little south of the General's are inscribed as follows:

This Stone is erected in Memory of

who departed this Life
the 22d day of January, 1786.

Here lies interr'd the Body of

"Mr. Whipple was possessed of a strong mind and quick discernment, was easy in his manners, courteous in his deportment, correct in his habits and constant in his friendships. He very early took a decided part in favor of his countrymen in their disputes with Great Britain. His townsmen placed the highest confidence in his patriotism and integrity, and frequently elected him to offices which required firmness and moderation." (Annals, p. 282)

The latest and best biographical notice of General Whipple is printed in Vol. VI. of Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography. New York, 1889, (where his picture and autograph may be seen) and is as follows:—

"Whipple, William, signer of the Declaration of Independence, born in Kittery, Maine, 14 January, 1730; died in Portsmouth, N. H., 28 November, 1785. His father, William, a native of Ipswich, Mass., was bred as a maltster, but, removing to Kittery, engaged in a seafaring life for several years. The son was educated at a public school in his native town, and afterward became a sailor, having command of a vessel before he was twenty-one years of age. He engaged in the European, West India, and African trade, and brought large numbers of negro slaves to this country, but afterward, during the Revolution, liberated those that belonged to him. In 1759 he abandoned the sea entirely and entered into business, in Portsmouth with his brother Joseph which connection lasted till about two years previous to the Revolution

At an early period of the contest between the colonies and Great Britain he took a decided part in favor of the former. He was elected a delegate from New Hampshire to the Continental Congress in 1775, taking his seat in May. was re-elected, 23 January, 1776, took his seat on 29 February following, and signed the Declaration of Independence in July. He was re-elected to Congress in 1778, and declined to be chosen again, but was a member of the state assembly in 1780-4. He was commissioned a brigadier-general in 1777, commanded a brigade of New Hampshire troops at the battles of Saratoga and Stillwater, and, after the surrender of Burgoyne, signed the articles of capitulation with Col. James Wilkinson on behalf of General Horatio Gates. General Whipple was afterward selected as one of the officers under whose charge the British troops were conducted to their place of encampment on Winter hill, near Boston. In 1778, he participated in General Sullivan's expedition to Rhode Island, and he resigned his military appointment, 20 June, 1782. In 1780 he was appointed a commissioner of the board of admiralty, which post he declined. He was state superintendent of finances in 1782-4, appointed judge of the supreme court 20 June, 1782, and justice of the peace and quorum throughout the state in December, 1784, and acted in this capacity till his death."

His epitaph is as follows:—

Here are deposited the remains
Of the Honorable William Whipple
who departed this Life
on the 28th day of November, 1785,
in the 55th year of his Age.

He was often elected
and thrice attended
the Continental Congress
as Delegate

for the State of New Hampshire, particularly in that memorable year
in which America declared itself independent of Great Britain.

He was also at the Time of his decease
a Judge of the supreme Court of Judicature.

In Him
a firm & ardent Patriotism was united with universal benevolence
and every social Virtue.

(Times, 10 October, 1890.)

"John Moffatt of Dunstar In ye county of Summerset In Great Britain and Catharine Cutt of Kittery In ye County of York in N. Englnd were marryd ye 20 of Augt 1723 by ye Revd Nathl Rogers." — ("Births, Marriages and Deaths in Portsmouth, N. H.," N. E. H. G. Register, vol. XXIV, p. 14.)

Their daughter Catharine (Moffatt) Whipple, wife of General William Whipple, died in 1823, at the age of one hundred years. She was buried in Governor John Langdon's family tomb on the southern edge of the North Cemetery, Portsmouth (southwest from her husband's stone), where, on the front of the tomb, the following may be read :

Mrs Catharine Whipple.
Born 1723, Died 1823.

Mrs. Catharine (Cutt) Moffatt was a granddaughter of Robert Cutt (1st) as stated on page 21, and not of President John Cutt as stated on page 22.

Mrs. Harriet (Spence) Lowell was a daughter of Keith and Mary (Trail) Spence, and a sister of Captain Robert T. Spence, U. S. Navy, instead of his daughter as stated on page 21.

The following tribute to the memory of Capt. Francis Champernowne, who married the widow of Robert Cutt (1st) as stated on pages 21 and 22, was written by the late John Elwyn, Esq., of Portsmouth (born 1801, died 1876) son of Thomas Elwyn and Elizabeth, only child of Governor John Langdon.

CHAMPERNOWNE.

Thomas de Camberton for Hastings field
more !

And no Crusader's Warhorse plumed and steeled

Paws the grass now at Modbury's blazoned door :

No lettered marble nor-ancestral shield—
Where all the Atlantic shakes the lonesome shore

Lies our forgotten,—only Cobble stones
To tell us Where are Champernowne's poor bones !

The portrait of General William Whipple, referred to on page 23, was painted by U. D. Tenney, the artist, of Concord, N. H., from Whipple's portrait in the original painting by Col. Trumbull, entitled "The Signers of the Declaration of Independence," which hangs in the Art Gallery of Yale College. The signers are mostly seated in rows, and in the first row, at the left hand corner, is the front head and breast of General Whipple; the back head and body, except a little of the front, are obscured by Bartlett. All the figures in the picture are very carefully painted likenesses of the men, painted from sittings, and this painting is the original, and not a copy like the one in Washington. It is supposed that the little head painted by Trumbull is the only likeness of Whipple in existence which was done from life.

General Whipple's Letters.

The following interesting letters, written by General William Whipple to John Langdon and others in 1775 and 1776, are taken from the pamphlet entitled, "Letters by Josiah Bartlett, William Whipple and others, written before and during the Revolution," Philadelphia, 1889, mentioned on page 23; though they number eight, instead of seven as there stated. Some of the letters are here printed in shorter paragraphs than in the pamphlet.

The original letters are in possession of Rev. Alfred Langdon Elwyn, of Philadelphia, for whom the pamphlet was printed, and who has many valuable papers once belonging to his great grandfather Governor John Langdon, of Portsmouth, N. H. Governor Langdon was born in 1739, in Portsmouth, where he died 18 September, 1819. Elizabeth Sherburne, his wife, born 1761, died March 2, 1813, was the daughter of the Hon. John Sherburne, of Portsmouth, and his wife Elizabeth Moffatt, who was sister of Catharine (Moffatt) Whipple, wife of General Whipple. A biographical notice of Governor Langdon, with his picture and autograph, will be found in Vol. III of Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, New York, 1887; and a mural tablet to his memory has this year been erected in the vestibule of the North Church, Portsmouth, by Rev. Mr. Elwyn. The letters are as follows, viz :

PHILADELPHIA, 3d May, [1775?].

MY DEAR SIR:—

Your favor of ye 12th Ulto came to hand Yesterday I have not yet heard of the arrivals of the schooner (you mention) at Baltimore; however orders are given to dispatch her as soon as she arrives.

I most heartily lament with you the situation of our paper curry & am sometimes almost ready to think with you that "all nature will not support it." However another project is now on the tapis & if that sho'd fail, after a thorough trial we must endeavor to support the war without for the war must be supported at all events 'till an Honorable peace can be obtained: in this I know you will agree with me fully.

But why do you suffer so much impudence from the Tories is it possible that those pests to society sho'd govern the Town meetings in the M^tropolis of New Hampshire. I have much more to say to you on this subject but time not permitting must bid you adieu.

WM. WHIPPLE.

[JOHN LANGDON, ESQ.]

IN COMMITTEE OF SAFETY,
EXTER, the 8th of July, 1775.

GENTLEMEN:—

The Congress of this Colony adjourned yesterday to the 22nd of next Month, having delegated their Power to this Committee during their recess, to provide for the Publick Safety.

In a former letter the Congress informed you that this Colony chose Deputies who met on the 17th of May last at Exter in Congress and voted to raise Two Thousand Men for the Common defence of the Colonies, which men have some time been raised and put under the care of Nathaniel Follform, Esqr., [Nathaniel Folsom] who was appointed a Major General under the Commander in Chief of the American forces and joined the Army before Boston, except Two Company's for the Guard of our Sea Coast for the present.

The news from Canada of their Hostile preparations (an account of which from Connecticut and by Mr. Dean Missionary from Canada, we expect will reach you before this) have so alarmed the inland Frontiers that the Congress have ordered Three Company's of Sixty men each to be raised & posted there for their defence.

The cost of raising and supporting so many men you will readily see to be a difficult task for so small a Colony without any money to begin with. We have wrote to you & the Congress several times on the situation of our Affairs but not receiving any directions we have Emittted Ten Thousand Pounds in Notes of hand on the Credit of this Colony payable at different periods with Six per Cent. Interest, and have ordered Ten Thousand Pounds more to be forthwith Emittted for supplying the present Exigencies of the Colony. Some Resolve of the American Congress giving such Notes a Currency would be of great service.

We are greatly concerned for Gun Powder as we have scarce any except what was taken from the Fort last Winter, a considerable part of which has been sent to the Army before Boston and the Western Frontiers. We hope some plan is laid for bringing some in to the Southern Colonies as New England is so watched that there is but little hope of getting it here.

The Ships of War & Cutters previous to the first of this Month seized all Vessels Laden with Provisions, Salt or Molasses which has much distressed the Eastern Parts, but not discouraged them. They have destroyed Fort William & Mary and carried off the Cannon to Boston. However Eight large pieces have been Bro't from Jerry Point some time ago, and some of them have been mounted and are now pointed against the Town of Boston.

We are anxious to know the result of your deliberations in order to conduct the affairs of this Colony, which at this time is in some confusion, the people not suffering things to proceed in their former manner.

The General Court has met here, and has not & we believe will not proceed to publick Business.

We desire you as often as opportunity will permit to write to the Congress or this Committee at Exter and inform us from time to time as much of the affairs of the publick as is permitted, in particular the directions of the Congress concerning the providing for & paying the Army raised for the Common Defence.

On the 12th of June last Coll. John Fenton who was chosen a Member of the General Court by virtue of the King or rather Governor's Writ without the consent of the Assembly, made his appearance in the House, (tho' he had for some time before kept on board the Man of War in the Harbour.) The House took into consideration his Election & vacated his Seat. Soon after the People of the Town greatly exasperated at his Conduct obliged him to surrender, tho' he had taken shelter in the Governors House and our Congress have since confined him.

The Governor & his family went off that evening to Capt. Cochrans under the Protection of the Man of War where they still remain.

The publick Records being thought unsafe at Portsmouth have by order of the Congress been Removed to Exter except the Books and Charters which the Secretary says the Governor has in Possession. A Committee from Congress have demanded and received of George Jaffry Esq. fifteen Hundred Pounds of Publick Money in his hands.

By order of the Committee of Safety I am with great truth & regard your very Humble Servt.

WM. WHIPPLE. Cha'n. P. T. P. S.—The Congress at their first meeting chose the Hon. Matthew Thornton Esqr. their President who we Esteem to be zealously and earnestly devoted to the service of his Country.

JOHN SULLIVAN & JOHN LANGDON ESQRS.

EXETER, 12th Octo., 1775.

DEAR SIR:—

Affairs in general remain much in the state as when you have left us, you no doubt have heard what vessels were taken belonging to Portsmouth, I congratulate you on your good fortune in the recapture of your ship. I have not heard yet of her sailing from Cape Ann. The Pirates carry everything they meet with to Boston, but as they are not so plenty on the coast as they have been I hope she will escape them.

It was a lucky circumstance that the flour ship mistook Piscatagna for Boston as there was not a barrel to be bot in the colony when she arrived nor had not been for some time & General Washington tells us the army are in great want of that article, the greatest part of it will go to him, we are now anxious to hear from the army gone against Canada.

The People in the western part of this Colony hearing Genl. Schuyler wanted men, raised two Companies at their own risque who marched with Col. Beedel, this spirited conduct will doubtless meet the approbation of the Congress

Gov. Wentworth has been as far as the Isle of Shoals in a tender from whence he sent in a farther Prorogation of the Genl. Court which answered but little purpose, as there was not a member who intended to appear. The sons of Despotism dare not open their mouths except when they get together to lament their loss of power and what passes between them then is of but little consequence to the publick.

Our Batteries go on Briskly we have fourteen Guns Mounted on Pierces Island & the Battery on Seavy's Hill is ready for four or six they were to have been carried over as yesterday there is also some Guns on Popperal hill, we have a boom preparing to lay across the river from Hendersons point to Bass Rock which will be finished in a few days, when these works are all completed, we sh^d be in a tolerable state of defence if we had a sufficiency of powder but we are greatly deficient in that article (having as you know) straighten'd ourselves to supply the army. (Our Militia are not yet settled the People in Portsm. and some other towns in the Regiment object to the Major and I hope it will be the means of some alteration in when the Congress meet which will be in about three weeks those commissions are retained yet.)

I hope by this time I may congratulate your worthy colleague on his recovery from the small Pox, & I hope your prudence will direct you to keep out of the way of all Malignant Distempers.

What sort of a journey had you, when do you expect to be at home, are you like to make a constitution for us, are the members of Congress resolute or do they grow cold as the winter approaches, how does Doctor Churches conduct set on the stomach of his acquaintants, do you keep a packet running to and from England acc^ts from there, have you published your journals I want exceeding to hear particularly from you have only seen a letter from you from Winsor and one from — to Dr. Thompson from Col. Bartlet of the 18th ulto., but hope there are more on the way if not I shall expect a long and particular acc^t of all matters after your receipt of this in the meantime be assured

I am with Great Respect,

Your most O^bt Ser.,

WM. WHIPPLE.

P. S.—General Washington having mentioned in his letter to the committee of Portsmouth that he wd write to the Congress to know what sh^d be allowed the captor is the reason of that matter being mentioned in the matter letter of the Committee of this date the settlement of this may be a president [precedent?] on any similar case in the future, the ship came into the harbor there was not the least opposition to People who Boarded her however I think something sh^d be allowed them by way of encouragement.

[JOHN LANGDON, ESQ.]

Answered fully October 26th.

PHILA. 26th Octo'r. 1776.

MY DEAR SIR:—

I arrived here ye 24 the Committee have not met since my arrival but have mentioned your demand to some of the members there is no doubt but I shall be in cash to honor your Draught whenever they appear there is no prospect of Cannon from this place, however I have some hopes from another quarter viz Connecticut the circumstances are these, the Cannon are made for the Trumbel in that state & there is no prospect of her being provided with other necessaries, the Committee have wrote to Gov. Trumbel to procure Cannon for two ships & in the meantime to send those made for the Trumbel to you, from the known Disposition of that Gentn. to promote the Public Good I have great hopes you will be supplied from the Quarter, orders are gone to Providence to supply you with canvass for a second suit of sails. I don't know but you'll have a wrangle on your hands with ye Providence Gentry, however my Boy I'll stand by you as long as I can.

The ships here are not so forward as I expected to find them only three of them are Launched. The Rank of the Captains in the Naval service was established before I arrived. I find Thompson is the 6th on the list, had I been here I certainly wd have had him higher, however considering the train after him I think it well for want of time must refer you to Col. Bartlett for news, &c in hast as you see.

Your Affect. Friend & Humble. Servt.

WM. WHIPPLE.

JOHN LANGDON, ESQ.

PHILADELPHIA, 7 NOV. 1776.

MY DEAR SIR:—

My last was by the Schooner Betsey by whom thro' your favor I shipped 12 Barrels flour, I now take the liberty to inclose James Miller's receipt for the same, have des red Mrs. W. to settle the freight with you & shall also desire to Apologize for the trouble I gave you.

I have got an order on the treasury & shall Honour Your Drafts whenever they appear. I mentioned by Col. Bartlett how matters stood respecting the Guns & cannot help flattering myself You'll have them from Connecticut, the Furnices here have been very unfortunate the Guns that were brought down before I left this place last Augt. have been tryd a second time and many of them would not stand the proof so that there is not Guns in this City for one ship.

The President tels me has forwarded the Commissions for the Officers. It happened unlucky for the officers of the Raleigh that the Rank was established before my arrival has no [as had not?] that have been the case I am inclined to think they w'd have been higher on the list, however their merit I am in no doubt will recommend them to promotion. The Marine Committee have received a letter from the Committee of Providence in answer to one sent them in consequence of what you wrote Col. Bartlet, A Copy of which also a Copy of one from Gov. Hopkins (who is now at Providence) I shall procure & transmit & leave you to comment on them, in the meantime I'll undertake to defend you against Calumny.

I have just received your favor of the 21 Ulto. Your giving up to Capt. Piance his small adventure is in my opinion very right, but by some hints that have been dropped am inclined to think that some Gentn. suppose you have exceeded your power. Capt. Bowden I find has preferred a Petition which is referred to a Committee. I have a letter from Capt. Wentworth on the subject, which I shall answer in a day or two. I heartily wish there may be some method adopted whereby that Gentleman may be but must confess am doubtful of the success of his Petition, for a Public Body to break their own Genl. Rules may be attended with evil consequences, nowever I shall do all in my power to have this matter determined as speedily as possible, & shall use my endeavors to serve Cap. Bowden so far as (in my opinion) is consistent with the public Good.

I have no news to tel you, acct's from abroad are very favorable, hope to have it in my power to transmit you some pleasing intelligence shortly, in the meantime I wish effectual measures may be taken to procure Cloathing for the Army. Congress pass Resolves & send them abroad, but Gentn even those who compose Public Bodies suffer their attention to be so much engrossed by their private interest that the Public concerns of the utmost importance is neglected notwithstanding their own & their Country's Salvation is at stake.

Our Armys are in good spirits, but can it be expected that that will be the case long, when they are almost naked? Congress have been disappointed in some goods that was expected some time ago, perhaps they will still arrive, no doubt some will, in the meantime it has ben recommended to the several states to make all the provisions they can, but I don't see that such Recommendation has any effect.

I have wrote very freely, but hope you'll make a prudent use of it. I by no means wod Discourage; my desire is to animate everyone to exert himself in the Glorious cause in which America is engaged, for my own part I have not a doubt of success, in the end, but my wish is to put a speedy end to Slaughter & devastation, which already is great, but must be still greater if the war continues, which nothing will prevent but the utmost exertions of the Friends to Liberty & Humanity, such exertions, under the smile of Heaven, will restore peace to & establish Happiness in this Western World.

Our last accounts from the Army is favorable. Gen. Lee in a Private letter to a friend says that Howe has but two moves more in which we shall check mate him. I must leave the explanation of this to those who understand the Game of Chess; a Report is just arrived that many Hessians had deserted, if this proves true its a favorable circumstance, great pains have been taken to perswade those people that they wod be Massacred if they fell into the hands of the Americans. Those that have been taken are very agreeably disappointed & say that if their countrymen were undeceived there wod be a general Revolt, some measnres have been taken for this purpose & perhaps with effect.

Inclosed you have some late Resolutions of Congress respecting the navy, some further proposals are before Congress, which I expect will soon be taken up; present my Regards wherever due, & be assured of the best wishes of your friend, &c.

WM. WHIPPLE.

JOHN LANGDON, ESQ.

10 Nov. Genl. Howe (not liking the situation of our Army) removed very suddenly in the night from White Plains, where he was encamped, this movement was a matter of great speculation in our Army, but from the observations made on his motions it was conjectured that he intended to cross over to New Jersey. Gen. Washington has detached about 4000 under command of Gen. Putnam [Putnam?] over the River, above him, in order to give him a proper reception on this side. Advice is just arrived that the Enemy had retreated from Crown Point, the Particulars of this affair is hourly expected by Express thats on the road.

PHILADELPHIA, 16th Nov. 1776.

MY DEAR SIR:—

I have been about two months & six days from Portsmouth & have received one short letter from my Professed Friend, J. Langdon, Esqr., pray sir do you know that Gentn.? if you do, please to present my Regards to him, & tel him, I shall always be ready to execute any of his commands in my way, but that I by no means expect he will give himself the trouble of writing unless it is on a Subject that immediatele concerns himself, for as all mankind was created mainly for his own benefit, why sho'd one man concern himself about the advantage or disadvantage that may arise to another; its true the word Friendship is often used but there is no substantial meaning to it in this refined age, its quite an old fashioned word; nothing is now ment by it but that I will readily gratify the person I call my friend provided I can thereby obtain any real advantage to myself, what think you of this matter? don't you think that this is the modern acception of the word Friendship?

I know you think with me that it is; but at the same time Your General Conduct convinces me that your sentiments are not so far modernized as not to be actuated by the true principles of Friendship, & to convince you that I am actuated by the same principles I now inclose you the copies of the Letters from Providence mentioned in my last, I don't mean by sending these letters to excite resentment, but to put it in Your power, when an opportunity offers, to vindicate yourself; whenever the person for whom I profess a Friendship is treated in a manner that appears to me injurious to his character, I esteem it an indispensable duty to vindicate him, is that all? no, I must do more; I must let him know by whom & in what manner he has been traduced, in order that he may know who are his enemies, & in what manner to guard against them, this ever has been and ever shall be my conduct towards the person for whom I profess a Friendship.

You have here inclosed the late Resolutions of Congress so far as they have gone respecting the navy. I hope for some further alterations, but you know things of this sort must be done by degrees; the encouragement now given to Officers & men in the Navy are in my Opinion as great as they can possibly expect, & I hope will be to their entire satisfaction.

It is impossible to give you an idea of the situation of the Armies, they have been in perpetual motion, our people always have the advantage in Skirmi-shes, that being the case it is undoubtedly for our interest not to come to a General Battle, which in my opinion will be avoided. A considerable fleet about 100 sail left Sandy Hook last Wednesday, its supposed they are Empty Transports for Europe.

A ship arrived from france a few days since with arms and ammunition only, several others were to sail in a few days after her with other articles. God send them safe. Give me leave to congratulate on Carlton Retreat from Crown point, what a glorious Campaign those Boasters have made, I think it will make a grand figure in annals of British.

This goes by express who sets off tomorrow morning, I shall keep it open that if anything sho'd turn-up worth communicating will give it you, in the meantime be assured that I am your very Sincere Friend & Humble. Servt.

W. WHIPPLE.

[JOHN LANGDON, ESQ.]

BALTIMORE, 23d Dec., 1776.

MY DEAR SIR:—

This will be handed you by Alexander Rose, Esqr. of Charlestown, South Carolina, a Friend of Saml. Purviance, Esqr., of this town whose character you are not unacquainted with. Mr. Rose is on his journey to the Eastward & I understand intends visiting Portsmouth, in that case I doubt not he will receive every civility from you due to Mr. Purviance's Friend.

Capt. Abely who accompanies Mr. Rose signalized himself as a Brave Officer in defence of the Fort on Sullivan's Island.

I beg leave to recommend both these Gentn. to the circle of your Friends & am with great respect, Dr. Sr.

Your Most Obt. Servt.,

WM. WHIPPLE.

JOHN LANGDON, ESQR.

BALTIMORE, 24th Decr., 1776.

MY DEAR SIR:—

My last from Philadelphia I think was a day or two before Congress adjourned from that place which was ye 11th inst., they met here the 20th and are now doing business with spirit, the near approach of the Enemy to that City struck such a panic in all orders of people there except Tories (of which you know there are not a small number) that the contagio seized the nerves of some members of C—— which caused a removal to this place which I assure you was much against my inclinations, however I hope its all for the best.

The main body of the Enemy advanced as far as Trenton & a party of 500 to 1000 visited Burlington, whether any of them remain at the last mentioned place we have not had any late accts but by the last accts they remained at Trenton & at some places farther up the river. Our army, by the loss at Fort Washington, & the Expiration of instalment [enlistment?] were reduced to a handful, by no means sufficient to make a stand against the Enemy before they reached the Delaware, Genl. Washington was there joined by some Militia from Phila, his army is daily increased by Militia besides he has been lately joined by the deivision lately commanded by Genl. Lee also by a body of Troops from Ticonderoga under command of Genl. Gates, so that they are now pretty strong & I think (if they have got rid of the panic that seized them at the time they lost Fort Washington) they may still give a good account of Howe's army & be amply revenged for the Brutal Casulties & worse than Savage Ravages committed by those Infernal instruments of Tyranny for the consolation of the Tories these Barbarians seek their vengeance indiscriminately on Whig & Tory, notwithstanding all this some are so infatuated as to go & sue for pardon among which are three of the Allens, viz. Andrew, John & Wm., thus as far as my head will permit me I have given you a state of the army in this quarter.

I shod be very happy if I could hear the Leevies for the new army were completed in the Eastern States I expect there will be still a farther requisition, it is absolutely necessary that we shod have a very formidable army in the field immediately. I hope every Friend of America in the several States will forward this business with every possible exertion.

The accounts from France which are down to Octr. are very favorable. I wish for the consolation of my Friends I was at Liberty to communicate them but circumstances will not admit of it, but I can say this much in the words of a correspondent, "a General War in Europe seems unavoidable." A vessel is arrived Phila with about 1000 stand of arms a considerable parcel of blankets & other woollens & other valuable articles.

We have not had a Marine Board since we arrived here nor have I been able to get the dimensions of the Ship that is to be built in N. H. but I hope the business of Collecting Timber, &c. is going on, so soon as the Committee meets I intend to procure orders for two or three small vessels say of 60 or 80 ton to be sent here for Iron, they can take in Iron sufficient to Ballast them & fill up with flour, I am in no doubt of obtaining this order therefore wish you wou procure these vessels immediately, many articles may be sent here that wou pay a good freight of which I shall furnish you with a list in my next, Iron & Flour may be had much cheaper than at Philada.

I am with every sentiment of Esteem your Most Ob. Servt

The Farragut School.

Municipal Affairs.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Portsmouth, N. H., Thursday evening, September 25, 1890, the name of the new school house on the north west corner of High and School streets was determined upon.

"In accordance with a vote passed at the last session of the Board [see page 19], Storer Post, No. 1, G. A. R., presented the name of Admiral David G. Farragut as an appropriate name for the new school house on High street. Accepted, and an appropriately inscribed marble tablet for the building ordered."

(Times, 26 September, 1890.)

The communication from Storer Post, G. A. R., to the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, presenting the name, was as follows:

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 17th, 1890.
To his Honor the Mayor and gentlemen of the Board of Aldermen:

At the regular meeting of Storer Post, G. A. R., held on the evening of the above date, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved. That in compliance with the request of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of Portsmouth, N. H., Storer Post, No. 1, Department of New Hampshire, Grand Army of the Republic, respectfully suggests the name of Admiral David Glasgow Farragut, U. S. Navy, born 5 July, 1801, near Knoxville, Tennessee, died 14 August, 1870, at Portsmouth, N. H., for the new High street schoolhouse—and if the name be adopted, requests that a suitable tablet, bearing his name, rank, and date and place of birth and death, be placed on the front thereof.

Biographical Notice of Admiral David G. Farragut.

"David Glasgow Farragut was born at Campbell's Station, near Knoxville, Tenn., July 5, 1801. His father, who was descended from a distinguished family of the Island of Minorca, emigrated to America, and entered the colonial army. He married in North Carolina and settled in Tennessee, but subsequently drifted to Louisiana, and entered the naval service as a sailing-master. Here an acquaintance arose between him and the celebrated Commodore David Porter, in whom young Farragut found a valuable friend.

He was appointed Midshipman, December 17, 1810, served in the frigate 'Essex' in her eventful cruise in the Pacific, and at the age of thirteen was placed in command of one of her numerous prizes; in the battle between the 'Essex' and the British ships 'Phoebe' and 'Cherub' (March 28, 1814), which resulted in the capture of the former, Farragut was slightly wounded, and received the commendation of his commander, who regretted that he was 'too young for promotion.'

The story of the pig, which he tells in his journal, is not merely amusing, but suggests that some characteristics of the future commander were already pretty well developed in the boy. After the battle, a young reefer of the 'Phoebe' was carrying off a pet pig, when Farragut claimed it as private property, and determined not to let it go. The oldsters cheered his pluck, made a ring, and declared that the winner of a fair fight should have the pig. This was quickly decided in favor of the young American, whose physical education had been exceptionally good. 'So,' says Farragut, 'I took Master Murphy under my arm, feeling that I had in some degree wiped out the disgrace of our defeat.'

With the remainder of the crew of the 'Essex,' he returned to the United States in the 'Essex, Jr.' (a captured whaler.)

After peace was declared he received orders to the 'Independence,' 74, bearing the broad-pennant of Commodore Bainbridge, and intended to take part in the Algerine war; but Decatur succeeded in forcing the Bey to terms before the ship's arrival in the Mediterranean.

Farragut made a second cruise to the Mediterranean in the 'Washington,' under Commodore Chauncey, and his journal of observations at this period of his career is extremely interesting. Through the interposition of the chaplain of his ship, Mr. Charles Folsom, who had been temporarily appointed consul at Tunis, Farragut had an opportunity to study and travel in the interior; in 1823-4 he served under his old commander, Porter, in the Mosquito Fleet, fitted out for the suppression of piracy in the West Indies, took part in a small affair against the pirates at Cape Cruz, and had some romantic and ludicrous adventures in chasing them to their haunts on shore.

He considered his experience in the Gulf as of great service to him professionally, and looked with pride upon the fact of his getting command of the schooner 'Ferret,' at the age of twenty-two; in January, 1825, he was attached to the 'Brandywine,' the vessel to which was assigned the duty of conveying Lafayette home to France after his visit and tour in the United States; he served on the Brazilian station up to the close of 1837, as executive officer of the 'Delaware,' and in command of the 'Boxer' and 'Decatur.'

While in command of the sloop 'Erie,' at Vera Cruz, he witnessed the bombardment of the castle of San Juan de Ulloa, by the French naval forces, 1838, and being always an enthusiastic observer of matters relating to his profession, he took notes of the action.

At the breaking out of the war with Mexico, 1846, he was anxious to turn his experience to good advantage, remarking that in making his notes he had not looked forward to a war with Mexico, but had made it a rule of his life to note such things with a view to possible use in the future. After urgent solicitation he obtained command of the 'Saratoga,' March, 1847, but too late to do more than see some hard service on the blockade of Tuxpan.

After his return home, February, 1848, he was variously employed on ordnance, court-martial, and navy yard duties.

In 1854 he was sent to the Pacific coast to establish the navy yard at Mare Island, Cal. The four years passed here were uneventful, with the exception of the organization of the 'Vigilance Committee' of 1856. Farragut's coolness and judgment in dealing with a delicate question of Federal and State jurisdiction not only saved the government from being drawn into a local quarrel, but prevented bloodshed; in 1859-60, Farragut commanded the 'Brooklyn,' in the Gulf of Mexico, part of the time on special service with the American minister, Hon. Robert McLane; at the breaking out of the civil war he was residing at Norfolk, Va., his adopted home.

Being a man of broad national views, he promptly announced his allegiance to the Union, moved to the North, and after some delay was assigned to the command of the Western Gulf Squadron, January 1862; his passage of Forts Jackson and St Philip, the defences of New Orleans, April 23 and 24, 1862, in his fleet of wooden ships, was a grand achievement in naval warfare, at a time when the theory of the superiority of forts over ships was everywhere asserted.

He seemed confident of success from the first; 'as to being prepared for defeat,' he wrote, 'I certainly am not. Any man who is prepared for defeat would be half defeated before he commenced. I hope for success, shall do all in my power to secure it, and trust to God for the rest.' And with his gallant officers and men he succeeded in passing the barrier of hulks, logs, and chains, and forts; destroyed the enemy's flotilla, and placed New Orleans under guns.

As soon as possible he pushed on up the Mississippi and successfully passed the batteries of Vicksburg June 28, 1862, but the great elevation of the batteries, and the absence of a co-operating land force of sufficient strength, rendered this movement of little real importance. His vessels on the coast of Texas, however, succeeded in capturing Galveston and Sabine City.

On March 14, 1863, on attempting a bold dash past the batteries of Port Hudson, a portion of his fleet was compelled to retire, and one of his ships, the 'Mississippi,' was destroyed. But with his flagship and one small gunboat he continued on up the river, penetrating as far as Vicksburg, and finally established a blockade between Red River and Port Hudson. On the arrival of Porter from above, he returned to New Orleans by the 'Atchafalaya,' and conducted the naval operations of the siege of Port Hudson until its surrender, July 8, 1863.

His most brilliant achievement was in passing Forts Morgan and Gaines, at the entrance to Mobile Bay, August 5, 1864. In this encounter he captured the ram 'Tennessee' and gunboat 'Selma.' The forts subsequently surrendered to the combined naval and military forces.

In this engagement he showed his decision of character in taking the lead in his flag-ship at a moment when disaster seemed certain. The dramatic incident of his viewing the conflict from a lofty position in the rigging, where he had allowed himself to be secured by a lashing of rope, has been authenticated by an autograph letter of Farragut's (September 25, 1864), in which he says, 'I told you that Watson brought me the rope to tie myself in the rigging. So he did; but Drayton sent one up by the quartermaster when I was up in the main rigging. I was so much interested in what was going on around me that I hardly noticed it, but took it mechanically, and fastened it to the shrouds and around myself.'

He received the thanks of Congress, and was commissioned Rear-Admiral, July 16, 1862, and Vice-Admiral, December 21, 1864, and was finally promoted to the rank of Admiral, July 25, 1866. In 1867, in command of the European Squadron, he made an extended cruise in the 'Franklin' and was received with marked attention at the European capitals.

Farragut had a high reputation in the service for industry, character, and efficiency. He was physically and morally brave and essentially modest, though with a pleasant appreciation of his attainments. His education in some respects was remarkable. He was an indefatigable reader, and spoke several languages. Among intimates his humor was proverbial. The purity of his domestic life was as unsullied as his professional career; there was nothing in either that required explanation or apology. His plans of battle appeared simple enough, but showed a thorough, minute, and painstaking preparation. His quickness of perception and resolution in the midst of conflict were his strongest points.

He died at Portsmouth, N. H., August 14, 1870. His remains were subsequently borne to Woodlawn Cemetery, Westchester County, N. Y. (September 30), with great ceremony, where they now rest under a monument erected by his widow and son."

Admiral Farragut's Funeral.

"The death of Admiral Farragut at this [Portsmouth] naval station on Sunday last, [14 August, 1870], deprives the country of one of its most brilliant and successful naval commanders. * * *

The admiral, with his wife, arrived at the Portsmouth yard for the last time on the 4th of July last, since which time he has been at the residence of his relative, Commodore A. M. Pennock, commandant of the yard.

The funeral of Admiral Farragut will long be remembered as the most imposing and solemn ever witnessed in Portsmouth. The day opened with a cloudless sky and cool air, and as early as 8 o'clock, our streets began to be crowded with spectators. Carriages began to arrive in such numbers, that it was only with great difficulty and some danger one could find his way out from the throng. Especially was this true in the vicinity of Market and Congress streets.

The early morning trains were late and brought large crowds of distinguished persons, invited guests, etc.; and it was not until 11 12 o'clock that the funeral cortege left the Navy Yard for this city, escorted by the Speedwell and Portfire. Ten stalwart seamen from the Receiving Ship Vandalia, were selected to carry the bier from the steamer, and place it in the hearse, which was tastefully draped in flags and crape, and drawn by four horses richly caparisoned. On either side of the same, walked the pall bearers, Rear Admiral Thacher, Maj. Gen. McDowell, U. S. A., Maj. Gen. Foster, U. S. A., Commodore Parrott, Comdrs. Wells, Badger and Potter, Col. McCauley, M. C., Paymaster Watson, Chief Engineer Moore, Surgeon Hilland. The escort consisted as follows:

Squad of Police, led by the City Marshal.
 Post Marine Band,
 Head Guards, Capt. Urch.
 Marine Corps, from Portsmouth and Charlestown, commanded by Maj. Lewis.
 5th U. S. Artillery, from Fort Preble, Portland, Maj. Brewerton.
 Officiating Clergymen. Surgeons.
 Pall Bearers—Hearse—Pall Bearers.
 Mourners Body Bearers
 Squad with Admiral's and American Flags.
 Battalion of Seamen.
 Naval Officers.
 Army Officers.
 Society of the M. O. L. L. U. S.
 Society of Army and Navy of the Gulf.
 Portsmouth Cornet Band.
 Grand Army of the Republic, with bouquets.
 Fire Department.
 Odd Fellows.
 Free Masons.
 Knights Templar.
 Carriages containing city officials, etc.

The procession was very long, and as the mournful cortege came up Daniel street from the Navy Yard landing and passed slowly up Congress street, amid solemn dirges, the deep booming of minute guns, and tolling bells, was very imposing and cannot be soon forgotten by the immense crowds of silent watchers who lined the streets.

Business was generally suspended during the marching and exercises at the church. The draping of public and private buildings were very numerous and in fine taste. Market street from Bow was almost wholly in mourning, while Congress street made a fine display, the most prominent being Thacher's, Sise's, Butler & Loughton's and W. R. Preston's. All along the route, and especially on Middle street, many private residences bore emblems of white and black. Collector Bailey, J. H. Foster, Esq., and Dr. Preston, each made elegant displays. Never have we seen such a spontaneous feeling of respect from citizens, without regard to party, as was exhibited throughout the day. Much time was consumed in marching through the designated route, and it was not until half past one o'clock that the procession reached the church.

Looking into the church [St. John's] one could not but be impressed with the solemn scene presented. Festoons of black and white, tastefully interveined, depended from the ceilings, and were carried in graceful festoons caught up by bouquets, around the front of the gallery, and around the pillars, arranged, too, in rosettes, knots, etc. On the front of the singing gallery was a sword formed of black and white. A large and very elegant pyramid of flowers was placed on the baptismal font, festooned with wreaths and draperies. A superb cross over three feet high, flanked by elegant bouquets surmounted the communion table, while on the door was placed an anchor and wreath. The whole of the decorations were in exquisite taste, and were arranged under the direction of several naval officers and ladies of the church. The flower designs were procured from Messrs. Dee & Doyle, Florists, of Boston, while Mr. Galvin, of Boston, furnished a beautiful floral ship, with hull and masts entirely of flowers. This was placed near the desk, and was much admired.

The services in the church were very impressive, and conducted according to Episcopal form, by the Rector of the church, Rev. R. W. Clark, Jr., assisted by Rev. Dr. Montgomery, of New York, who was the Admiral's pastor, an intimate friend of the family. The pronouncing of the eulogy by the latter, was very fitting and beautiful. The singing was much admired and was by a male quintette consisting of Messrs. W. N. Hsley, E. P. Davis, E. B. Goodall, L. S. Butler and L. V. Newell.

Thousands of people were unable to gain admittance to the church, or even within hearing distance of the building. The services were quite long. The casket containing the noble form was of rosewood with heavy silver trimmings. Upon it rested the Admiral's full dress, with sword. The body was in full uniform, with white kid gloves. An opportunity was given to those in the church to look upon the placid face of the dead hero, which was improved by nearly all present. After the body was taken from the church and placed in the tomb close by, the Masonic honors were paid, the Grand Army cast their flowers upon the casket and three volleys were fired by the military.

Thus ended the last sad rites, and the remains of one of the noblest of earth's sons were laid away to await the orders of the Government. It was a fitting memorial service throughout and reflects great honor upon all participants. Portsmouth has taken peculiar pride in doing her humble part in honoring the noble dead.

We copy the beautiful poem from the Chronicle, written by Albert Loughton, of this city.

Grand in his dreamless sleep our Admiral lies;
 The brave heart still, so fondly loved and blest;

The light gone forth from those prophetic eyes,
The guiding hand at rest.

His star in glory set—his great work done;—
Muffle the drum, and toll the solemn bell;
And let the deep voice of the minute-gun
A people's sorrow tell.

A friend who failed not in the darkest hour;
A valiant soul who at his Country's call Battled with Treason born of lust and power,
And triumphed over all.

One noble life the less for heaven to take;
One hero more passed from this land of ours;—

Lay fairest garlands on his bier, and make Death beautiful with flowers.

A Nation's heart shall be his funeral urn,
While time shall add new lustre to his fame;

And Freedom's fires with holier light shall burn,

Where'er is breathed his name.

Among the distinguished persons present, were Maj. Gen. McDowell and staff, Maj. Gen. Foster, U. S. A., Ex-Sec. Gideon Welles, Ex-Asst. Sec. Fox, Gens. N. P. Banks, Sargent and Drake, Brig. Gens. Roberts and Ingalls, Commodore Stedman, Gov. Stearns, Ex-Gov. Goodwin, Senators Patterson, Cragin and Wilson, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, Judge Clifford, Hon. M. Hooper, M. C., Wm. James Colles, Thomas G. Wells, etc., etc. Mr. Henry Taylor, the colored servant of the Admiral, who was with him throughout his last campaign, and to whom the deceased was much attached, was among the mourners."

Admiral Farragut's Statues, Picture, and Life.

A most complete and interesting biographical notice of Admiral Farragut, with his portrait on steel, will be found in Vol. II, of "Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography," New York, 1887, from which the following mention of the statues and picture of the Admiral, with references as to where further information of his life may be found, is taken.

"There is a colossal bronze statue of the Admiral in Farragut square, Washington, executed by Vinnie Ream," and "one of her life size in Madison square, New York, executed by Augustus St. Gauden." In the chancel of the Church of the Incarnation, New York, is a mural tablet containing a bas-relief likeness by Launt Thompson. William Page's original picture of 'Farragut's Entry into Mobile Bay' is now in the possession of the Emperor of Russia; a replica is still owned by Mr. Page's family." "The authorized life of the Admiral is that by his son, Loyall Farragut, which includes his journals and many of his letters (New York, 1879). See also James E. Montgomery's 'Cruise of the Franklin' (New York, 1869), and 'The Battle of Mobile Bay,' by Commodore Foxhall A. Parker (Boston, 1878)." "Henry Howard Brownell" who "was on board the flag-ship [in the battle of Mobile Bay] as an acting ensign," "described the battle in one of his finest poems, 'The Bay Fight.'"

RELATING TO

THE OTHER SCHOOLS.

The following information in relation to the other schools in Portsmouth, to which flags were presented, will be of interest.

The High School.

The High School, at the north-west corner of Daniel and Chapel streets, was built in 1855.

The Parochial School.

The Parochial School, at the north-east corner of Austin and Winter streets, was built in 1888.

The Haven School.

The Haven School, on South School street, near South street, was built in 1849, and named in honor of Horace Appleton Haven, of Portsmouth, who was born 2 October 1822, graduated at Harvard College, in 1842, and died 22 October, 1843, aged 21 years. He was buried in the Proprietors' Cemetery, southwest of and not far from the entrance (third row, third lot).

Horace Appleton Haven was the son of Nathaniel A. Haven, jr., born 14 January, 1790, died 3 June, 1826; grandson of Nathaniel A. Haven, senior, who was graduated at Harvard College in 1779, was several years a physician and afterwards a merchant of Portsmouth, and Member of Congress in 1809; and great grandson of Rev. Samuel Haven, D. D., fifty-four years pastor of the South Church in Portsmouth, who was born 4 August, 1727, in Framingham, Mass., graduated at Harvard College in 1749, ordained minister of the South Church, Portsmouth, 6 May 1752, received the degree of Doctor in Divinity from the University of Edinburgh in 1770, and afterward from Dartmouth College, and died 3 March, 1806, aged 79. Dr. Haven built, about 1760, and resided in the house on Pleasant street, at the head of Gates street, which, though twice remodeled, has always remained in the family and is now occupied by his descendants. (See Rambles, I-130, and 319-322 and Annals, pp. 336-8.)

A volume entitled "The Remains of Nathaniel Appleton Haven, [Jr.], with a Memoir of his Life, by George Ticknor," was printed in 1827, and an extended copy with notices of his wife, Mrs. Eliza W.

Haven, and their son, Horace Appleton Haven is in the Library of the Portsmouth Athenaeum. Horace Appleton Haven by will gave to the town of Portsmouth a sum of money for the purpose of distributing prizes to the best scholars in certain branches of study in the public schools; and from this fund the Haven medals are yet annually presented to the best scholars of the High School.

"Nearly on the same site [on which the Haven School now stands], was built, in 1709, the first public school-house in Portsmouth. Eight years earlier the widow Graffort had left to the town a lot of land on Daniel street, to be used for the site of a schoolhouse, but it had never been used for the purpose. The first record that we have of any action on the subject of schools is in 1697, when Thomas Phipps was appointed school-master by the town. He filled this office for several years, a small building on the site of the [old] brick schoolhouse on State street being hired for his use, from the Wentworth family.

In 1708 the Assembly ordered that a free Province school be established in Portsmouth, for 'righters, reeders, and Latiners.' In consequence of this decree, the selectmen ordered that 'Capt. John Pickering tack care and agre with Left. Pears for erecting a school house on ye south sd of ye mill dam,' &c— which was done.

In 1732 the schoolhouse was enlarged by the addition of a portion of the old meeting house, and the bell was transferred to it. It stood until 1846 [1849], when the present structure took its place." (Portsmouth Guide Book, 1884, pp. 17-18 —see also Rambles, I-81.)

The Franklin School.

The Franklin School, on Maplewood Avenue, was built in 1847, and named after Benjamin Franklin, statesman and philosopher, born in Boston, Mass., 17 January, 1706, died in Philadelphia, Pa., 17 April, 1790.

The Woodbury School.

The Woodbury School, at Gravelly Ridge, built in 1853, was named after Governor Levi Woodbury, of Portsmouth, born 2 December, 1789, in Francestown, N. H., who died 4 September, 1851, in Portsmouth. A granite shaft in the south-eastern part of Harmony Grove Cemetery, Portsmouth, marking his grave, bears his marble bust, and the following inscription:

Sacred to the Memory of Levi Woodbury.

Born at Francestown, N. H., Dec. 2, 1789, Died at Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 4, 1851. He held successively the offices of Judge of the Superior Court, GOVERNOR, and speaker of the House of Representatives, of his native State. He was elected and served one term as Senator in Congress, for the State of New Hampshire, when he was appointed by President Jackson, Secretary of the Navy of the United States. He was subsequently appointed by the same President Secretary of Treasury of the United States, which office he held till the end of President Van-Buren's administration, when he was again elected from New Hampshire Senator in Congress, in which capacity he served until his appointment to the bench as associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, which place he held at the time of his death.

The Spalding School.

The Spalding School, 15 Bartlett street, was built in 1870, and named in honor of Lyman D. Spalding, Esq., then and now of Portsmouth, who was especially prominent in the cause of education, served for several years on the board of school committee, and contributed largely to the efficiency and thoroughness of the school system of Portsmouth. (Spalding Memorial, Boston, 1872, p. 243).

Lyman Spalding, M. D., his father, son of Col. Dyer Spalding, of Cornish, N. H., was born June 5, 1775, in Cornish. He was graduated in medicine at Harvard College in 1797, and at Dartmouth in 1798, aiding at Dartmouth in the establishment of the Medical School, where he delivered the first course of lectures on chemistry. He began the practice of his profession at Portsmouth N. H., in 1799; became President of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Western New York in 1812; removed to New York City in 1813; originated the U. S. Pharmacopoeia in 1817, and with great ardor and professional zeal carried it to a successful issue. He was active in introducing into the United States the practice of vaccination as a preventive of small pox; was a skillful anatomist; contributed to the medical and philosophical journals of the day; was author of several professional pamphlets, notably of "A New Nomenclature of Chemistry, edited with Additions," Hanover, N. H., 1799; was a Trustee of the New York free schools; and member of many learned societies in Europe and America. He died October 30, 1821, at Portsmouth, N. H., and was buried in the south-western part of the North Cemetery, where his stone now stands (See Rambles II—244-7, and Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, Vol. V, New York, 1888).

AMERICA.

REV. S. F. SMITH.

My country! 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrim's pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.

My native country! thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love!
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills;
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze
And ring from all the trees,
Sweet Freedom's song:
Let mortal tongues awake,
Let all that breathe partake,
Let rocks their silence break—
The sound prolong.

My father's God! to Thee,
Author of liberty!
To Thee we sing.
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God! Our King!

A Lesson in Patriotism.

The formal presentation to the city by Storer Post, G. A. R., at Music Hall last evening, of the portraits of Gen. William Whipple and Admiral David G. Farragut, was an impressive occasion, and an instructive lesson in patriotism, which while interesting to all present, of whatever age, can hardly fail to stimulate love of country and elevate the ideal standard of honor in the minds of young people who attended the ceremonies. The recital, more than a century after General Whipple's death, of his eminent services as statesman, soldier and jurist during the stormy years of the nation's infancy; the outline history of what Admiral Farragut, the greatest naval genius of modern times, achieved for the nation during the gloomy period of the war of secession; these stories of departed heroes and patriots related by men themselves having record of most honorable service, and listened to reverently by a throng of others of similar record, whose deeds are part of the nation's history, and by many who have been worthily honored by their fellow citizens in civil position, must tend to the elevation of youthful ambition, and the healthy growth of patriotic sentiment in the young.

The effect may not be immediately apparent, but it will be permanent, and increase with years as memory recalls the event to the maturer mind. One such incident as the presentation ceremony of last evening may do much to point out the path of honor and true glory to youth whose ambitious ideas have been perverted by the trashy literature of the day. Too many such lessons cannot be given.

Their Portraits Presented to the City by Storer Post.

Interesting Exercises in Music Hall.

Large Audience Listens to Eloquent Addresses by Com- rades Foster and Smith.

"O, true descendant of a patriot line, Vouchsafe this picture of thyself to see."

Within the walls of Music hall was gathered a patriotic host on the evening of November 20th, 1891. It was to witness the presentation by New Hampshire's pioneer Grand Army Post, Storer, No. One, of Portsmouth, of the portraits of General William Whipple and Admiral David Glasgow Farragut to the city, for the respective new school buildings bearing the honored names of these distinguished heroes of different eras.

It was treading the path to noble ends when these veterans of the late war conceived this idea, and the culmination of their desires in the exercises of Friday evening marked another epoch, so to speak, in the history of good deeds for which this organization has always been noted, deeds such as have written tender poems on many hearts and whose acts will remain as enduring as memory and as substantial as our Granite hills.

The public, too has been grateful to acknowledge the work of Storer Post and in this last great assemblage at Music hall with its manifest interest was found that renewal of fraternity and appreciation which must have made glad the hearts of the old veterans.

Hon. and Alderman Charles P. Berry, ably filled the position of chairman of the meeting, and to his keen tact and foresight was due the fact that there was a happy avoidance of any tedious delays in the general exercises. Among those seated with him on the stage were the city government, board of instruction, officers of Storer Post, and ex-mayors of Portsmouth. Two sons of the revolution, Moses Yeaton and Samuel S. Green, of Portsmouth, were also among the invited guests.

Occupying commanding positions upon the stage and resting upon easels were the two magnificent portraits in oil of the distinguished General William Whipple and the intrepid Admiral David Glasgow Farragut, both the centre of attraction and admiration of the great multitude present.

The front rows of seats in the parquet were occupied by children of the Whipple and Farragut schools, while immediately in their rear was Storer Post, the remainder of the hall being completely filled with an interested audience.

The meeting was opened by the following

Address from Chairman Berry.

Members of Storer Post and the City Government of Portsmouth,

Ladies and Gentlemen: -Having consented some time since to act in the capacity of chairman of a meeting called by a joint committee of Storer Post and the City Government, to take action on the matter for which we are tonight assembled, I find devolving upon me and at this auspicious time the duty to act in the same capacity in conjunction with the commander of Storer Post.

While I am quite sure that there are many others who could fill the duties of the office much better than myself, yet with your kind indulgence I will endeavor to serve you to the best of my ability.

I presume you are all aware for what purpose we have met, but for fear there may be some one present who does not fully understand, I will simply state that Storer Post, at great expense and much sacrifice on their part, have had painted two beautiful portraits, one of Admiral Farragut and one of Gen. Whipple, which they are about to present to the city, that they may adorn the walls of the schools bearing their respective names.

And now without further intruding upon your time knowing that the exercises will be much more interesting to you than any remarks I can offer, I will call upon the children to open the same with music.

The response was a spirited rendering of "America" by the scholars present representing the two schools, Wendell P. Brown of the Haven school, directing, and Harry Osgood, one of the Sons of Veterans, presiding at the piano.

At the conclusion of the song Chairman Berry arose and introduced Commander Joseph R. Curtis of Storer Post, G. A. R., who in behalf of that organization spoke as follows:

Introductory of Commander Curtis.

Ladies and Gentlemen: The occasion which calls us together tonight is one that has long been looked forward to with peculiar pleasure and interest by the comrades of Storer Post No. 1, Dep't. of New Hampshire, Grand Army of the Republic. I will not stop at this stage of the meeting to state the object of our assembling.

The purposes and hopes which have animated the breasts of my comrades in their work of procuring these magnificent and lifelike portraits of William Whipple and David Glasgow Farragut for presentation to the city of Portsmouth for the splendid public school buildings bearing their names, will, I trust, be clearly set forth in the exercises that are to follow.

Before proceeding with the pleasurable duty assigned me by my comrades, I will call upon Comrade Joseph Foster, to whose enthusiasm, perseverance and unflagging zeal much of the success which culminates so happily tonight is due, to address you on the life and career of that distinguished statesman, patriot and soldier, General William Whipple, Portsmouth's Signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I have the pleasure of introducing to you Comrade Joseph Foster, Paymaster U. S. Navy.

Address of Comrade Joseph Foster.

Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen of the City Government of Portsmouth, Friends and Comrades:

"When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed.

But, when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies, and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present king of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having, in direct object, the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states.

* * * * *

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in general congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And, for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor."

To these eloquent words of Thomas Jefferson, the Magna Charta of American freedom, and the seed, which planted in the hearts of lovers of liberty throughout the world, has brought so many blessings to all mankind, was signed the name of a citizen of Portsmouth, who, carrying out his own patriotic instincts and the earnest desire of our grandfathers, with Josiah Bartlett, of Kingston, and Matthew Thornton, of Londonderry, his fellow-delegates from New Hampshire, united with fifty-three delegates from the other colonies in this the grandest act of all history, and thus forever immortalized his name on the roll of those supporters and protectors of human rights and universal liberty whom we proudly hail as the greatest benefactors of mankind.

The local Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, which is in its very essence an historical society, realizing a few months since that the name of this, our most illustrious citizen, had almost passed from memory among us, appointed a committee to wait upon the City Government and ask that the name of our Portsmouth signer of the Declaration of Independence might be given to the new school house on State street, and in acknowledgment of their courtesy in accepting the suggestion and adopting this name, Storer Post has caused this beautiful oil portrait of William Whipple to be painted for presentation to the city to be placed in the room occupied by the senior class at Whipple school.

History is the most interesting of studies, for truth is always stranger and more impressive than fiction, but to the mind of childhood it must be most difficult to place events in their proper positions on the ladder of time, and Gettysburg, Bunker Hill, Waterloo and Marathon, with a thousand other events in the world's history, must often be confusedly intermingled.

But the history of our own country should be foremost in every thought and the love of Union and Liberty should be planted deep in the heart of childhood, and to this end Storer Post places this portrait in the Whipple school, a portrait presented by Portsmouth men who fought at Antietam, suffered at Andersonville and triumphed at Gettysburg,—battled with Farragut and Porter, and conquered with Winslow on our own "Kearsarge"—that an object lesson should thus be given to the children of Portsmouth, which may, year after year, for many a day to come, be interpreted to them by their teachers, as the connecting link with many events of local and national history.

For this portrait will point the way to the birthplace of William Whipple, in Kittery, on the other bank of our noble Piscataqua, to his residence on Market street, where, south of the house, yet stands the magnificent horse-chestnut tree planted by him, and to the grave in the North cemetery where his ashes rest,—and will thus teach, through him, in the most realistic way, the story of the American Revolution.

It is my privilege tonight to first interpret its lesson and to tell the story of the Declaration of Independence, and of the life of William Whipple; and if I seem to choose too frequently the phrases of another who made a study of the lives of the Signers,* you will gain in exactness of statement and in eloquence of words what you may lose in originality, and will therefore, I am quite sure, be very willing to pardon my choice in this matter.

"With the commencement of the year 1776, the affairs of the colonies, and certainly the views of their political leaders, began to assume a new aspect, one of more energy, and with motives and objects more decided and apparent. Eighteen months had passed away since the colonists had learned by the intrenchments at Boston, that a resort to arms was an event, not beyond the contemplation of the British ministry.

Nearly a year had elapsed, since the fields of Concord and Lexington had been stained with hostile blood; during this interval, armies had been raised, vessels of war had been equipped, fortifications had been erected, gallant exploits had been performed, and eventful battles had been lost and won; yet still were the provinces bound to their British brethren, by the ties of a similar allegiance; still did they look upon themselves as members of the same empire, subjects of the same sovereign, and partners in the same constitution and laws.

Every expedient, however, short of unconditional separation, had now been tried by congress,—but in vain. It appeared worse than useless, longer to pursue measures of open hostility, and yet to hold out the promises of reconciliation. The time had arrived when a more decided stand must be taken,—the circumstances of the nation demanded it, the success of the struggle depended on it. The best and wisest men had become convinced, that no accommodation could take place, and that a course which was not marked by decision, would create dissatisfaction among the resolute, while it would render more uncertain the feeble and the wavering.

During the spring of 1776, therefore, the question of independence became one of very general interest and reflection among all classes of the nation. It was taken into consideration by some of the colonial legislatures, and in Virginia a resolution was adopted in favor of its immediate declaration.

Under these circumstances, the subject was brought directly before congress, on Friday, the seventh of June, 1776," when Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, "moved 'that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown; and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved.' " "It was discussed very fully on the following Saturday and Monday," and "on [Monday] the tenth of June it was resolved, 'that the consideration of the resolution respecting independence be postponed till the first Monday in July next; and in the meanwhile, that no time be lost, in case the congress agree thereto, that a committee be appointed to prepare a declaration to the effect of the said resolution.' "

This committee consisted of Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, John Adams of Massachusetts, Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania, Roger Sherman of Connecticut, and Robert R. Livingston of New York; Mr. Lee, the original mover of the resolution, being called home by "the dangerous illness of some members of his family;" "and to Mr. Jefferson, the chairman of the committee, was ultimately assigned the important duty of preparing the draught of the document, for the formation of which they had been appointed.

The task thus devolved upon Mr. Jefferson, was of no ordinary magnitude; and required the exercise of no common judgment and foresight. To frame such a document, was the effort of no common mind. That of Mr. Jefferson proved fully equal to the task. His labors received the immediate approbation and sanction of the committee; and their opinion has been confirmed by the testimony of succeeding years, and of every nation where it has been known.

On the twenty-eighth of June, the Declaration of Independence was presented to congress, and read. On the first, second, and third of July, it was taken into full consideration; and on the fourth, it was agreed to after several alterations, and considerable omissions had been made in the draught, as it was first framed by the committee."

"When the question of independence was put, in a committee of the whole, on the first of July, . . . and the president resumed the chair, the chairman of the committee of the whole made his report, which was not acted upon until Thursday, July 4. Every state, excepting Pennsylvania and Delaware, had voted in favor of the measure, but it was a matter of great importance to procure an unanimous voice." The return of one of the Delaware members, who was in favor of the Declaration, secured the voice of that state on the fourth of July, and "two of the members of the Pennsylvania delegation, adverse to the measure, being absent, that state was also united in the vote, by a majority of one. By these means, the Declaration of Independence became the unanimous act of the thirteen states."

"Speaking of the Declaration of Independence," Thomas Jefferson said, "that 'John Adams was the pillar of its support on the floor of congress; its ablest advocate and defender against the multifarious assaults it encountered.' "

"The transport of his [Mr. Adams'] feelings, the exuberance of his joy, on . . . [the adoption of the Declaration,] may be seen most vividly portrayed in the letter which he wrote to Mrs. Adams on the succeeding day—a letter that is memorable, and now embalmed in American history, simply because it is so true and inartificial an effusion of ardent, enlightened, and disinterested patriotism.

"Yesterday," he says, "the greatest question was decided, that was ever debated in America; and greater, perhaps, never was or will be decided among men. A resolution was passed, without one dissenting colony, 'that these United States are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states'. The day is passed. The fourth of July, 1776, will be a memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe it will be celebrated, by succeeding generations, as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to Almighty God. It ought to be solemnized with pomp, shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of the continent to the other, from this time forward for ever. You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil, and blood, and treasure, that it will cost to maintain this declaration, and support and defend these states; yet through all the gloom, I can see the rays of light and glory. I can see that the end is worth more than all the means; and that posterity will triumph, although you and I may rue, which I hope we shall not."

On the 15th day of June, 1776, the New Hampshire Legislature had instructed the delegates in Congress from New Hampshire, to join with the other colonies in declaring the thirteen United Colonies a free and independent state.

And "on that memorable day, [when] the decisive vote was taken, which resulted in the unanimous declaration of all the states in favor of independence, [New Hampshire spoke first, for] in taking the question the northernmost colony was first called on, and Dr. [Josiah] Bartlett, [of New Hampshire, born 1729, died 1795] had the accidental, but interesting duty of first giving his voice in favor of the resolution."

And William Whipple of Portsmouth, the only other delegate from New Hampshire, then serving in congress, was doubtless the second to give his vote in favor of Independence.

For, "on the twenty-third of January, 1776, a second election for delegates [from New Hampshire] to the continental Congress [had] occurred" and Josiah Bartlett of Kingston, and "his most attached personal friends, William Whipple and John Langdon," of Portsmouth, were chosen. The two former "long served" with each other "in Congress, and their signatures are found together on the charter of Independence. Mr. Langdon, owing to an appointment to another office lost the opportunity of recording his patriotic sentiments in the same conspicuous manner."

"On the twelfth of September, 1776," Matthew Thornton, of Londonderry, born 1714, died 1803 "was appointed, by the house of representatives, a delegate to represent the state of New Hampshire in Congress, during the term of one year. He did not take his seat in that illustrious body until the fourth of November following, being four months after the passage of the Declaration of Independence; but he immediately acceded to it, and was permitted to place his signature on the engrossed copy of the instrument, among those of the fifty-six worthies, who have immortalized their names by that memorable and magnanimous act."

"The Declaration of Independence . . . was accompanied in its first publication by the signature of Mr Hancock alone," and "the manuscript public journal has no names annexed to the Declaration of Independence, nor has the secret journal; but it appears by the latter, that on the nineteenth day of July, 1776, the Congress directed that it should be engrossed on parchment, and signed by every member, and that it was so produced on the second of August, and signed. This is interlined in the secret journal, in the hand of Charles Thomson, the secretary."

"The printed journals of Congress, indeed, make it appear, that the Declaration of Independence was adopted and signed on the fourth of July, by the gentlemen whose names are subscribed to it under the head of that date. But this impression is incorrect; because, in fact not one signature was affixed to the Declaration until the second of August. The idea of signing does not appear to have occurred immediately; for not until the nineteenth of July . . . did the resolution pass, directing the Declaration to be engrossed on parchment. This was accordingly done; and on the second of August following, when the engrossed copy was prepared, and not before, the Declaration was signed by the members, who on that day were present in congress. . . . Those members who were absent on the second of August, subscribed the Declaration as soon after as opportunity offered.

The engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence was placed on the desk of the secretary of congress, on the second of August, to receive the signatures of the members, and Mr. Hancock, president of congress, during a conversation with Mr [Charles] Carroll [of Maryland, who had only taken his seat on the eighteenth of the previous month], asked him if he would sign it. 'Most willingly', was the reply, and taking a pen, he at once put his name to the instrument. 'There goes a few millions,' said one of those who stood by; and all present at the time agreed, that in point of fortune, few risked more than Charles Carroll of Carrollton."

The case of Mr. Carroll was not singular, for besides Dr. Thornton of New Hampshire, already mentioned, five of the Pennsylvania delegates who signed the Declaration were not present in congress on the fourth of July, 1776, "not having been chosen delegates by the legislature of Pennsylvania until the twentieth day of that month," "to succeed those members of the Pennsylvania delegation, who had refused their assent to the Declaration of Independence, and abandoned their seats in congress."

William Ellery, one of the Signers from Rhode Island, in after years, "often spoke of the signing of the Declaration; and he spoke of it as an event which many regarded with awe, perhaps with uncertainty, but none with fear. 'I was de-terminated,' he used to say, 'to see how they all looked, as they signed what might be their death warrant. I placed myself beside the secretary, Charles Thomson, and eyed each closely as he affixed his name to the document. Undaunted resolution was displayed in every countenance.'

"When the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence approached, two only of the committee that prepared that document, and of the Congress that voted its adoption and promulgation, and one more besides of those who inscribed their names upon it, yet survived."

"Like the books of the Sybil, the living signers of the Declaration of Independence increased in value as they diminished in number.' On the third of July, 1826, three only remained,—John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Charles Carroll of Carrollton. On the fourth of July, 1826, the fiftieth anniversary of the day on which they pledged their all to their country, when the ten millions who were indebted to them for liberty, were celebrating the year of jubilee; when the names of the three signers were on every lip, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died, leaving Charles Carroll of Carrollton the last link between the past and that "generation."

"That such an anniversary should be the day appointed for the departure of the two co-laborers" was a startling coincidence, and "the universal burst of feeling in all parts of this country, showed that the nation recognized something in the dispensation beyond the ordinary laws of human existence."

"They departed cheered by the benedictions of their country, to whom they left the inheritance of their fame, and the memory of their bright example."

"On the fourteenth of November, 1832, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last of the signers, full of years and full of honors, closed his earthly career [aged 95 years]. A nation's tears were shed upon his grave; a nation's gratitude hallows his memory."

"They pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor; and not one was false to the pledge—not one! They suffered much; some died from hardships encountered, some were imprisoned, many were impoverished, and all were tempted by promises, and menaced by the wrath of what seemed, for a time, an earthly omnipotence: but all stood firm. There was doubt previous to the declaration—none after. Every name shone brighter as the darkness thickened. Each patriot was a sun that stood fast . . . until the battle of independence had been fought and won."

"They are no more, they are dead. But how little is there of the great and good which can die! To their country they yet live, and live for ever. They live in all that perpetuates the remembrance of men on earth: in the recorded proofs of their own great actions, in the offspring of their intellect, in the deep engraved lines of public gratitude, and in the respect and homage of mankind. They live in their example; and they live, emphatically, and will live, in the influence which their lives and efforts, their principles and opinions, now exercise, and will continue to exercise, on the affairs of men, not only in their own country, but throughout the civilized world."

The Declaration of Independence was publicly proclaimed in Portsmouth, on the 18th of July, 1776, from the steps, facing on King street, of the Old State House, built in 1758 upon a ledge of rocks occupying the centre of our present Market square, which stood there until removed in 1837; and when the reading was finished, Thomas Mannig, a devoted patriot of Portsmouth, some of whose descendants now attend the Whipple school, threw his hat in the air, shouting "Huzza for Congress street," which then and there became its name; a name which in memory of the Congress of 1776 it will, I trust, forever bear. This story of the naming of Congress street is perhaps familiar to every Portsmouth citizen, and doubtless each also knows the locality of Liberty bridge, and I trust its story, too. But while all may know these incidents of our local history, and that the first overt act of the Revolution was the capture on the night of the 13th of December, 1774, at Fort William and Mary, now Fort Constitution, by the patriots of Portsmouth and vicinity, of the powder, which a little later was so bravely expended at Bunker Hill, yet few realize the fact that this William Whipple,—illustrious both in state and field—besides signing the Declaration of Independence, took a prominent part in the capture of Burgoyne, a victory which delivered the American cause from the greatest peril and brought joy without measure to the people, and that in behalf of General Gates he signed the articles of capitulation of the British troops; and afterward was one of the officers under whose charge they were conducted to their place of encampment on Winter hill, near Boston.

Let me tell his story as briefly as I may.

William Whipple was the son of Capt. William Whipple, senior, of Kittery, Me., a native of Ipswich, Mass., (whither his great grandfather, Elder John Whipple, came from Essex, England, in or before 1639) who died the 7th of August, 1751, aged 56 years. William Whipple, the son, was born the 14th of January, 1730, in the "Whipple garrison house" on Whipple's cove, Kittery, his father's house, and previously the home of his maternal grandfather and great grandfather, Robert Cutt, first and second, where Harrison J. Philbrick now resides.

He was educated in the public schools of Kittery, and early went to sea, as did so many Kittery and Portsmouth boys from that time up to the breaking out of the Rebellion, for a "Life on the Ocean Wave" was for many years the most promising one here open to an energetic and ambitious boy. He obtained the command of a vessel before he was twenty-one years of age, and engaged in the European, West India and African trade, in one voyage, at least, bringing slaves, it is said, to this country from Africa, for at that time, more than one hundred and thirty years ago, and for thirty or forty years afterwards, slaves were held in New Hampshire; and, indeed, the constitution of the United States authorized their importation from Africa into this country until the year 1808, fifty years later.

In 1759, at the age of 29, he abandoned the sea entirely, and entered into business in Portsmouth with his brother, under the firm name of William and Joseph Whipple, which connection lasted till about two years previous to the Revolution.

"At an early period of the contest, he took a decided part in favor of the colonies, in their opposition to the claims of Great Britain; and his townsmen, placing the highest confidence in his patriotism and integrity, frequently elected him to offices which required great firmness and moderation. In January, 1775, he was chosen one of the representatives of the town of Portsmouth to the provincial congress, held at Exeter for the purpose of choosing delegates to the general congress, which was to meet in Philadelphia on the tenth of May following.

When the disputes between the two countries were approaching to a crisis, the provincial committee of safety of New Hampshire recommended that a provincial congress should be formed, for the purpose of directing and managing the public affairs of the state during the term of six months. The delegates from the town of Portsmouth were five in number, among whom was Captain Whipple. He accordingly attended the meeting of the congress, which convened at Exeter in the beginning of May, 1775, and was elected by that body one of the provincial committee of safety, who were to regulate the affairs of government during the war. In the early part of the same year, he was also chosen one of the committee of safety for the town of Portsmouth.

At the close of the year 1775, the people of New Hampshire assumed a form of government, consisting of a house of representatives and a council of twelve, the president of which was the chief executive officer. Mr. Whipple was chosen one of the council, on the sixth of January, 1776, and on the twenty third of the same month, a delegate to the general congress: he took his seat on the 29th of February following. He continued to be re-elected to that distinguished situation in the years 1777, 1778, and 1779, and applied himself with diligence and ability to the discharge of its duties, when the military services which he rendered during that period permitted him to be an acting member of the New Hampshire delegation. In the middle of September, 1779, he finally retired from congress, after having attended, without the least intermission, at his post of duty, from the fifth of the preceding month of November.

Whilst in congress, he was considered a very useful and active member, and discharged the duties of his office in a manner alike honorable to himself and satisfactory to his constituents. In the current and committed business of the house, he displayed equal perseverance, ability, and application. His early pursuits rendered him particularly useful as a member of the committees of marine and of commerce; and, as one of the superintendents of the commissary's and quarter-master's departments, he labored, with much assiduity, to correct the abuses which had prevailed, and to place those establishments upon such a footing as might best conduce to the public service. When the depreciation of the continental currency became excessive, he strongly opposed new emissions of paper, as tending to the utter destruction of public confidence.

Soon after Mr. Whipple's return to New Hampshire [in 1777], he was called on to exercise his patriotism in scenes and modes yet untried. He had buffeted the waves as a seaman; he had pursued the peaceful occupations of a merchant; and he had distinguished himself as a legislator and a statesman; but he was now called on to undergo the severer personal duties, and to gather the more conspicuous laurels of a soldier. The overwhelming force of Burgoyne having compelled the American troops to evacuate their strong post at Ticonderoga, universal alarm prevailed in the north. The committee of the 'New Hampshire Grants,' which had now formed themselves into a separate state, wrote in the most pressing terms to the committee of safety at Exeter, for assistance. The assembly of New Hampshire was immediately convened, and adopted the most effectual and decisive measures for the defence of the country. They formed the whole militia of the state into two brigades, giving the command of the first to William Whipple, and of the second to General Stark. General Stark was immediately ordered to march, 'to stop the progress of the enemy on our western frontiers', with one-fourth of his brigade, and one-fourth of three regiments belonging to the brigade of General Whipple.

Burgoyne, presuming that no more effectual opposition would be made, flattered himself that he might advance without much annoyance. To the accomplishments and experience of his officers, was added a formidable train of artillery, with all the apparatus, stores, and equipments, which the nature of the service required. His army was principally composed of veteran corps of the best troops of Britain and Germany, and American loyalists furnished it with spies, scouts, and rangers: a numerous body of savages, in their own dress and with their own weapons, and characteristic ferocity, increased the terrors of its approach.

Flushed by a confidence in his superior force, and deceived in his opinion of the number of friendly loyalists, the British general despatched Lieutenant-Colonel Baum from Fort Edward, with about fifteen hundred of his German troops, and a body of Indians, to overrun the 'Grants' as far as the Connecticut river, for the purpose of collecting horses to mount the dragoons, and cattle, both for labor and provisions. He was encountered at Bennington by the intrepid Stark, who carried the works which he had constructed, by assault, and killed or captured the greater part of his detachment; a few only escaped into the woods, and saved themselves by flight.

This victory gave a severe check to the hopes of the enemy, and revived the spirits of the people after a long depression. The courage of the militia increased with their reputation, and they found that neither British nor German regulars were invincible. Burgoyne was weakened and disheartened by the event, and beginning to perceive the danger of his situation, he now considered the men of New Hampshire and the Green Mountains, whom he had viewed with contempt, as dangerous enemies.

The northern army was now reinforced by the militia of all the neighboring states. Brigadier General Whipple marched with a great part of his brigade; and volunteers from all parts of New Hampshire hastened in great numbers to join the standard of General Gates. In the desperate battles of Stillwater and of Saratoga, the troops of New Hampshire gained a large share of the honor due to the American army. The consequence of these engagements was the surrender of General Burgoyne. When the British army capitulated, he was appointed, with Colonel Wilkinson, as the representative of General Gates, to meet two officers from General Burgoyne, for the purpose of propounding, discussing, and settling several subordinate articles and regulations springing from the preliminary proposals of the British general, and which required explanation and precision before the definitive treaty could be properly executed. By concert with Major Kingston, a tent was pitched between the advanced guards of the two armies, where they met Lieutenant-Colonel Sutherland, and Captain Craig of the forty-seventh regiment, on the afternoon of the sixteenth of October, 1777. Having produced and exchanged credentials, they proceeded to discuss the objects of their appointment, and in the evening signed the articles of capitulation. After the attainment of this grand object, General Whipple was selected as one of the officers, under whose command the British troops were conducted to their destined encampment on Winter hill, near Boston.

General Whipple was attended on this expedition by a valuable negro servant named Prince, whom he had imported from Africa many years before. On his way to the army, he told his servant that if they should be called into action, he expected that he would behave like a man of courage, and fight bravely for his country. Prince replied, 'Sir, I have no inducement to fight; but if I had my liberty, I would endeavor to defend it to the last drop of my blood.' The General manumitted him on the spot.

Nor was the expedition against Burgoyne the only military affair that Mr. Whipple was engaged in during his absence from congress.

It may be recollected that in the latter part of the summer [of 1778], when Count d'Estaing had abandoned his project of attacking the British fleet at New York, a plan was formed for his co-operation with General Sullivan in retaking Rhode Island from the British. To aid in this measure the militia of the adjoining states were called out, and the detachment of New Hampshire was placed under the command of General Whipple. The scheme, owing to some accident, or the neglect of a proper understanding, proved unsuccessful, and General Sullivan was only able to save his army by a judicious retreat.

During this brief campaign, it is recorded, that one morning [the 29th of August, 1778], whilst a number of officers were at breakfast at the general's quarters, at the position on the north end of the island [on which Newport is situated], the British advanced to an eminence about three quarters of a mile distant; perceiving horses and a guard before the door, they discharged a field piece, which killed one of the horses, and the ball, penetrating the side of the house, passed under the table where the officers were sitting, and shattered the leg of the brigade major of General Whipple's [brigade] in such a manner that amputation was necessary." This officer was Major John Samuel Sherburne, of Portsmouth, nephew of General Whipple's wife, and brother of Governor Langdon's, who was subsequently a member of Congress (1793-1796), and judge of the United States Court for the district of New Hampshire. He was irreverently called "Cork-leg Sherburne" by the boys of long ago, and afterwards resided in the house on Court street next west of the Court house.

"The design for which the militia were called out having thus proved abortive, many of them were discharged, and General Whipple with those under his command returned to New Hampshire. According to the pay-roll for the general and staff of his division of volunteers, it appears that he took the command on the 26th of July, and returned on the 5th of September, 1778."

"The high consideration in which his services were held by congress did not cease to accompany Mr. Whipple in his retirement. In the beginning of the year 1780 he was appointed a commissioner of the board of admiralty, which office he declined accepting, owing to the situation of his private affairs."

"In the [same] year, 1780, immediately after his retirement from Congress, he was elected a member of the legislature, to which office he was repeatedly chosen [1780 to 1784] and continued to enjoy the confidence and approbation of his fellow-citizens."

"In May, 1782, the superintendent of finance, confiding in 'his inclination and abilities to promote the interests of the United States,' appointed Mr. Whipple receiver for the state of New Hampshire, a commission at once arduous and unpopular. It was invariably the rule of Mr. [Robert] Morris to grant this appointment only to men of tried integrity and invincible patriotism. The duty of the office was not only to receive and transmit the sums collected in the state, but to expedite that collection by all proper means, and incessantly to urge the local authorities to comply with the requisitions of congress." This position he retained, at Mr. Morris' solicitation, and much against his own wishes, until August, 1784.

In 1782 he was president of a court, organized by Congress, which met at Trenton, New Jersey, to determine the dispute, "between the states of Pennsylvania and Connecticut, relative to certain lands at Wyoming," which resulted in the unanimous decision of the court that Connecticut had "no right to the lands in controversy."

General Whipple resigned his military appointment June 20th, 1782, and his failing health prevented him, after this time, "from engaging in the more active scenes of life."

"On the [same day, the] twentieth of June, 1782, he was appointed a judge of the superior court of judicature" of New Hampshire, and "on the twenty-fifth of December, 1784, . . . a justice of the peace and quorum throughout the state."

General Whipple died in Portsmouth, "on the twenty-eighth day of November, 1785, in the fifty-fifth year of his age," and "his body was deposited in the North burying ground in Portsmouth."

William Whipple married his cousin, Catharine Moffatt, of Portsmouth, who died in 1823, at the very advanced age of 100 years. He left no descendants. It is said he had seven children, all of whom died in infancy, but his son "William Whipple, died April 29th, 1773, aged 1 year," whose stone stands near his own in the North cemetery, is the only one of whose birth or death we have positive evidence.

How can I, in the time allotted to me, tell you of the many things in which the men and women of Whipple's blood have taken part from the first settlement of the Colonies until now!

It is impossible to do the subject justice; and for information concerning his ancestors and family, I must refer you to the Appendix to "The Presentation of Flags to the Schools of Portsmouth, N. H., October 9th, 1890, by Storer Post," where several letters written by General Whipple during the Revolution, and many details of his life will also be found. [See Addenda]

But now, I must at least pay my tribute, and acknowledge the indebtedness of the Post for his sympathy and generous aid in procuring this portrait to that eminent poet, essayist and statesman, James Russell Lowell, great grandson of General Whipple's sister, Mary (Whipple) Traill, whose recent death, 12th August, 1891, in Cambridge, Mass., the whole English speaking world laments; for he with all his father's family always had a strong interest in Portsmouth, and in the Portsmouth stock from which they sprung.

Scarcely a year has gone by since the day when Storer Post presented the Flags to the Schools of Portsmouth, and yet the comrades who spoke for the Post at both the Whipple and Farragut schools have passed to a better world. Sincerely mourning their deaths, we know that the people of Portsmouth grieve with us for the good citizens and gallant men who have gone,—for the soldier (George E. Hodgdon, Lieut. 10th N. H. Infantry, and Capt U. S. C. T.)—brave in war, and in peace the earnest student of the history of our city, our mayor, friend, and the protector of the poor and weak, whose nobility of heart won for him the proud title of “counsel for the defence,”—for the sailor (Captain Arthur R. Yates, U. S. Navy)—brave in war, without peer in peace, our Naval Bayard, beloved by all who knew him.

And now, before closing, may I, in behalf of my comrades of the Grand Army and of this meeting, express the hope that before long a marble tablet may be placed on the front of Whipple school to tell every passer by its name and that Portsmouth here honors her Signer of the Declaration of Independence. Let us trust, also, that before many months a substantial wall, now much needed, may be erected between the land of the Boston and Maine railroad and the south western part of the old North cemetery, where rests not only the ashes of William Whipple, but of many others whose names and fame are very dear to the people of Portsmouth.

“Mr. Whipple was possessed of a strong mind, and quick discernment: he was easy in his manners, courteous in his deportment, correct in his habits, and constant in his friendships. He enjoyed through life a great share of the public confidence, and although his early education was limited, his natural good sense, and accurate observations, enabled him to discharge the duties of the several offices with which he was intrusted, with credit to himself and benefit to the public. In the various scenes of life in which he engaged, he constantly manifested an honest and persevering spirit of emulation, which conducted him with rapid strides to distinction. As a sailor, he speedily attained the highest rank in the profession; as a merchant, he was circumspect and industrious; as a congressman, he was firm and fearless; as a legislator, he was honest and able; as a commander, he was cool and courageous; as a judge, he was dignified and impartial; and as a member of many subordinate public offices, he was alert and persevering. Few men rose more rapidly and worthily in the scale of society, or bore their new honors with more modesty and propriety.”

One hundred and fifteen years have passed since William Whipple pledged his life, his fortune, and his sacred honor, in behalf of our National liberty and freedom; but while love of country and the flag shall be cherished among us, let us trust that the teachers and pupils of the Whipple school will keep his memory green, and on each recurring Memorial Day and Fourth of July, will garland his grave with flowers, in perpetual memory of the fact that by his hand the people of Portsmouth signed, and through him claim their share, in the glory of the Declaration of Independence.

At the conclusion of this address Commander Curtis then spoke as follows:

I now call upon Comrade Joseph A. Smith, a gallant representative of the U. S. Navy, who generously gave the proceeds of his brilliant lecture delivered in this hall one year ago, on the memorable fight between the U. S. S. Kearsarge and the Confederate cruiser Alabama, towards the expense of procuring these portraits, to address you on the life and career of that greatest naval hero of modern times, David Glasgow Farragut.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I have the pleasure of introducing to you Comrade Joseph A. Smith, Pay Inspector, U. S. Navy.

Address of Comrade Joseph A. Smith.

MR CHAIRMAN:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I know not by what chance it has happened that I have been requested to speak at this presentation of a portrait of Admiral Farragut to the City of Portsmouth, for one of her public schools, unless the explanation may be found in the fact that I contributed my humble share to the efforts of others in securing the painting.

In a letter to his son, a few days after the battle to which he refers, Farragut wrote: “The victory of the Kearsarge over the Alabama raised me up. I would sooner have fought that fight than any ever fought on the ocean

The triumph of the Kearsarge was grand I go for Winslow's promotion.”

My part in the procurement of the portrait was the delivery of a public address on that battle. I was not then aware of Farragut's sentiments on that subject and it is therefore doubly gratilying to know that his enthusiastic words made that subject peculiarly appropriate for that occasion.

But no words of mine can be made equally appropriate for this occasion; nor can they compensate for the silence of one who as friend, shipmate and aid to our great admiral, in the height of his fame, was fittingly selected to sound our hero's virtues as a man and his transcendent genius as a naval commander.

Alas! the lips of our genial comrade are sealed by death.

At the flag presentation to our public schools Comrade Yates awoke our slumbering patriotism by the fervor of a speech in which he pointed out the duty of the citizen to the state.

Could he speak to us his felicitous phrases would glow with his love and admiration for his former commander, Farragut.

For many reasons the loss of Captain Arthur Reid Yates touches the heart of every comrade and citizen who knew him, with the gloom of mourning.

In his domestic relations, as a genial companion, an exemplary and patriotic citizen, as a faithful friend and as an efficient officer, our comrade may have patterned after our great Admiral. No better exemplar can be found among the great naval heroes of any age.

It is because of Admiral Farragut's virtues as a man and his merits as an officer that Storer Post tenders his portrait as an artistic symbol of those virtues and merits which should be emulated by the pupils of the public schools.

Farragut's life was crowded with stirring episodes. Those of his early naval life conduced to the formation of a sterling, manly character. Born in 1801, he entered the navy as midshipman when a lad only nine years of age, and in 1811 he sailed on the Essex, 32 guns, with Sailing Master David Porter commanding.

Shortly afterward war was declared by the United States against Great Britain, and the Essex began her hostile operations by capturing a British brig with 150 troops on board; then, after a contest of only eight minutes, she captured the English sloop of war Alert, 20 guns; next she captured the British government packet Nocton with $55,000. specie; then amid terrific storms and hysterical prayers, she weathered Cape Horn; on the Pacific she captured a Peruvian guarda costa, of 15 guns, that was an ally of the British Navy; following that came the recapture of a prize of the guarda costa, named the Barclay; after that the Essex captured a British whaler, Montezuma, with 1400 barrels of sperm oil, and the British whalers Georgiana and Policy; the Essex equipped the Georgiana as a new cruiser and she in turn captured three other prizes from the enemy; finally the Essex was captured by the British vessels, Phoebe, a frigate with 49 guns of different calibres and 320 men, and the Cherub, a sloop of war with 28 guns of different calibres and 180 men, after a sanguinary battle of two and one half hours.

The prize Barclay alluded to was sent to Valparaiso, with young Farragut, then a boy of twelve years, as prize master, accompanied by the former captain of the Barclay as nautical advisor. The latter's reputation, as the possessor of an arbitrary will and a peppery temper, inspired his subordinates with genuine fear.

When our youthful hero expressed a wish to have the main top sail filled away, the hot-tempered old merchant ship master swore that he would shoot the first man who should dare to touch a rope without his orders and went below for his pistols.

The boy prize master succeeded in having the main top sail filled away and notified the defiant old salt not to come on deck with his pistols unless he wanted to go overboard,—and thus the young commander successfully enforced his authority.

After the capture of the Alert, the prisoners of that ship, on the Essex, meditated a mutiny which young Farragut detected and reported to his commander who frustrated the plot by a clever stratagem.

Our boy hero, as prisoner, boarded the British frigate Phoebe in tears, but discovering that one of the English sailors had appropriated his pet pig, the salty stream from Farragut's eyes evaporated in the heat of indignation, and, accepting a challenge to fight the British tar for the possession of the porky prize, the plucky little American thrashed his adversary and recovered the squealing Murphy, (for that was the pig's name,) in a fistc circle formed by the Phoebe's British crew.

Farragut was sent to New York with the rest of the Essex's crew, on board the Essex Jr.

I have briefly rehearsed these incidents, not because they are new, but because they form the initiation of Farragut, before the age of thirteen, into the unparalleled, eventful and brilliantly successful career in the American navy, that drew forth the applause of the civilized world.

The romantic cruise of the Essex not only gave this young sailor experience in every phase of naval life, but it also opened to him broad vistas of his glorious future.

Probably the experience of no naval commander in chief, living today, equals in variety and usefulness, that through which Farragut passed before reaching the age of thirteen years.

But it was the deeds of later life that made him famous.

After returning to New York on the Essex jr he was assigned to the 74 line of battle ship Independence, with Bainbridge; to the Washington under Chauncey; to the Mosquito fleet, under Porter again, 1823-4; to the command of the schooner Ferret at the age of 22 years; in 1825 he was assigned to the Brandywine which conveyed Lafayette home to France after his visit to the United States; then he was assigned to the Brazilian station as executive of the Delaware and afterwards to the command of the Boxer and the Decatur; in 1838 he commanded the Erie at Vera Cruz; during the Mexican war 1847, he commanded the Saratoga; in 1854 he established the navy yard at Mare Island, California; in 1860 he commanded the Brooklyn in the Gulf of Mexico; and later, when our Great Rebellion broke forth, he was living in his adopted home, Norfolk, Va.

Amid the fluctuating opinions of the time there was no wavering doubt in Farragut's mind. With him it was not a choice of states or of flags. He followed the line of duty, and the flag that he had sworn to support, the flag for which he fought in his cherub days.

Severing the social ties that bound him to Norfolk, he moved with his family to Hastings on the Hudson in New York, and in 1862 the government assigned him to the command of the West Gulf Squadron. It was in this capacity that his splendid powers shone forth, and confirmed the evidence of high qualities as a naval commander that might have been observed by an examination of his previous conduct.

His passage by Forts Jackson and St. Philip, in 1862, with his fleet of wooden ships, and the capture of New Orleans; his passage by the batteries of Vicksburg in the same year; the capture of Galveston and Sabine City; his passage by Port Hudson in 1863; the siege of Vicksburg; the siege of Port Hudson; his passage by Forts Morgan and Gaines at the entrance to Mobile Bay, 1864, are among the notable events of the rebellion.

His commission as Rear Admiral was accompanied by the thanks of Congress to himself and the officers and men of his squadron for the gallantry displayed in passing Forts Jackson and St. Philip.

Subsequently, with the view of conferring on him still higher honors, the grade of vice admiral was created on the 20th of December 1864, and on the following day the president named Farragut for the office and the nomination was immediately confirmed by the senate.

A short period of profound peace had enabled the people to more justly estimate the services rendered to his country by our first vice admiral, and congress, on the 25th of July, 1866, created the grade of admiral, and, for the first time in our country bestowed that rank on our already honored naval captain.

Some of us remember how the brilliant naval exploits of Farragut fairly startled our waiting people into paroxysms of applause and the general demand that was made upon the government for the exalted honors it bestowed.

I cannot undertake to rehearse them at length, but they have placed Farragut at the very top of the ladder of fame as a naval fighter.

No better estimate can be formed of public sentiment toward Farragut at the time of these exploits, than by citing the opinion of his contemporary, General Butler, of the volunteer army, who wrote in a note of congratulations on the battle of Mobile: "I need not use the language of compliment where none is needed. It is all said in one word: It was like you. Reminding me so much of the passage of the Mississippi forts, was it wonderful that, boy-like, in my tent all alone, when the rebel journal was brought in and the official telegram read that you and seventeen of your vessels had passed Fort Morgan, I called out,—'Three cheers for Farragut.' They were given with a will that brought in my staff and orderlies, who thought their general had gone crazy, perhaps from a sun stroke, whereas it was only a stroke of good luck, of high daring and noble enterprise, quite as brilliant as anything the sun could do. Let me assure you, Admiral, that those cheers, the first given on the occasion in the loyal north, are not done ringing yet; but every hill-top is resounding with them, as they are caught up from hamlet to hamlet, and city to city, of a grateful nation. I speak no language of hyperbole, and only the words of sincere admiration, when I say I envy you, alone of all men, for the place you have in the hearts of your countrymen."

Farragut has sometimes been called the American Nelson, in consequence of the brilliancy of his achievements, but, except in the respect that both were skillful seamen and naval commanders of great courage, and fertility of resource, the resemblance ends.

A man may possess fighting qualities without possessing the elements of true heroism. It may be well for our young friends to know that the highest heroism partakes of something better and nobler than the mere violence of battle for conquest, for the so-called honor of kings, for the applause of senseless multitudes, for the acquirement of titles and rank, or for the gain of gold.

The cruel gladiator that fights to kill; the brutal pugilist that fights to beat his adversary into insensibility; the savage Indian that fights for scalps; the lawless pirate that fights for plunder, all possess the courage to fight yet they are not heroes.

True heroism partakes of all the virtues that impel men to deeds of self sacrifice to benefit their fellowmen, and the greater the virtues of such men the greater and truer is their heroism.

Courage, added to these, perfects the hero. Heroism may be clothed in the vestments of the priest, or wrapped in the robes of a sister of mercy, or covered by the jacket of a schoolboy, Luther, the preacher, believed in personal devils, but he was not afraid of them—he defied them. Carlisle tells us that Luther, when translating one of his psalms, when worn with sickness and fasting, there rose before him a dreadful image that he took for the evil one to forbid his work; Luther started up with fiend defiance, flung his inkstand at the spectre and it disappeared.

"The devil is aware," he writes, "that this does not proceed out of fear in me. I have seen and defied numerous devils. Duke George of Liepzig, a violent enemy of Luthers, is not equal to one devil. If I had business in Liepzig I would ride into Liepzig though it rained Duke Georges for nine days running."

And Carlisle adds, "what a reservoir of dukes to run into."

This was high heroism, because Luther braved not only visible, but invisible evil, and he believed that he braved the veritable devil in the sacred cause of saving his fellowmen from eternal association with that cloven-footed tempter.

What a typical young hero Mrs. Hemans depicts in Casabianca, the boy sailor, who, charged by his father not to leave his post in battle stood steadfast amid the terrors of his burning ship that was blown to atoms by the explosion of the powder magazine. And "the noblest thing that perished there was that young, faithful heart".

It has been shown that Farragut as a boy on the Essex displayed the same heroic qualities that shone so resplendently in his maturer years.

It was the moral strength of the boy's nature that supported him when prisoner of war, and weeping, he stepped into a ring of English sailors on the deck of the Phœbe and triumphantly fought against odds for his darling pig.

That was heroism because he was impelled by the spirit that braved everything in defence of his conception of right, regardless of consequences.

We learn also, from his instructor, that in his youth he had a "manly way of thinking."

When the rebellion was threatened and an acquaintance warned him that he "could not live in Norfolk", he replied,—"well then I can live somewhere else."

To his wife he said: "I shall stick to the flag. This act of mine may cause years of separation from your family; so you must decide quickly whether you will go north or remain here." The decision was made and he moved with his family to Hastings on the Hudson. This resolve was true heroism.

At this time he was sixty years of age and had already attained the highest rank of our naval service. This action was a sacrifice.

Amid the strongest inducements, that his southern friends could offer him, to renounce his allegiance to his government he followed the dictates of conscience and adopted as his guide and motto Loyalty and Duty to his country and to his God.

He wrote: "God alone decides the contest. He who dies doing his duty to his country, and at peace with his God has played out the drama of life to the best advantage." "I trust in Him as a merciful being; but really in war it seems as if we ought hardly to expect mercy when men are destroying one another upon questions of which He alone is judge. Motive seems to constitute right and wrong." After his victory at New Orleans he wrote: "My dearest wife and boy: I am so agitated that I can scarcely write, and shall only tell you that it has pleased Almighty God to preserve my life through a fire such as the world has scarcely known."

Later he wrote: "Senator McDougal, I hear, has asked for a vote of thanks for me. Blessed is he who expecteth nothing, for he shall not be disappointed. I regret that Bailey did not get the thanks of congress."

In these lines to his wife and son is something pathetic: "In the course of human longevity I have not long to live, and, although it would be most agreeable to spend it with you both it is our place to submit to His will and do our duty."

When in front of Vicksburg he wrote: "I trust that God will smile on our efforts as He has done before. I think more should have been left to my discretion; but I hope for the best, and pray God to protect our poor sailors from harm."

At New Orleans he wrote: "Don't give yourself any uneasiness about any one's trying to undermine me. . . . I fortify myself as well as I can and trust to my honesty for the rest."

How our sympathy reaches backward to this grand, uncomplaining man as we read the following from a letter to his wife, in a boy's handwriting; "Father's eyes have given out; so I will finish this letter. He has been much worried at these things, (referring to certain naval disasters,) but still tries to bear it like a philosopher. He knows he has done all in his power to avert it, with the vessels at his disposal. If the government had only let him take Mobile when he wished to, the Oreto would never have run out."

After passing Port Hudson he wrote; "Would to God that I only knew that our friends on the other ships were well as we are. . . . You know my creed: I never send others in advance when there is a doubt, and being one on whom the country has bestowed its greatest honors I thought I ought to take the risk which belongs to them."

In a letter home from the Red river he wrote: "You say you think I am getting too ambitious. You do me great injustice. . . . I am much more apt to lose than to win honors by what I do. God knows that there is not a more humble individual than myself. I shall go to church to-morrow, and try to return suitable thanks for the many blessings that have been bestowed upon me."

Before Mobile he wrote: "My dearest wife: I write and leave this letter for you. I am going into Mobile Bay in the morning, if God is my leader, as I hope He is, and in Him I place my trust. If He thinks it is the proper place for me to die, I am ready to submit to His will, in that as in all other things."

At the attack on Mobile Farragut's leading ship began to back, obstructing his line and silencing the batteries of the Union ships while the whole of Mobile Point was a living flame.

Farragut hailed the backing ship with "What's the trouble?" "Torpedoes" was the reply.

Like an electric flash Farragut cried, "Blow the torpedoes! Four Bells! Captain Drayton, go ahead! Jouett, full speed!" and the Hartford pushed forward to the head of the line, thus averting failure and defeat and leading on to victory.

The Confederate ram Tennessee was deemed impregnable. She was shot at, rammed and hammered by the Brooklyn, the Lackawanna, the Monongahela, the Kennebec and the Oneida without effect and then she retired under the guns of Fort Morgan.

When Farragut had passed the fort, the ram again left her anchorage and steered directly for the flag ship. The Hartford did not wait for the attack but took the aggressive and following the Lackawanna, struck the Tennessee a fearful blow and delivered a broadside of shot without apparent effect on the monster ram.

In the mean time the Chickasaw, the Winnebago and Manhattan hammered her with heavy shot until, at last, her steering apparatus, smokestack and port shutters were shot away, her commander was wounded and in this condition showed the white flag and surrendered. Farragut mourned over the loss of his brave men.

When the impregnability of the ram is considered, together with the fatal danger of submerged torpedoes that obstructed available passages; and the powerful batteries of the forts that bore upon the Union Fleet, there is good reason to believe that this victory was won against odds equal to any that Nelson overcame, even at Aboukir, which is called his masterpiece, or at Trafalgar on the Victory, when he received his mortal wound.

How unconsciously Farragut reveals his reverent and modest nature when he writes of this unparalleled victory:—"The Almighty has smiled on me once more."

Again he wrote home:—"As I told you on the fifth, it pleased God to grant me one of the hardest earned victories of my life over the rebel ram Tennessee. . . . God bless you and make you thankful for this victory as I am."

As a Naval fighter Farragut's prowess was most conspicuously displayed, as Nelson's was, against seemingly overwhelming odds, and in the most critical moments of battle.

This power to act promptly and effectively in a crisis is pointed out by Rear Admiral Hamilton of the British Navy in his observations on the action of Mobile: "It appears to me that a disastrous defeat was converted into victory by (in so unexpected a contingency,) the quickness of eye and power of rapid decision Farragut possessed, which saw at a glance the only escape from the dilemma the fleet were placed in, and which can only be acquired by a thorough practical knowledge in the management of fleets, and for want of which no amount of theoretical knowledge, however desirable in many respects, can make up in the moment of difficulty."

Invaluable as experience was to Farragut, it was the motive force of faith in God and the faculty to do his work, that enabled him to utilize his experience and made him so formidable in war.

Compare him with our modern Sir Joseph Porters, the men who acquire their nautical skill by sticking fast to their desks, and when the breezes blow, generally go below; such merely ambitious men who travesty every age and beg to adorn themselves with the titles and trappings of rank while they amuse the thoughtless with punch and judy antics.

This type of man has been described by a great authority on heroes, as one who struggles to "force everybody, as it were begging everybody for God's sake to acknowledge him a great man, and set him over the heads of men! Such a creature is among the wretchedest sights seen under the sun. A great man! A poor, morbid, prurient, empty man! Fitter for the ward of a hospital than for a throne among men!

How such mean, tyrannical, selfish men pale into insignificance before the blazing whiteness of Farragut's character!

He did not bid for applause. He did not beg to be set on a pedestal because he paraded in a cocked hat. His heart and mind were absorbed in unselfish thoughts affecting the welfare of his country. He was content with the operations of his own genius in obedience to the dictates of conscience. His self-denial, his singleness of purpose in the accomplishments of his great achievements, raise him to the level of the grand, masterful heroes of history.

For unrivalled nautical skill: daring enterprises; fearless, intrepid action; inexhaustible fertility of resources in battle, Farragut and Nelson bear comparison.

In reverence, serenity, patience, humanity, prudence, sagacity, fidelity; in the intricacies of diplomacy and the elements of statesmanship, Farragut's superiority to Nelson must be conceded.

As we read his letters we can imagine that, had Farragut been a priest and stood in Luther's place when the Devil intruded his revolting person to interfere with his work, Farragut, like Luther, would have flung his inkstand at His Satanic Majesty in full faith that the missile would have been guided by an overruling Power straight to some vital spot, as the smooth pebble of David went to the brain of the Philistine of Gath.

So, had Farragut stood as a boy beside Casabianca, he would have perished at his post with the same fidelity that distinguished him on the Essex.

Like Cromwell he entered into battle with sublime trust in an overruling Providence and with a calm but indomitable resolution that carried him forward triumphantly and resistlessly over the most formidable obstacles.

Farragut cheered his men in war with words of pious but sanguine exhortation.

Nelson led his desperate crew, in person, to the battle that made him an Admiral, with the cry, "Westminster Abbey or Victory!"

Farragut's words suggest the spirit of a Christian knight.

Nelson's cry suggests the spirit of a buccaneer.

As a Christian knight Farragut died here in your own city after he had heard the thanks and praises of his countrymen and the kings, emperors and princes of the Old World had done honor to his virtues and those achievements that shed so much lustre on his country's flag.

But though I had the talent of a Boswell to embalm the glory of Farragut in literature I must not detain you.

Who shall do justice to the memory of our rugged sea-king? Who can paint his virtues?

"To guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess."

As we turn from the portrait of Farragut our thoughts will revert not to the blue and gold that adorned his form, but to the man within, to the spirit of good and patriotism that was his crowning glory. We love the man for what he was.

"For others shape the marble form,
The molten image cast;
But paint him in the battle storm,
Lashed to his flag-ship's mast.

Now then your broadsides shipmates all,
With grape well loaded down!
May garlands filled with sunshine fall
To gird his silvered crown!
I give the name that fits him best—
Ay, better than his own—
The sea-king of the sovereign west
Who made his mast a throne."

Immediately after the conclusion of Comrade Smith's address, Commander Curtis again arose and in behalf of Storer Post made the following Address of Presentation.

Ladies and Gentlemen: The three cardinal principles of the organization known as the Grand Army of the Republic are Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty.

To preserve the memories of a war which has settled for all time the permanency of the union of states and the supremacy of national government; to renew the fraternities of a comradeship cemented in camp, bivouac and battle; to relieve the necessities of distressed soldiers and sailors and the widows and orphans of those who yielded up their lives on the altar of their country; to obey the laws of the land; to inculcate lessons of loyalty and patriotism in the generations to come after us, that equal rights and national unity shall forever be maintained, are the objects of our association.

The crowning principle is Loyalty.

It is for this that on each recurring springtime the survivors of that once vast army, in every village and hamlet of our country, strew the graves of the patriot dead with the choicest of earth's flowers; for this, above their countless mounds, in sunshine and storm, is kept waving the starry emblem of the nation, rescued and restored by loyalty; for this, on hillside and plain, throughout the length and breadth of our fair land, rise memorials in bronze, granite and marble, object lessons of loyalty for all coming time.

Gentlemen:—It is for the perpetuation of this principle that Storer Post has presented to every school building in our city, the beautiful flag of our country, with the hope that the daily sight of its star-embazoned folds may incite in the youthful beholder, patriotic ardor, a desire to learn the story of the sacrifice of life, limb, and treasure to preserve it, and a devotion to maintain the principles for which it stands. And if you will pardon me, it is for this that Storer Post has long hoped and still hopes, that the collection of valuable war pictures and portraits which adorn the walls of Grand Army hall, and the many historic relics being constantly gathered by our organization, and of which this grand old city is so rich in store, may some day, while we are yet on this side of the eternal camping ground, be gathered into a memorial hall where forever they shall tell the story of our country's rise and progress more eloquently than tongue or pen.

For this, Gentlemen of the City Government, we memorialized your predecessors to designate the new school structures by the names of those illustrious patriots of different eras, of whose distinguished lives Comrades Foster and Smith have so eloquently spoken.

That our petition was speedily, heartily, and unanimously granted is a matter of glorious record, of pride to our citizens and extreme gratification to Storer Post; and to show the appreciation of my comrades, I will call upon Comrade Charles H. Besselievre, Adjutant of the Post, to read extracts from the records of the meetings of Oct. 1, 15, and Nov. 19, 1890.

I have the pleasure of introducing to you Comrade Charles H. Besselievre, Adjutant of Storer Post.

Adjutant Besselievre's Remarks.

Adjutant Besselievre, then stepped forward and read the official extracts of the Post concerning the portraits, as follows:

"At a regular meeting of Storer Post, held on the evening of Oct. 1, 1890, the following resolutions, offered by Comrade Joseph Foster, were unanimously adopted:

RESOLVED. That Storer Post, No. 1, Department of New Hampshire, Grand Army of the Republic, gratefully acknowledges the courtesy of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Portsmouth in adopting the names of our Portsmouth signer of the Declaration of Independence, and of America's great Admiral, for the two new school houses, as suggested by the Post; and congratulates the Board upon the general satisfaction and approval with which these names, so closely connected with the history of our country and so full of lessons of manly heroism and patriotic devotion, have been received by our citizens.

RESOLVED. That a copy of the foregoing resolution be officially forwarded to the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, and a copy be furnished the city press.

On Oct. 15, 1890, it was voted that the Post present oil portraits of General William Whipple and Admiral David G. Farragut to the schools bearing their names.

On Nov. 19, 1890, the following resolution of Comrade Joseph Foster was unanimously adopted.

RESOLVED. That the Committee on Entertainment be instructed to arrange with the celebrated portrait painter Mr. U. D. Tenney of Concord, N. H., to paint suitable oil portraits of Gen. William Whipple and Admiral David G. Farragut for the Post; to have the paintings properly framed and suitably marked with name and by whom presented, and date, on a separate tablet or otherwise; and when they are completed to arrange for their public presentation by the Post, through its commander, to the City of Portsmouth; to be hung in the room occupied by the senior class at the Whipple and Farragut schools respectively, as long as the school houses shall stand."

Commander Curtis resumed his address, as follows:

The foremost portrait artist of New England U. D. Tenney painted them and is proud of his work. No expenditure of time, money or skill has been spared to make them the best obtainable. Mr. Tenney could tell you of visits to New York at the expense of the Post to examine the celebrated portraits of Admiral Farragut in the rooms of the Union League, University Club, and that in the possession of the family of Loyal Farragut, son of the Admiral, all of which were unsatisfactory, and how, finally, a small portrait in the possession of the government, from which was engraven the vignette on the new $100. treasury note was found, and judged to be the best likeness, by those most familiar with the Admiral in his later years, in existence. From this picture the artist obtained the foundation for the splendid portrait before you.

The color of hair, eyes, clothing and tinting of flesh are pronounced absolutely perfect, by those best qualified to judge.

The portrait of General Whipple is from that in the possession of Alexander H. Ladd, Esq., of this city, by Mr. Tenney, from the original painting by Trumbull, of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, in the possession of Yale College, and is considered by connoisseurs a masterpiece in portrait painting.

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen:—My comrades seek not honor, glory, popular praise or favor in this undertaking. The exuberance and enthusiasm of youth have not prompted their action. It is rather from the calm judgment of men who have seen their country rent and torn and nearly dismembered by treason; who marched into the jaws of death to preserve the heritage transmitted by their fathers, and who know the value of the fruits of that great struggle, and would seek to bestow them as legacies on their children and their children's children. Men die and their deeds are forgotten; but principles live forever. If from this night's action the youth of Portsmouth are incited to a greater degree of loyalty to country and a firmer fidelity to the duties of citizenship, we shall have found ample reward.

And now, Mr. Mayor, in the name of my comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, representing as they do the soldiers and sailors of this city who defended the authority and integrity of the Nation, I present through you, to the City of Portsmouth, for the school buildings bearing their names, these portraits of General William Whipple and Admiral David Glasgow Farragut.

Chairman Berry then arose and in these brief words made

Introduction of the Mayor.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—It now becomes my duty to call upon His Honor the Mayor to accept in behalf of the City, at the hands of Storer Post, and to present to the Board of Instruction, these two beautiful gifts which have been so eloquently bestowed upon us this evening.

It now gives me much pleasure to introduce John J. Laskey, Mayor of Portsmouth.

The Mayor's Response.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, Commander Curtis, officers and comrades:

These portraits, the gift of Storer Post, for which we thank you, I accept in behalf of the city to be placed in the school buildings bearing their honored names.

General Whipple, soldiers know, how he led the army to victory; history tells us so.

Admiral Farragut, sailors know, how he led his fleet to victory wherever boats could go. No braver man on land or sea can any nation show.

Gentlemen of the Board of Instruction, by request of Storer Post their gift now the property of the city I leave with you.

The brevity of His Honor's address was personified terseness, and happily expressed the sentiment of the community in receiving such elegant tributes to patriotism and heroism.

His presentation in turn to the district committees of the Board of Instruction was equally brief and felicitous, and generously recognized by the audience.

Acceptance by the Schools.

Rev. Henry E. Hovey was then introduced, and in behalf of the Whipple school received the portrait which is to occupy a commanding position therein. His remarks were as follows:

Your Honor the Mayor, Gentlemen of the City Government, Children, Gentlemen of Storer Post, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is the very agreeable duty placed upon me by the chairman and members of the committee in charge, to speak in behalf of the Board of Instruction and accept, in their name, for the Whipple school, this splendid portrait of the great and good man for whom the school is named.

The hour is late and I have observed that the "sandman" is beginning to sprinkle a little of his sand in some of these bright eyes here before me, and moreover so much has been said and so well said that I am sure it will suffice if I should simply add that these children will not and cannot forget this inspiring occasion, and that this portrait hanging upon the walls of their school will be, for generations to come, something to cheer them up to duty, to exhibit to them daily an illustrious example of all that is good and noble, as we have heard from the eloquent words of Paymaster Foster, to quicken them in patriotism, and to fire their hearts with burning zeal and affection for their dear native land. God grant it so. Amen.

Then A. P. Wendell on receiving the portrait for the Farragut school spoke as follows:

MAYOR LASKEY:

Sir:—In receiving from you this valuable portrait of the great hero Farragut which has been presented to the city by Storer Post, I feel a deep interest and responsibility as representative of the Board of Instruction and the district in which this painting is to be located and I promise that the same shall be carefully placed upon the walls of our building where it can be seen by the teachers, scholars and all who enter our school, a constant reminder of the noble patriot whose life and work have been so faithfully and ably treated by Pay Inspector Smith this evening. On account of the lateness of the hour allow me in a few words to thank you very heartily for this elegant gift, which you have entrusted to our keeping.

This closed the delightful exercises of the evening.

Finale.

All honor and glory to the pioneer Post, G. A. R., of New Hampshire for its noble and successful efforts in securing for the two new school houses these elegant portraits. The old comrades have indeed been blest with enduring fires of patriotism. These latest efforts of their zeal in a noble, because educating cause, and finding happy consummation in last night's double bestowal, is a triumph of which they may well feel proud.

Thrilling Story of the War of the Rebellion.

How the Kearsarge Whipped the Alabama.

A Gala Night for Storer Post, G. A. R.

The stage at Music hall last evening presented a picture of rare historical interest to one conversant with the stirring events of the civil war of a quarter century ago, and which would be hard to duplicate. The large gathering in the hall had assembled to enjoy the liberal programme provided by Storer Post, in an entertainment whose proceeds are to be applied to the purchase of portraits of Admiral Farragut and Gen. William Whipple for the school's bearing those names. The object commended itself so thoroughly to everybody that a representative Portsmouth audience nearly filled the house, parquette and gallery.

On the stage right, supported upon an easel was the historic picture of Farragut in the shrouds at Mobile bay, faulty in one detail, the conventional naval frock coat being displayed instead of the flannel blouse which he wore when Capt. Drayton sent Watson up to pass a line around the old hero as a safe guard. On the left was shown an oil painting representing the memorable action between the Kearsarge [built at the Portsmouth navy yard in 1861] and the Alabama off Cherbourg on that glorious Sunday morning [19 June, 1864] so many years ago. These were accessories to the central picture yet to come; but before which was given a pleasant entertainment, prepared by the Post committee, as the skilled cuisinier prefaces the greater work of his hands by appetising approaches.

An overture, or rather a pot pourri of National airs by LaBrie's orchestra gave the keynote, followed by a four part song, effectively given by a chorus of lads and lassies from the Whipple and Farragut schools, directed by George D. Whittier, their teacher. Miss Ethel Green gave a spirited recitation, "Independence Bell," with such effect that a recall was insisted upon, to which she responded with "Sheridan's Ride," earning another reward from the house.

The same happy fate awaited the Mozart Club, which came back at the persistent demand of the audience, to repeat the last verse of Hartel's song "I think of Thee." Mr. George M. Ayers' cornet solo, "Silver Stream Polka," found ready appreciation, and he, too, was forced to return, but only to give the finale of the Polka in response.

The curtain rose upon the second and principal feature of the evening, as the actors in the great war drama, about to be depicted, filed in and took their seats. Between Capt. and Commandant C. C. Carpenter, U. S. N., veteran of the great rebellion, and Capt. Arthur R. Yates, U. S. N., one of the heroes of Mobile Bay with the immortal Farragut, sat the lecturer, Pay Inspector Joseph A. Smith, U. S. N., Paymaster of the Kearsarge. Behind and near these gentlemen sat the following named survivors of the great naval battle, who drank in their comrade's words and lived over again that never-to-be-forgotten day; William Y. Evans, Lyman H. Hartford, Martin Hoyt, True W. Priest, Thomas Salmon, John W. Young [all of Portsmouth, and] Lyman P. Spinney [of Kittery].

Capt. Carpenter in well chosen words introduced his fellow officer, which service Pay Inspector Smith repaid by a preliminary statement that the commandant had been acting as his understudy with a view to lecturing in his, the paymaster's default.

The lecturer read from his notes, which he remarked, in explanation, had been abbreviated somewhat from the original. His matter was rich in phrase and expression, his delivery finished, graceful and eloquent.

The writer failed to catch any mention of Captain James S. Thornton's name [who as Lieutenant Commander was executive officer of the Kearsarge at the time of the fight, Captain John A. Winslow, being in command.] although a position under the gallery may have been the cause. Thornton was a household word in Portsmouth, and his memory here is ever green. An idea of the regard in which he is held might have been gathered from the storm of hands and feet at the mention of the name of the lamented and heroic Commodore Charles W. Pickering [of Portsmouth, first captain of the Kearsarge.]

The lecturer was frequently applauded and he was accorded the most perfect attention. The address fulfilled the highest expectations of the audience and earned for the speaker an added laurel well deserved and freely bestowed. In closing his allusion to a prominent figure in his address was pointed and effective; it was this: "Alabama"—Here we rest.

Of the concluding exercises space forbids mention, with the exception of the "Ballad of New Orleans," a masterly recitation by Miss Alice M. Sides, daughter of Capt. John S. Sides of this city, a widely known war veteran.

The fair speaker gave her subject full justice and was made to endure the penalty her talent provoked; but it happened, unfortunately, that she had looked up only Sheridan's Ride, as being practical and appropriate, and, after bowing her thanks to the resolute audience, retired to consult with Miss Green upon the misfortunes which attend public speakers.

The Post is to be congratulated upon the pronounced success of the occasion, the participants being entitled to the highest consideration for valuable aid to worthy cause. To them THE TIMES begs to express, in addition to the liberal commendation of the great audience, its most distinguished consideration.

Resolutions.

At a meeting of Storer Post, No. 1, G. A. R., on Wednesday evening, Nov. 19 h, 1890, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

RESOLVED. That the thanks of Storer Post No. 1, Department of New Hampshire, Grand Army of the Republic be presented Comrade Charles C. Carpenter, Captain, U. S. Navy, president of the evening; and to Comrade Joseph A. Smith, Pay Inspector, U. S. Navy, orator of the evening, for his eloquent, vivid and most interesting lecture on the cruise of the Kearsarge and her fight with the Alabama, at the entertainment given by the Post at Music hall on the 18th of November, 1890, for the Whipple and Farragut schools' portrait fund; and to the seven veterans of the Kearsarge, William Y. Evans, Lyman H. Hartford, Martin Hoyt, True W. Priest, Thomas Salmon and John W. Young of Portsmouth, and Lyman P. Spinney of Kittery, who honored the Post by accepting seats on the platform on this occasion; to Miss Ethel Green for her fine rendering of "Independence Bell," in tribute to General Whipple; and to Mr. George D. Whitlier and the scholars of the Whipple and Farragut schools, who cheerfully gave their aid to make the entertainment a success.

The thanks and compliments of Storer Post are also presented to Miss Alice M. Sides, daughter of a veteran, for her beautiful and stirring recitation of the "Ballad of New Orleans," in honor of Admiral Farragut, which recalled that glorious victory to many of its survivors among the audience, and deeply touched the hearts of all her hearers as she impressively related the perils of the fight, and spoke the names of naval heroes, whose forms and faces were once well known and are not yet forgotten in Portsmouth, where, in some cases, their relatives and descendants still reside.

The thanks of Storer Post are also tendered to Mr. Pickering and Miss Pierce, principals of the Whipple and Farragut schools for their assistance; to Mr. LaBrie, the orchestra, and the Mozart Glee club, for their zeal on this occasion; and to all, who, by their presence at the entertainment, aided the Post in its purpose of presenting oil portraits of our Portsmouth signer of the Declaration of Independence and of America's great admiral to the school-bearing their names, as daily teachers of patriotism to coming generations of our descendants.

Resolved. That a copy of the foregoing resolution be furnished to the city press.

(Post, 20 November, 1890)

At the same meeting of Storer Post, November 19th, 1890, this resolution, already given on page 20, was unanimously adopted, viz:

RESOLVED. That the Committee on Entertainment be instructed to arrange with the celebrated portrait painter Mr. U. D. Tenney of Concord, N. H., to paint suitable oil portraits of Gen. William Whipple and Admiral David G. Farragut for the Post, to have the paintings properly framed and suitably marked with name and by whom presented, and date, on a separate tablet or otherwise; and when they are completed to arrange for their public presentation by the Post, through its commander, to the City of Portsmouth; to be hung in the room occupied by the senior class at the Whipple and Farragut schools respectively, as long as the school houses shall stand.

James Russell Lowell's Gift.

The following letter was received from James Russell Lowell, of Cambridge, Mass., in reply to a letter from the Entertainment Committee of Storer Post, requesting him to read before the Portsmouth public in aid of the portrait fund for the Whipple and Farragut schools:

ELMWOOD.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 2, 1890.

DEAR SIR:—The state of my health will not permit me to give a reading in Portsmouth, as you request. Had I been able to do so, however, I beg to say that I could not have accepted any remuneration.

I enclose three checks, payable to your order, of twenty dollars each, in aid of your undertaking. One is from my sister, Mrs. Mary Lowell Putnam, one from my niece, Miss Georgina Lowell Putnam, and the other from me. These I beg you to accept in furtherance of your enterprise.

Faithfully yours,

J. R. LOWELL.

JOSEPH FOSTER, Esq.

At a meeting of Storer Post, held on the evening of December 17, 1890, the foregoing letter was read "and the noble action of Mr. Lowell was received with loud demonstrations of applause by the comrades, and the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:"

RESOLVED. That the grateful acknowledgments of Storer Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Hampshire, be presented to James Russell Lowell of Cambridge, Mass., "who is fitly ranked today as the first citizen of our republic, because of what he has done for the mind and soul of America, and because of what he is in himself, above all his works," to his sister, Mrs. Mary Lowell Putnam, and to his niece, Miss Gertrude Lowell Putnam, both of Boston, for their kind gifts of twenty dollars each in aid of our "Whipple and Farragut schools portrait fund," and for their sympathy with the Post, thereby shown, in its efforts to cherish the historical memories of Portsmouth, and to inspire our children and children's children with the love of home and country, by presenting oil portraits of their near kinsman, General William Whipple of Portsmouth, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and of Admiral David G. Farragut, U. S. N., hero of New Orleans and Mobile bay, to the schools recently named in their honor at the suggestion of the Post.

RESOLVED. That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Mr. Lowell, and to the ladies; and that a copy be furnished to the press, as an additional proof of our appreciation of their kindness and good will.

(Post, 18 December, 1890.)

Other Contributions.

The total receipts at the Entertainment held November 18th, 1890, were $278 50 (of which $60 was from tickets sold by scholars of the Whipple school, and $51.75 from tickets sold by scholars of the Farragut school), and the expenses were $96.10, leaving the net receipts $182 40.

In addition to the $60 contributed by Mr. Lowell, his sister, and niece, $20 was presented by a lady of Portsmouth who desired to remain unknown, and $5 by Rev. E. M. O'Callaghan, in token of their sympathy, and good wishes; and these, with other contributions by members of the Post, and the profits of the Entertainment of November 18th, 1890, covered all expenses.

Admiral Farragut's Portrait.

The following letters in relation to the standard chosen for the portrait of Admiral Farragut will be found of interest.

113 EAST 36TH ST.,
NEW YORK, Nov. 28th, 1890.

PAYMASTER JOSEPH FOSTER, U. S. N.,

MY DEAR SIR:—Appreciating the honor which Storer Post desires to confer on my father by presenting his portrait to the Farragut school at Portsmouth, I beg to state that the two most satisfactory oil paintings are to be seen at the Union League Club and University Club of this city. The latter is probably the best. . .

If the artist ever comes to the city I shall be very glad to show him the picture in the University Club, of which I am a member.

I received a pamphlet from some one containing an account of the presentation of the Flags to the schools. It was quite interesting and I was glad to read the handsome compliment paid to my father by one of his old officers.

Very truly yours,

LOYALL FARRAGUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 12th, 1890.

PAYMASTER JOSEPH FOSTER, U. S. N.

MY DEAR SIR:—I saw a new one hundred dollar bill yesterday with the engraving of my father, and I think it is quite good. It seemed to me that it was an improvement on the naval pension checks which make the Admiral very stern in appearance. I hardly think they are from the same die. . .

Very truly yours,

LOYALL FARRAGUT.

COMRADE:—You are requested to be present in full uniform at G. A. R. Hall on Friday evening, November 20th, inst., at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of presenting the Oil Portraits of Gen. Whipple and Admiral Farragut to the Schools bearing their names; presentation to take place in Music Hall.

Per Order,

JOS. R. CURTIS, Commander.
C. H. BESSELEVRE, Adjutant.

General Whipple's Ancestors.

The Whipple Family.

General William Whipple, of Portsmouth, N. H., signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born January 14th, 1730, in Kittery, Me. He was the son of Captain William Whipple, senior, of Kittery, grandson of Major Matthew Whipple* of Ipswich, Mass., great grandson of Captain John Whipple, and great-grand grandson of Elder John Whipple, both also of Ipswich.

* Major Matthew Whipple, of Ipswich, Mass., grandfather of General William Whipple, is stated in the Appendix to "The Presentation of Flags to the Schools of Portsmouth, N. H.," Portsmouth, 1890, page 20, to have been a grandson of Matthew Whipple of Ipswich (brother of Elder John Whipple), through his son John. As both brothers, Matthew and John, had sons John, "these three Johns are grievously confounded by most writers who have noticed them," and following the authority there quoted the mistake occurred. It is now corrected on the authority of a scarce pamphlet, entitled "A brief Genealogy of the Whipple Family," compiled by John H. Boutelle of Woburn, for Oliver M. Whipple, Esq., of Lowell, Mass., Lowell, 1857, where "the earlier generations especially have been traced through, and several important points, hitherto wrongly printed, are now satisfactorily investigated," as stated in the "N. E. H. G. Register," vol. XI, page 360.

In England.

"The Whipple family in this country undoubtedly descended from Matthew Whipple of Bocking, county Essex, England, a clothier. Will of December 19th, 1616, probated January 28th, 1618, mentions son Matthew, son John, daughters Jane, Elizabeth, Mary, Anne [Amce?]. Johane, Amye; 'my sister, wife of Richard Rathbone; Hercules Stephens, grandchildren Hercules and Margaret Arthur, and Henry and Anne Coldham [Caldham]'. The two brothers, Matthew and John, who were settled at Ipswich some time before 1638, were probably the sons mentioned above. They settled at the 'Hamlet,' now the town of Hamilton. John was a deacon or ruling elder of the First Church. He was freeman 1640, and representative for eight years between that and 1653. By first wife he had children—Mary, John, Susanna, Sarah, and probably others."

("N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XLII, pp. 99-100.)

In this connection it is worthy of note that Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, minister at Ipswich from 1638 to 1655, was curate at Bocking from about 1626 to 1631.

Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, born at Haverhill, England, in 1598, "became curate to Dr. Barkham, at Bocking, in Essex," about 1626. "Having served at Bocking four or five years, he was called to Assington, in Suffolk, where he preached five years more. Here his labors were abundantly successful. But seeing that he could not dutifully subscribe 'the Articles of Visitation,' and that a storm of persecution was about to overtake him, he concluded to flee to New England . . . After a long passage he arrived at Boston, in November, 1636, . . . He was invited to settle at Dorchester; but as those who came with him could not be accommodated there, he chose to come with them to Ipswich. Here he was ordained pastor, February 20, 1638." He died "July 3, 1655, aged 57."

("Felt's Ipswich," Cambridge, 1834, pp. 219-221.)

The following full abstract of the will of "Mathewe Whipple the elder of Bocking, Essex," (which is two miles north of Braintree, in the same county), is taken from the "Genealogical Gleanings in England", by Henry F. Waters, in the "N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XLIV, page 389. Mr. Waters says that this will and the will of "John Amies of Bocking, 7 April, 1647, proved 16 April, 1647," giving "the piece of cloth at home unto Mr. Rogers, John Whiple and a jerkin cloth of it to Mr. Norton of Ipswich, N. E."

Gent., 3 September, 1633, proved 18 October, 1633," devising "to my brother Francis Hawkings, my sister Archer and my sister Whipple forty shillings apiece as remembrances of me;" of which abstracts are also there given, "relate undoubtedly to the family of Whipple in Ipswich, Massachusetts, descended from two brothers Matthew and John."

("N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XLIV, p. 389.)

It is said in the Virginia branch of the Whipple family, that a history of the family from the time of William the Conqueror down to the time of Col. John Whipple of Prince Rupert's division of the Cavaliers, who emigrated to Virginia in 1662, can be found in the ancient Library at Birmingham, England, where the Dugdale and Thorpe MSS. are deposited, which manuscripts give a full account of the aristocratic Colonial families, and were collected by G. P. R. James while British consul at Norfolk, Virginia.

This history relates, it is further said, that the Whipple family originated with Henri De V: Hipple, a gentleman of Normandy of the Vale de Suere (or Vale de Suede). For his gallantry he was granted the manorial estates of Wraxall—taking the name of Wraxall. Richard Wraxall—that is, Richard de V: Hipple—was knighted on the battlefield of Agincourt, and given the motto: "Fidele et Brave." Leaving Wraxall on account of persecution, the name of De V: Hipple was resumed, which in the time of Henry VII. (1485-1509), was anglicized into Whipple.

In America.

"We learn that there were three of the name of Whipple who settled early in New England: Matthew and John (born about 1605), brothers, settled in Ipswich, in that part called the Hamlet, since Hamilton [If these two brothers are identical with Matthew and John Whipple, sons of Matthew Whipple of Bocking, England, good reasons for believing which have been given, both were doubtless born earlier than 1605; Matthew must have been of age in 1616 when appointed executor of his father's will, and was therefore probably born several years before 1595. Matthew died September 8, 1647, and John died June 30, 1669, ages not known.] The other, named David, settled in Rhode Island on a hill called Study Hill [No connection between him and the Ipswich family has been traced]"

"Matthew Whipple settled early in Ipswich Hamlet: (Land was granted to him in 1638. His house was sold July 10, 1647, to John Annable, tailor.—J. B. Felt.) His will, dated 3m. 7d., 1645 [of which an abstract is printed in the "Antiquarian Papers," Ipswich, Mass., April 1884], is on record at the Register of Deeds for the county of Essex, in which he mentions his eldest son, John, sons Matthew and Joseph, and daughters [Mary—see abstract] Anna and Elizabeth. He leaves to his eldest, John, one half of his estate; the other half to his two youngest sons Matthew and Joseph. He left wife Rose (Chute?), whom he married (Nov. 13, 1646?). His children were by a former wife. He died September 8, 1647."

Elder John Whipple.

Elder John Whipple, great great grandfather of General William Whipple, "resided at the Hamlet [part of Ipswich, now Hamilton, Mass.], and was Deacon and Ruling Elder of the First Church. [Edward Johnson (in his "Wonder-Working Providence," London, 1654, reprinted in "Massachusetts Historical Collections," 2d series) "mentions Mr. Whipple" (Vol. IV., page 25), "as 'one, whose godly sincerity is much approved.'"—"Felt's Ipswich," page 159.] He and his brother Matthew sustained various offices of trust. He was born about 1605 [or earlier—see above]"

He "had a large grant of land in 1639, freeman in 1640" [He "was Deputy to the General Court 1640-1642, 1646 1650-1653," "Felts Ipswich," page 159]

"He had two wives, [Sarah (wife of John Whipple) who died June 14, 1658, stated in "Felts Ipswich" page 159, to have been the wife of Elder John Whipple, was probably the wife of his nephew John,— "Whipple Genealogy," pp. 4, 13] his children were by his first wife. His will is dated May 10, 1669; his son Cornet John, Executor."

"He left a widow Jennett (first husband Thomas Dickinson) whose will is on record at the Probate Office, Suffolk, Vol. 11, page 85, and children John, Susannah, relict of Lionel Worth, Mary Stone, Sarah Goodhue, and Anthony Potter, son-in-law." ["Savage" adds a daughter "Elizabeth", who, he says "married perhaps Anthony Potter."]

Sarah, just mentioned, "married Joseph Goodhue [of Ipswich], July, 1661, died July 23, 1681". [She was born in 1641, the youngest daughter of Elder John Whipple, and her well known pious valedictory to her husband and children, first printed at Cambridge, New England, in 1681, was reprinted at Salem, Mass., in 1770, and again in the "Antiquarian Papers," Ipswich, Mass., December, 1880, and January, 1881.]

Elder John Whipple "died June 30 1669, and his Inventory is on file at the Probate office, Essex, presented by his son Cornet John Whipple (afterwards Capt. John Whipple) September 28, 1669".

("Whipple Genealogy," pp 3-4, 29-30.)

Captain John Whipple.

"John Whipple (Captain), [John] born about 1626; died August 10, 1683; son of Elder John Whipple. He was sometimes called Junior, Cornet, and Captain." [He was freeman 1668, and "Representative 1674, 1679—1683".— "Savage."] "He was appointed a Captain of a troop to march for Marlborough against the enemy, &c. His prospects for honor and usefulness were promising at the time of his death." "His estate was valued at £3000." He married first Martha Reyner (a daughter of Humphrey Reyner) born —, died February 24, 1679; second, Elizabeth Paine, June 28, 1680."

Joseph, born March 6, 1664, died in infancy August 1665. Joseph (2d) born June 8, 1666. Susan, married — Lane [Susanna, married John Lane, March 20, 1680,— "Savage"]. Sarah, born September 2, 1671, married Francis Wainwright March 12, 1686, died March 16, 1709, aged 38. Anna, born October 29, 1675 (?).

("Whipple Genealogy," p. 30.)

"Captain John Whipple, son of 'Elder' John, born in Essex, England, about 1626, . . . was appointed Cornet of the Ipswich Troop before 1675 [1663—"N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XXXVII, page 285] and Captain in 1683 in place of Capt. John Appleton. He was Lieutenant in Capt. Paige's Troop at Mount Hope, June, 1675 [King Philip's War], and was appointed Captain of a troop raised for service under Major Savage in March, 1676 [in the same war]; was with the army in the unsuccessful manœuvring of that campaign."

("N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XLII, p. 140.)

Major Matthew Whipple.

"Matthew Whipple, [John, John—see page 27] of the Hamlet, died January 28, 1739, in his eightieth year. He married [second—see below] Martha, daughter of John, and grand daughter of General Denison. [Major General Daniel Denison of Ipswich, born in England in 1612, who died Sept. 20, 1682, in Ipswich, was for eleven years Major General of the colony, and very prominent in colonial affairs.—See "Denison Memorial," Ipswich, Mass., 1882.] She died Sept. 12, 1728, in her sixtieth year. Mr. Whipple left children, Matthew, John, William, who was of Kittery in 1730, where his son William was born, who was a signer of the Declaration of Independence and Brigadier General at the capture of Burgoyne;—Joseph, settled in the ministry at Hampton Falls, and Martha Hartshorne. He held several offices in the town, was Justice of the Sessions Court, Representative in 1718, 1719, 1729. He was an energetic, useful and respected townsman.—"Felt's Ipswich," Cambridge, 1834, pp. 176-177.)

("Presentation of Flags," p. 20.)

"Matthew Whipple (Major) born 1658, died, aged 80, January 28, 1738-9 [above mentioned], son of Captain John, and grandson of Elder John, . . . married, first, Joanna Appleton, by whom he had children, Matthew, John, Joanna, Appleton and William. He afterwards married, June 10, 1697, Martha Ringe (or Rindge?) [Martha (Denison) Thing] born —, died, aged 60, Sept. 12, 1728, . . . [and had children] Joseph, Martha and Nathaniel."

"His will is at the Probate Office, Essex County, in which he mentions sons, Matthew, Appleton, John, Joseph, William, and his dwelling house [and] malt house. Item. Mary Bradley, house keeper. Item. Mulatto servant, Nicholas Freeman, &c., Dec. 2, 1738."

("Whipple Genealogy," pp. 31-32.)

Joanna (Appleton) Whipple, grandmother of General William Whipple, was the daughter of Samuel Appleton, (2d), son of Samuel Appleton, (1st), both of Ipswich.

Samuel Appleton (1st) was the son of Thomas Appleton, of Little Wadingfield, county Suffolk, England. ("Savage.")

"Samuel Appleton, [1st] died June, 1670. He was born at Little Wadingfield, England, 1586; came to Ipswich 1625, was admitted freeman 1636, and was Deputy to the General Court 1637. He left children, John, [a prominent citizen of Ipswich, born 1622, died 1700, (or 4 November, 1699, according to "Savage"), Representative to General Court for sixteen years between 1656 and 1678, whose opposition to the illegal taxation of Governor Andros in 1687, for which "he was imprisoned fined and disfranchised," is well known—see "Felt," page 171]. Samuel, Sarah, wife of the Rev. Samuel Philips of Rowley, Judith, wife of Samuel, son of the Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, and Martha, wife of Richard Jacobs."

"Samuel Appleton [2nd], son of Samuel Appleton [1st], died August 16, 1692. He was born at Wadingfield in 1625, and probably came to Ipswich when his father did. He married Hannah, daughter of William Paine, and for his second wife, Mary, daughter of John Oliver of Newbury, December, 2, 1656, she being born June 7, 1640, and died June 9, 1712. [He was born in 1624, married, second, 8 December, 1656, Mary Oliver, the mother of Joanna (Appleton) Whipple, and died 15 May, 1696.—"Savage."] He left children, Samuel, John, Judith Wolcott, Joanna Whipple, and Oliver. He had lost a daughter Downs, whose only child was Isaac. He held several offices in the town, was Representative to the General Court in 1669, 1671, 1673 1675-1677, 1679, 1680. He was of the Governor's Council in 1681-1686 1689-1692; Justice of the Quarterly and General Sessions Courts, and of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, April 11, 1692, for the trial of persons charged with witchcraft. ["Resolute in support of the liberty of the people against the unlawful taxation in 1687, he was imprisoned by Andros, and hardly released. See "Hutchinson," I, 365."—"Savage."] He was concerned in the iron-works at Lynn in 1645, though Ipswich became his permanent residence.—1675, Oct. 23. The Assistants write him to keep five hundred men for the defence of the frontier towns at the west against the Indians. In this quarter he was several times successful in repelling the enemy and preventing several places from being consumed. When Hatfield was attacked, October 19, a bullet passed through his hair, and a serjeant was mortally wounded by his side. December 9. He served as Major in an expedition against the Narragansetts, and had the command of five hundred men in the great battle. His skill and bravery and exertions did much towards securing victory. While in this campaign, he had his tent burnt, and his men lost their clothes and arms—His diversified and complicated duties, as a warrior, legislator, and judge, he ably and faithfully discharged."

("Felt's History of Ipswich," Cambridge, Mass., 1834, pp. 159-160 and 169.)

"The first husband of Martha Denison [above mentioned] was Thomas Wiggin [son of Andrew and Anne (Bradstreet) Wiggin], who was born 5 March, 1662. He was a grandson of Gov. Thomas Wiggin, also of Gov. Simon Bradstreet. Mr. Wiggin died in early manhood, leaving but one child, Hannah."

Widow Martha (Denison) Wiggin then became the second wife of Capt. Jonathan Thing, of Exeter [N. H.]. They were married July, 1693, and had but one child, Daniel Thing, born 12 May, 1694. Capt. Jonathan Thing died 30 [or 31] October, 1694; his first wife was Mary, daughter of Counsellor John Gilman, son of Edward Gilman, sen'r. He had two other sons, Edward and Moses.

Her third husband was Matthew Whipple, of Ipswich."

Captain William Whipple, Senior.

William Whipple, senior (Matthew, John, John), born 23 February, 1695-6, the father of General William Whipple, "was a native of Ipswich, in Massachusetts, and was bred a maltster. Having removed to Kittery in Maine, he followed the sea, during several years. He married [14 May, 1722—"N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. X, page 48] Mary [born 26 December, 1698—"Presentation of Flags," page 21] the eldest daughter of Robert Cutt [2d]

Her grandfather, Robert Cutt [1st] was a brother of John Cutt, the President of New Hampshire, and emigrated from England to the West Indies, where he married a wealthy widow, who died soon after. He then married Mary Hoet [Mary Hoel—"Presentation of Flags," page 20], an English lady, who had removed to the West Indies. Soon after their marriage they came to Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and subsequently removed to Kittery, where Mr. Cutt established a ship-yard, and carried on the business of ship-building very extensively. They had two sons, Richard and Robert, and four daughters. [The daughters were Mary, Bridget, Sarah and Elizabeth. Richard was probably the son of Robert Cutt (1st), by his first wife. Sometime subsequent to 1675, the widow of Robert Cutt (1st), married Capt. Francis Champernowne, "the loving nephew" of Sir Fernando Gorges the founder of Maine, and she and her children by Mr. Cutt received by gift or demise the principal part of Capt. Champernowne's estate.—See "Presentation of Flags," pages 20-21 and note page 339, "Historical Papers," C. W. Tuttle, Boston, 1889.]

It is related, in a not wholly reliable traditionary account (see page 34) found among the papers of Col Joseph Whipple, brother of General William Whipple, and printed in the "N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. V. page 246, that Robert Cutt (1st) was a native of Bah, England, and that his father was, the year he died, a member of Parliament. Richard Cutt was returned from Essex, for Cromwell's second parliament, in 1654, but not for that of 1656.]

Robert [Robert Cutt (2d)] married [18 April, 1698, — "Presentation of Flags," page 21] Dorcas Hammond, the daughter of Major Joseph Hammond, whose father, having been an adherent of Oliver Cromwell, left England on the death of the Protector [who died 3 September, 1658], came to this country and settled in Kittery [See page 34]. They had four daughters; Mary, the wife of William Whipple [senior]; Catharine, who married John Moffat, a merchant, who then resided at Kittery, but afterwards removed to Portsmouth; Mehitable, who married John Odiorne, merchant of Portsmouth; and Elizabeth, who married the Rev. Joseph Whipple, the brother of William Whipple [senior], and who settled in the ministry at Hampton Falls.

Mr. Cutt possessed a large estate, and his daughter, Mrs. [William] Whipple [senior], inherited from him a very valuable farm in Kittery, situated on the eastern branch of the Piscataqua river, opposite to the island where the Navy Yard is now established, and within view of the town of Portsmouth. Mr. Whipple now abandoned his nautical pursuits, and resided on this estate, which he held in right of his wife, where he employed himself as a farmer and maltster. Mrs. Whipple was a lady of excellent sense, agreeable manners, and many pleasing accomplishments. [He died 7 August, 1751, aged 56 years. She died 24 February, 1783, aged 84 years.—"Presentation of Flags," page 22] They had five children; William, Robert, Joseph, Mary, and Hannah [Mary, William, Hannah, Robert Cutt, and Joseph].

[1] Mary Whipple, the eldest daughter, married Robert Trait [Traill], Esquire, comptroller of the port of Portsmouth previous to the Revolution. They had three children, Robert, William and Mary: Robert and William went to Europe, where they settled; and Mary married Kieth Spencer [Keith Spence], Esquire, a merchant from Scotland who settled in Portsmouth. Captain Robert T. Spence, their son, holds [1824] a distinguished rank in the Navy of the United States.

[Mary, "born 13 January, 1728" [or perhaps later] married Robert Trail [Traill] of Boston, 1 September, 1748.—"N. E. H. G. Register," Vol X, page 48. She survived her husband and "died 3 October, 1791, aged 61" [as stated on her gravestone]—"Presentation of Flags," page 21.]

[2] [William Whipple, born 14 January, 1730—"Register," X, 48—died 28 November, 1785; the Signer of the Declaration of Independence.]

[3] Hannah Whipple, the youngest daughter, married the Hon. Joshua Brackett, an eminent physician in Portsmouth, who, during the Revolution, was judge of the maritime court of New Hampshire. Her mother, Mary Whipple [Mary (Cutt) Whipple], resided with her after the death of her husband, and died 1783, at the advanced age of eighty-five years [See above].

[Hannah, born 15 February, 1734-5; married Dr. Joshua Brackett, of Portsmouth. 14 April 1760. He was born in Greenland, N H., May, 1733 and died in Portsmouth 17 July, 1801 [1802].—"Register," X, 48. They had no children. She died 24 April, 1805, aged 71.—"Presentation of Flags," page 21.]

[4] Robert [Robert Cutt Whipple] died when he was about nineteen [twenty-five] years of age.

[Robert Cutt, born 6 April, 1736; died 4 May, 1761, aged 25—"Register" X, 48.]

[5.]—Joseph [Whipple] was educated in the counting room of Nathaniel Carter, a merchant of Newburyport, and established himself in business in Portsmouth, in company with his brother: they continued their mercantile connection until a short time previous to the commencement of the revolutionary war. He was afterwards appointed collector of the port of Portsmouth, first by the state of New Hampshire, and after the adoption of the federal constitution, by the President of the United States: he held this office, with a short intermission, until a few months before his death. He died without issue, on the twenty-sixth of February, 1816, in the seventy-eighth year of his age.

[Joseph, born 14 February, 1737-8; married Hannah Billings of Boston, 9 October, 1762. He was collector of the customs in Portsmouth.—"Register," X, 48. Col. Joseph Whipple took part in the early settlement of Coos county, New Hampshire, and was living at Jefferson as early as 1773. He was captured there by the Indians during the Revolution, but escaped.—"McClintock's History of New Hampshire," Boston, 1889, pages 305-307. He afterwards returned to Portsmouth. When "Col. Joseph Whipple was Collector," he "transacted the business in the office adjoining his residence on State street."—"Rambles," I, 227. He "resided in the house then and now standing at the northeast corner of State and Chestnut streets, Portsmouth (No. 79 State St.)" Hannah, wife of Col. Joseph Whipple, died 30 January, 1811, aged 75 years.—"Presentation of Flags," page 21.]

Two interesting letters on public matters from General William Whipple to Hon. Josiah Bartlett (who long served together in Congress), dated Portsmouth, July 12, and September 13, 1778, will be found in the "N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. XXX, pages 317-320.

James Russell Lowell.

His Portsmouth Ancestors.

It is a pleasure to the many admirers of James Russell Lowell in Portsmouth to know that several generations of the maternal ancestors of this most eminent poet, essayist and statesman, whose recent death, 12 August, 1891, in Cambridge, Mass., has been mourned wherever the English language is spoken, resided on the banks of the Piscataqua, and that he, and all of his father's family always had a strong interest in the Portsmouth stock from which they sprung.

That this interest was a reality was shown only a few months since by the kindly and generous gifts of Mr. Lowell, and of his sister and niece, Mrs. and Miss Putnam, in aid of the fund for the oil portraits of General William Whipple and Admiral David G. Farragut, soon to be presented to the Portsmouth schools bearing those names, by Storer Post, No. 1, G. A. R., of this city.

James Russell Lowell, born 22 February, 1819, in Cambridge, Mass., son of Rev. Charles and Harriet (Spence) Lowell, was grandson of Keith and Mary (Traill) Spence of Portsmouth, and great-grandson of Robert and Mary (Whipple) Traill, also of Portsmouth.

Robert Traill, born in the Orkney Islands, was a distinguished merchant of Portsmouth, comptroller of the port until the Revolution, and afterward collector of the Island of Bermuda. He resided in the house then and now standing at the southwest corner of State and Fleet streets (No. 82 State street). Mrs. Traill survived her husband, and died 3 October, 1791, aged 61 years. Their only daughter, Mary, married Keith Spence, a merchant from Scotland, who settled in Portsmouth, Purser, U. S. N., 1800-1805, whom she survived, and died 10 January, 1824, aged 69.

Mr. Lowell's great grandmother, Mary (Whipple) Traill, was a daughter of Captain William Whipple, senior, and Mary (Cutt) Whipple. The latter died 24 February, 1783, aged 84, and the ashes of of Mrs. Whipple, Mrs. Traill and Mrs. Spence, three direct ancestors of Mr. Lowell, rest in the North cemetery, Portsmouth, where their stones may be seen on the rising ground near the center of the cemetery close to the stone of their distinguished son, brother and uncle, General William Whipple, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Captain William Whipple, senior, resided in the "Whipple garrison house" in Kittery, Me., previously the home of Robert Cutt (2d), where Harrison J. Philbrick now lives, and died 7 August, 1751, aged 56. Capt Whipple's stone and those of Robert Cutt (2d), who died 24 September, 1735, aged 69, and of Dorcas (Hammond) Cutt, who died 17 November, 1757, aged 83, his wife's father and mother, are yet standing in the cemetery near the Chambernowne Hotel in Kittery, so that a pilgrimage to the graves of these four generations of Mr. Lowell's ancestors may, and doubtless will be often made in the coming years by those residents in, and visitors to our city, who enjoy the writings and rejoice in the fame of this distinguished son of Portsmouth.

Captain William Whipple, senior, (Matthew, John, John,) was born in Ipswich, Mass., whither his great grandfather Elder John Whipple came from Essex, England, in or before 1639 [Corrected—see page 27], and the Whipples were Ipswich people, as related more at length in the biographical notice of General William Whipple, in the appendix to "The Presentation of Flags to the Schools of Portsmouth, N. H., October 9, 1890," Portsmouth, 1890, page 20 [and on pages 27-33 of this pamphlet].

Robert Cutt (24), however, was of this locality, son of Robert Cutt (1st), who was a brother of John Cutt, President of New Hampshire, 1679, who with their brother, Richard Cutt, came to this vicinity previous to 1646 from Wales, as related, with much other information as to the Cutt family, in the "Rambles about Portsmouth" Series I, page 29, and Series II, pages 142-153, and concerning whom further interesting details will be found on pages 20 and 21 of the pamphlet just mentioned.

Robert Traill Spence, appointed midshipman, U S N., 15 May, 1800, who distinguished himself in the attack on Tripoli, 7 August, 1804, as related in "Cooper's Naval History," and who died a captain, 26 September, 1826, was a brother of Mr. Lowell's mother.

Madam Elizabeth (Cutt) Lowell, whose stone stands in the North cemetery near that of General Whipple, was the General's aunt, his mother's sister, and the daughter of Robert (2d) and Dorcas (Hammond) Cutt. She was "born 20 March, 1710" (or perhaps earlier), and married, first, Rev. Joseph Whipple, of Hampton Falls, brother of Captain William Whipple, senior, and second, Rev. John Lowell, of Newburyport, Mass., whom she also survived, and "died 22 September, 1805, aged 97," as stated on her gravestone. She left no descendants.

Rev. John Lowell, minister of Newburyport, Mass., 1726-1767, who died in 1767, aged 63, (a descendant of Percival Lowell, of Bristol, England, who settled in Newbury, Mass., in 1639, and died there in 1665,) was father of Judge John Lowell, 1743-1802, grandfather of Rev. Charles Lowell, 1782-1861, and great grandfather of James Russell Lowell, who by his great grandfather's second marriage with Elizabeth (Cutt) Whipple, was thus again connected with, though not in a second line descended from Robert Cutt (2d), and Dorcas (Hammond) Cutt, of Kittery. . . .

Further information of the maternal ancestors of Mr. Lowell will doubtless be found in the "Cutt's Genealogy" soon to be published by Cecil Hampden Cutts Howard of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The foregoing article, with a few unimportant changes, was also printed in the "Magazine of American History" for October, 1891, Vol. XXVI, pages 312-313.

Additional Notes.

Dorcas (Hammond) Cutt, born in 1674, wife of Robert Cutt (24), was the daughter of Major Joseph Hammond, Kittery, 1680, born 1647, died 24 February 1709-10; who was the son of William Hammond, of Wells, Maine, 1656, or earlier, a man of consequence, grand juror, next year clerk of the writs, and commissioner for small causes until 1679, said to have been born in 1597, died 1702. Major Joseph Hammond was probably the major carried prisoner by the French, 1695, to Canada, as "Hutchinson," Vol II, pages 89 and 180, tells; and counsellor of Massachusetts. He left one son and two daughters.

Catharine, wife of Major Joseph Hammond, was the daughter of Nicholas Frost, born about 1593 at Tiverton, in Devonshire, England, who came to Kittery, probably before 1632, and died 20 July, 1663; she was born in England, coming to America with her father and mother, and married first, about 1655, William Leighton of Kittery, who died September, 1666, and, second, Major Joseph Hammond, whom she outlived; and died 1 August, 1715.

Col Joseph Hammond, brother of Dorcas (Hammond) Cutt, died in Elliot, Maine, 26 January, 1753, aged 75.

("Savage's Genealogical Dictionary," Boston, 1860, Vol. II, pp. 212, 345, and 317-348, and Vol. III, p. 44.

See also "N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. IX, p. 312.)

The information concerning the ancestors of Dorcas (Hammond) Cutt given in the "Rambles about Portsmouth," series II, pages 145-146, is not exact; and the statement in the "N. E. H. G. Register," Vol. V, page 246, that Major Joseph Hammond's father supported, and Nicholas Frost opposed Monmouth's rebellion in 1685, is erroneous, as both emigrated to this country many years before, and the latter died in 1663. William Hammond was probably an adherent of Oliver Cromwell as stated on page 32, but Nicholas Frost left England long before the uprising against Charles the 1st, who was executed 30 January, 1649, and therefore could hardly be considered as having been one of his adherents as stated in the "Rambles."

Mr. Lowell's Maternal Ancestors.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE CRITIC:—James Russell Lowell and the Rev. Robert T. S. Lowell were not grandsons of Robert Traill Spence, an officer of the Navy, as stated in . . . "Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography" (Vol. IV., page 43) in its notice of the Rev. Charles Lowell; but were Capt. Spence's nephews, the children of his sister Harriet (Spence) Lowell.

Capt. Robert Traill Spence, U. S. N., was appointed a Midshipman 15 May, 1800, Lieutenant 17 February, 1807, Commander 24 July, 1813, Captain 28 February, 1815, and died, 26 September, 1826—aged 38 years. He distinguished himself as a Midshipman during the attack on Tripoli, 7 August 1804, finishing the loading and firing the long 26 pounder, of which he was in charge as his vessel sank under the enemy's fire, as related in "Cooper's Naval History." New York, 1866 (Vol. I., page 246). See also "Goldsborough's Naval Chronicle" Washington, 1824 (Vol. I., page 228), and "Lessing's Pictorial Field-Book of the War of 1812" (page 121). He was highly praised by Commodores Preble and Decatur for his gallant conduct. He rose very rapidly in the Navy, and in Commodore R. G. report of September 23, 1814, in relation to the services of the naval forces during the British attack on Baltimore in 1814, was spoken of as a gallant and meritorious officer. (See also "Cooper's History," Vol. II., page 139) He was a man of great information, and a good writer both in prose and poetry. He was in command of the naval establishment at Baltimore for several years before his death and is buried in Loudon Park cemetery near that city.

Capt. Spence's father (Mr. Lowell's grandfather), Keith Spence of Portsmouth, N. H., Purser, U. S. N., 1800–05, 'a gentleman justly held in high estimation for his probity, intelligence, and nice sense of honor', 'was the bosom friend and mentor of Decatur' ("Goldsborough's Chronicle," Vol. I., page 228) He was Purser of the frigate Philadelphia, when that vessel was captured by the Tripolitans, 31 October, 1803 ("Cooper," Vol. I., page 225), and was a prisoner in Tripoli during the attack of 7 August 1804, in which his son distinguished himself, as already mentioned. He died suddenly at New Orleans, and was buried there.

The Hon. Carroll Spence of Baltimore, Maryland, appointed Minister to Turkey by President Pierce, and who negotiated the first treaty with Persia, is a son of Capt. Spence; and the late Commodore Charles Whipple Pickering, U. S. N., of Portsmouth, N. H. [son of Isaac and Louisa Josepha Whipple (Spence) Pickering], was his nephew; both cousins of J. R. and R. T. S. Lowell. . . .

In the study of heredity, the female line is often, as here, a mine of wealth.

His Paternal Ancestors.

James Russell Lowell "was of the eighth generation [of the Lowells] in this country . . . The Rev. John Lowell [of Newburyport, Mass.], James Russell Lowell's great grandfather," [already mentioned on page 34] being the son "of Ebenezer Lowell of Boston, shoemaker, and grandson of John Lowell of Boston, a cooper. The last named John of Boston was the son of of John Lowell of Newbury, and grandson of Percival Lowell, . . . who came from Bristol [England] to Newbury in 1639."

(F. L. GAY, of Brookline, Mass., The Critic, New York, 29 August, 1891.)

The Commemoration Ode.

"All will now admit James Russell Lowell to have been the author of the finest single poem yet produced in this country, the 'Commemoration Ode'."

(The Critic, New York, 22 August, 1891.)

In the study of Mr. Lowell's character and works, it is worthy of remembrance that Professor Charles Eliot Norton, of Cambridge, Mass., James Russell Lowell's literary executor, says, that "many of the most striking traits of Mr. Lowell's character and genius came to him from his mother's side."
